Don't you see a need in that wife for whom you promised at the altar to provide? Don't you see a need in those kiddies towards whom you've a duty that doesn't end with your life?

Doubtless you are planning great things for them—if all goes well. But that's the weak spot. What if things go wrong? Suppose you die before your plans for their welfare are completed! What then?

The solution is an Imperial Life Policy—payable at your death either in one sum or in guaranteed monthly payments.

A MEAGRE ALLOWANCE.

Saskatchewan's new liquor law apparently has been designed for the benefit of the moderate drinker ,the man whose proud boast is that he "can take it or leave it alone."

The Government of the Western Province, demonstrating its own idea of Government control, has decided to put a check upon persons whose trust is beyond the ordinary.

Therefore, it is decreed that for personal use a purchase by any one individual in one day is limited to one quart of liquor, two gallons of wine and four gallons of beer.

A moderate imbiber exercising self-control will not suffer, but the other kind will be faced with the dread thought that after the legal supply of liquid refreshment is exhausted it will be necessary to wait until the next morning to secure a new allotment.

It is true, as the St. Catharines Standard puts it, that Saskatchewan is a Province of great distances, and, alas! great thirst.

POLLING HOURS.

The suggestion is being advanced by a number of Ontario newspapers that there would be a larger vote polled at civic elections if the polling booths were kept open later in the evening.

The record of polling on New Year's Day here, however, does not seem to indicate that providing a better opportunity for voting necessarily results in a larger expression of public opinion.

As a matter of fact, St. Catharines tried the experiment last week.

The polls were kept open until 7 o'clock in the evening.

In spite of that fact and that there was a mayoralty contest, a keen fight for aldermanic honours and five bylaws to be voted on, less than 40 per cent. of the qualified electors used their franchise.

There was no improvement over other years, and the plan had the disadvantage of delaying the announcement of the result of the polls to a much later hour than usual, to the annoyance of those electors who did take some interest in the polling.

It is apparent that the trouble is deep-seated.

Citizens really interested in their city's welfare —and, incidentally, their own—would not be kept away from the polls by ordinary difficulties.

If they realized how much they owed it to themselves and to the community to take a part in the selection of the civic government they would easily find the few minutes time necessary for marking a ballot.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS.

It is significant that, although money bylaws as a whole fared badly in the various municipal elections held last week, that the ratepayers of Hamilton endorsed the spending of $25,000 on supervised playgrounds.

The carrying of this measure under present conditions shows how different in the public conception of supervised playgrounds from the opinion held a few years ago.

It is not very long since such playgrounds were denounced as a fad, and middle-aged citizens pointed out that there had been nothing of that kind when they were young.

Nowadays, however, the public has grown to understand and appreciate the value of supervised playgrounds as a community asset, and the $25,000 bylaw carried in Hamilton is a demonstration of the new attitude.

In large centres where the only recreation grounds in many districts are comprised of back yards and the public streets, it is now realized that playgrounds under the direction of men and women who know how to handle children are not a luxury, but a necessity.

The street was never a safe playground—and today with the ever-present menace of the motor car is a death-trap to youngsters.

The playground is the only satisfactory solution of the problem that has been discovered.

It turns the gang spirit that is in ever red-blooded boy into the proper channels, it keeps children out of dangerous places, it develops their bodies and it builds up their characters at the same time.

Hamilton's $25,000 investment will pay many a dividend.

SCANDAL IN KIPLINGISTAN.

Current opinions on Oriental guile and Pathan courage, largely based on the writings of the man who discovered that East is East and West is West, are badly shaken by the revelation of the identity of London's "Mr. A," says the New York Times. He is the son and heir of the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, which is the northermost of the native States of British India and in the heart of Kipling Land. On the east the frontiers of Kashmir approach the Pathan region of Khyber Pass and Chitral, where Mulvaney, Ortheris and Learoyd served their apprenticeship. To the north lie the Pamirs where the Russian Bear walked like a man. In this region Strickland Sahib played for many years the Great Game in behalf of the Widow of Windsor against the menace from Herat and Bokhara. Somewhere in the neighborhood wandered Kim and his holy Lama, and down one of these mountain slopes came the landslide that immolated the Tibetan saint. Into the region a bit to the northeast, Kafiris tan, disappeared the heroic Brother Daniel Dravot and his associate blackguard Brother Peachey Carnehan, drawn by reports that there would be found white people to be drilled and ruled and any man who would be king.

Kipling's Great Game is not at all reflected in the sordid little game of boudoir and blackmail of which a Rajput Prince of Kashmir was the stupid and frightened victim. Little suggestion in Justice Darling's court of the two dominant traits of the population of Kiplingistan, a savage courage and an unfathomable subtlety. Like Fuzzy-Wuzzy of the Sudan, the "Pathan" and his neighbors were all 'ot sand an' ginger when alive and generally shammin' when dead. In the London case East met West and made a very poor show of things, judging by the primitive mountain standards. The reason for quiet submission to a huge swindle may have been in part the fear of what effect the story might produce among the Himalayan plateaus. It would be interesting to have the opinion of Kim's friend, Mahbub Ali, or of Strickland himself, on the ease with which a grimy little band of English racetrack touts and billiard sharps succeeded in putting the pay into Pathan and taking the cash out of Kashmir.

THE ERA OF HENRY FORD.

Twenty-five years ago Henry Ford was an unknown mechanic experimenting in a back shed with a contrivance to abolish the horse on the highway. In the succeeding quarter of a century he has to date made this record:

First; taken leadership in motor transportation with a total production of nearly 11,000,000 cars, giving the world the cheapest machinery per horsepower and the cheapest transportation machinery ever known.

Second; entered the high-class motor field, taking up the work of the Lelands and steadily perfecting the Lincoln car.

Third; to further displace the horse he has entered the farm tractor field on the same principles as with the Ford motor car—the largest output at the lowest possible price. And he is today the largest maker of farm tractors, with more than half the world output.

Fourth; he has entered the railroad field, reorganizing a bankrupt road of 480 miles; has put it on a paying basis and begun its electrification.

Fifth; he has entered the coal-mining industry, investing ten millions in the Pond Creek Coal Mines, producing the highest-grade bituminous coal.

Sixth; he has opened lumber camps in Michigan, and is economically cutting his own timber on an improved scientific basis where one lumberman now produces five times as much as before. Underbrush is cleaned up, by-products are utilized, forest fires eliminated and reforestation follows cutting.

Seventh; he is mining and shipping ore from his own iron mines.

Eighth; he has entered the iron and steel business with big blast furnaces on the River Rouge, under all the latest scientific improvements for melting ore and producing iron and steel and utilizing the by-products.

Ninth; he has entered the shipping business with his own vessels that take his products to various United States ports and to South America and Europe.

These industries he has entered not for the purpose of profit, but for the purpose of insuring a steady supply and keeping down costs.

Tenth; he is revolutionizing farming not only by the motor and the tractor and scientific research but by pioneering in the way of turning released farm labor in the unproductive season over to small factory units operated by developed electric power from harnessed home streams.

Eleventh; he is growing flax on a large scale, aiming to supplant the use of cotton in automobile linings and tires.

Twelfth; he has built for Detroit one of the largest modern hospitals in the world, covering an area of 16 city blocks, and with an engineering genius and an operating plan that has astonished the medical profession.

Thirteenth; he is putting millions into Wayside Inns to teach history to the youth of our land by practical illustration; the old family kitchen restored and set up in conjunction with the new family fireside enjoying the conveniences of electric light, heat and power developed from formerly unused natural resources.

Fourteenth; he has entered the field of publishing and editing and the moulding of public opinion, with a weekly paper that has now 750,000 circulation, does not accept advertising and seeks to present the neglected truth.

Here is a record of fourteen points of achievement that leaves Henry Ford still active in the prime of physical and mental vigor at 60 years of age, and seeking new fields of conquest in the domain of human endeavor—not for personal glory or profit, but for the fellowship of human service.

He has still many scientific surveys, investigations and experiments under way and it is difficult now to set any limits to his activities and achievements.

Some of the greatest discoveries and inventions have been made by men of from seventy to ninety-nine years of age. And Mr. Ford is making a survey of human sustenance with a view of prolonging human life and happiness.

Ford is not only relatively young, but continually developing mentally. His head was not turned by political flattery. He was able to find a better man for President and support him handsomely. He denies the fundamentals of economics until he understands them. But he is learning. He sees the bad side of the Jew. He will yet learn to see another side and get a better appraisement. At no point has Henry Ford stood still.

He has successfully advanced the standard of wages for physical labor to a point never before achieved and with reduction in the cost of output. On these wages he maintains his Ford car befor the public at below its pre-war price and plans to turn out next year more than 2,000,000. He has promoted savings, profit-sharing, art in architecture and the surrounding landscape.

Watt and Stephenson with steam, Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln with democracy, Morse with the telegraph, Edison with electricity, Bell with his telephone, and Rockefeller with research and oil, mark eras in human history and material growth. But the era of Ford, the first quarter of the twentieth century, is unmatched by any previous twenty-five years in the world's material progress.—Barron's.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Now that Charlie Chaplin says he does not want any publicity, an announcement from Henry Ford that he doesn't want to sell any more cars is in order.

Belleville defeated daylight saving by 2,458 to 779, while St. Catharines, which has had summer time for a number of years in succession, carried it by a greater majority than ever. Some of the hick towns don't know what they are missing.—St. Catharines Standard.

President Coolidge gets more publicity out of his trip in a Pullman sleeper than he ever did out of one of his speeches.

The Lindsay hanging emphasizes the desirability of centralized executions. It is high time that a change in the system was made.

Sir Adam Beck's private secretary blames liquor for his downfall. His explanation is more convincing than it is original.

Ontario's jail farms will soon be so crowded with bank officials and bootleggers that the ordinary run of offenders will have to be housed in tents.

READING URGED BY PROF. KEYES

Knowledge of Mankind Obtained from Books—Equipment for Social Service.

MARMORA LECTURE

MARMORA, Dec. 8.—A welcome return visit was paid to Marmora Town Hall on Friday last by Prof. D. R. Keyes of Toronto under the auspices of the local University Extension Club. The lecture entitled "Reading and Books for boys and girls" proved to be the last booked for this year. Prior to the lecture, Miss Marion Shannon gave some artistic pianoforte selections. Rev. P. Caiger-Watson acted as chairman. Before commencing his subject, Prof. Keyes remarked that he was the last Professor of Anglo-saxon in this continent today. In speaking to audiences on "Reading," he was merely endulging in a hobby. The subject of books demanded great care. He had consulted friends therefore who made it not a hobby but a matter of business. Toronto like Marmora has a Public Library. It has also nineteen branch libraries.

The young people would be interested to know that in Toronto is the first children's library in the whole of America. One of the first things Prof. Keyes did was to visit this library and to make observations. He saw it crowded with children. He noted that half of the children with whom this library was so popular, were not Canadian born. The young Jews and Jewesses were found to be most keen after books. The Jews have a wonderful keenness for knowledge. They have accepted the truth of the old saying: "Knowledge is power." In the Children's Library, the Professor saw three Jewesses for every single Jew. This was because the girls are more imaginative than boys. Books are largely made up of imagination.

Success in Life.

Digressing for the while, the lecturer remarked that success in life is not the making of money. Success in life is not the getting of things. It is the helping of others through social service. The keyword of our improvement in modern life is social service. The more we read, the better we fitted to render social service. "The more we read," he continued "the better we are able to speak."

In the great Southern republic, they have for the last hundred years paid great attention to public speaking. The Americans owe their facility in speech largely to their Irish infusion but they also are given to much reading. If the United States came into the League of Nations, Britain might perhaps there be surpassed in power and potentiality. Dealing with the importance of historical knowledge, Prof. Keyes told of nine different visits he had made to Germany for the purpose of learning English. He also remarked that his friend Pro. Fields had written an essay in which he asserted that all the best mathematicians of the world were German. This had come from their vast historical knowledge.

Germany got ahead in Higher Criticism in the same way. Coming to the type of books he would recommend for boys and girls to read he would say that an encyclopedia such as: "The Book of Knowledge," would, well serve as a book of general information.

The most interesting of all histories save the study of God, is the history of man. We can learn so much of that history by books without the expense of travel.

Then the walking encyclopedia is a little below par in university circles today. Most philosophers were men who read others' philosophies. We should read for the purpose of learning the history of man. Another good purpose for which we may read is that of amusement.

Reading For Pleasure.

Reading for pleasure is not a bad thing. There is a Latin saying which translated, runs: "It is a sweet and pleasant thing to be able to dissipate yourself now and then." He did not mean to infer that dissipation was good in the sense his friend spoke of dissipation when he said: "A dissipated man is a dizzy pated man." For books of history, there was great choice among which the Bible might be placed first. Some people once specified three books which might be taken to a desert island or to a prison and read with profit. They were the Bible, Shakespeare's Works, and Boswell's Johnson. An excellent modern book might have been included "Windows in the street of the World."

The best book undoubtedly ever written for boys is Robinson Crusoe. Daniel Defoe was up in his sixties as he wrote it. He tried to dissuade boys threby from running away to sea. It is also a psychological nobel.

The demand at present seems to be for the dramatic novel. The lecturer feared that the movie is spoiling the imagination of the young mind. Another wonderful book is "Don Quixate which made its appearance in Spain 420 years ago. It was written to put an end to chivalry. Whilst its author tried to dissipate knight-errantry, he gave it a patent for immortality. There is an other value to the book since it makes one familiar with the ways of Spain.

Pilgrim's Progress.

In 1678 another remarkable book appeared. This was written by a poor tinker and was known as the Pilgrim's Progress. It has proven to be the greatest of allegorical writtings. Then in the eighteenth century we were given Scott's Waverley Novels. Thackerays "Henry Esmond" gave insight into the times of the English revolution.

David Copperfield was the best of Charles Dicken's books. Charles Dickens himself liked it the best, because it was the story of his own life with a little imagination added. Continuing in a general way, Prof. Keyes remarked that five hundred Canadian books had been sent to Wembley Exhibition. Every year 5,000 novels are written in the English language.

Canadian Authors.

Concluding, the lecturer drew attention to the fact that this was the Canadian Book Week. He referred to Miss Marshall Saunders as the author of a book whose sale had reached a million copies, namely: "Beautiful Joe." He also touched upon the works of Mr. Seton Thompson and the late Jack London. Upon request of Mr. F. S. Pearce, at the conclusion of the lecture Pro. Keyes made recommendations for desired additions to the stock of the Marmora Public Library. The National Anthum was sung before the audience dispersed and a hearty clap of hands given to the lecturer.

MADE FURNACE TEST.

Shows Parson's Wife Could Have Crawled In.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 8. — In the back room of a hardware store authorities performed experiments with a woman whose name was withheld, designed to determine whether Mrs. Addie Sheatsley could have ended her own life by crawling into the Lutheran parsonage furnace where her charred remains were found.

The result of the experiment was conclusive evidence that a woman of Mrs. Sheatsley's size easily could have crept through the 14 inch square door into the firebox.

A THOUGHT.

THINGS TO FORGET.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget all the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding and give little thought to the cause which provokes it.

Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which makes you fond of them. Forget all the personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and constant thought of the acts of meanness makes you more familiar with them.

Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out anew with a clean heart to-day, so that you may write upon a clean sheet for sweet memory's sake only those things which are pure and lovely.—Exchange.

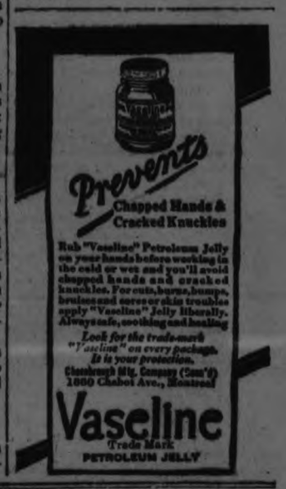
RUSSIA TURNS WET AGAIN.

Soviet Permits Liquors Up to 30 Per Cent. to Halt Illicit Sales.

MOSCOW, Dec. 8.—Soviet Russia on Thursday joined the "wet" countries of Europe when the Council of People's Commissars issued a decree permitting the manufacture and sale of liquors and cognac up to a strength of 30 per cent., which is but 5 per cent. less than the pre-war alcoholic standard.

The new decree, which caused much joy among the innkeepers and liquor advocates throughout Russia, is intended to increase the Government's revenues and stop the illicit sale of alcohol, which has been widespread.



To Merchants and Salesmen

Last minute orders for Holiday trade.

Last year a lot of extra orders were secured for Holiday trade by merchants and manufacturers who telephoned retailers for them, offering immediate shipment.

Now is the time, when your salesmen cannot call on everybody, to supplement their efforts by Long Distance calls.

You will find that buyers who have been too conservative will welcome the chance to replenish stocks or add new items.

Retailers, short of popular sellers, can order additional quantities by Long Distance, for immediate shipment, and sell them while the selling is good.

ORATORY CONTEST FOR CHILDREN OF HASTINGS COUNTY

Silver Cup Presented by Warden at Competition in Belleville—Girls and Boys Speak.

FOR RURAL SCHOOLS.

MARMORA, Dec. 8.— An event of much interest in the County of Hastings, the oratorical contest among the school children, took place in the council chambers at Belleville on Thursday, Dec. 4th.

The contestants were chosen from the best speakers at the rural school fairs of the fall and were as follows::

Sydney Reid—Huntingdon township.
Gordon Vivian— Thurlow township.
Aubrey Hagerman —Tyendenaga township.
Katie Gray— Huntingdon township.
Miss Barlow—Thurlow township.
Kathleen Walsh — Tyendenaga township.
Lulu Sharp—Tyendenaga township.
Irma Andrews—Rawdon.
Jennie Vanewort—Sydney.
Sadie Bird—Madoc.
Reta McCoy—Madoc.
Esther McMillan—Huntingdon.

A large number of parents, teachers and friends as well as the county council were present to listen to the concert.

Eight judges, including the three inspectors of the county, sat around a table in front of the platform.

Warden Rollins said that this year there were two cups offered, one for the boys and one for the girls. He said the reason was that last year two of the judges had thought the boys gave the best addresses while the others who were perhaps softer hearted, decided in favor of one of the girls. This year he was presenting two cups—one for the best boy speaker and one for the best girl.

He then called on Dr. Emmery, of Bancroft, to take the chair. Dr. Emmery after a few remarks, called on the different speakers.

The boys spoke first and their subject was "The Resources of Hastings County." Each presented their subject well. One speaker grouped the townships, beginning in the south and gave the resources of each. The other two, classified the resources as found in agriculture, mining, fishing, lumbering and pleasure-seeking. The boys and girls were mentioned as an important resource of the county.

The subject was presented in such an eloquent and interesting manner that those present were proud to say they belonged to Hastings county.

The Girls' Addresses.

The subject for the girls was "Education—Its Benefits and Cost."

Some of the speakers took education as meaning the educational system, others in the broader sense, that education was an all-round development, physical, moral and intellectual. The excellent material presented as well as the splendid delivery of most of the contestants, made the matter of judging difficult, as the chairman said, while only two would receive a cup, every one deserved congratulations as there was not a poor address given and parents and teachers should be proud of the young speakers of the county. While the judges withdrew to decide the issue, the two beautiful silver cups, donated by Warden Rollins, were examined.

The decision of the judges gave the cups to Gordon Vivian of Thurlow, and Kathleen Walsh, of Tyendenaga.

The gold medals, which were donated by the county council to the pupil in each inspectorate receiving the highest marks at the Entrance examinations were held back to be given by the Governor General, Lord Byng, on Friday afternoon.

These were presented at the armouries on Friday after the address of welcome had been read by the Mayor of Belleville and responded to by Lord Byng.

Those receiving medals were:

For North Hastings— Miss Florence Lansing, Wicklow township.

For Centre Hastings—Ida May Clare, Marmora.

For South Hastings—Jean Reynolds, of Sydney township.

There were also two silver medals given to the pupils under 13, who obtained the highest marks at the Entrance examinations. These were donated to Lillian Naylor and Ralph Elliott, who had equal marks.

A book was presented to Gladys Munnings, who received the highest marks regardless of age.

After the presentations, Lord Byng was presented to a large number of veterans and citizens in the officers reception room of the armouries.

INSULTED?

"Take those dern things off or I'll put you in jail!" That is what Chief of Police J. M. Youngblood of Rock Hill, S. C., told Miss Willie Trammell, a 22-year-old stenographer, when she appeared on the streets in a "blue knicker suit." At least that's the story she told the city council. And she announced that she intended filing a $70,000 suit against the officer on the ground he insulted her.

DEATH FOR INCURABLE PROPOSED IN DENMARK

New Bill Would Allow Physician to End Life of Patient.

COPENHAGEN, Rec. 8.—A bill which would authorize a doctor under certain conditions to take the life of a patient without incurring punishment has been introduced in the Danish Parliament by Minister of Justice Steinck.

According to the old law, the taking of a patient's life at his special request came within the designation of murder or manslaughter. The Steincke bill states: "If action is undertaken in order to release a hopelessly ill person from severe and inevitable sufferings, punishment may be waived under extenuating circumstances."

The bill would also make private detective activities subject to criminal prosecution for "illegally violating the sanctity of private life." There is also a usury clause laying down long sentences for "people exploiting others' needs." For various and similar offenses the bill would have the poor man pay a small fine and the rich man a large one, the common denominator being one day's income. Another clause also provides sentences for those "who by neglect or continued debasing treatment, abuse their conjugal partners."

Mother's Duty Is To Choose Her Daughter's Husband Because the Girls Do Not Know What They Want, Says Woman Who Has Picked Over 5,000 Eligibles

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(United News).— Should a mother pick her daughter's husband and her son's bride. "Yes," says Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, sociologist in an address to high school girls and their mothers here. She has married off her three daughters and three sons that way.

"I am a mother of three daughters and three sons," she said. "I am happy to be able to say I have them all successfully married "When I selected husbands for my three daughters I considered fully 5,000 young men and nearly that number of girls when contemplating whom my sons and daughters should wed. "Every mother's duty is to choose her daughter's husband, because girl don't know what they want. It is up to mothers to see that their daughters get hand-picked husbands and not fallen apples because a fallen apple often has a worm at its heart."

CHURCH BAZAAR AT LAKEFIELD

Under Auspices of Ladies' Aid Society of Presbyterian Church.

WORKING ON RINK

LAKEFIELD, December 8. — The annual bazaar of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid was held on Thursday afternoon in the school room of the church and was well attended, the ladies being (as usual on these occasions) greatly in the majority. There were the usual number of booths at which one could buy all sorts of hand made fancy articles, varying from the daintiest of handkerchiefs to the practical work aprons. Home made candy of various kinds, and cakes, pies, cookies, jars of preserved fruit, etc., were to be seen, and there were also some fine vegetables. Afternoon tea was served at small tables and was as usual very popular. A fish-pond was the mecca for small shoppers The "Table of Remembrance" was a centre of attraction and was a unique feature. Mrs. J. A. Porter and Mrs. H. J. Sutton were in charge and it was mainly owing to these ladies that this feature was introduced and carried out. 7,525 SEEK GERMAN PARLIAMENT SEATS

Total of Fifty-one Political Parties Represented in Election on Sunday.

(By Karl H. Von Wiegand.)

BERLIN, Dec. 8.— No less than 7,525 candidates are trying to land political jobs in the German and Prussian parliaments at the German general elections on Sunday. Of these, 4,638 are trying to get into the German Reichstag and 2,887 into the Prussian diet.

These candidates are divided among twenty-three national parties and twenty-eight other local factions, making a total of fifty-one political parties.

The socialist paper Vorwaerts published in its election fight against the "stab in the back legend," the expert analysis of the real reasons for losing the war as given before the Reichstag investigating committee.

One of the experts, General von Kuhl, declared that the real reason was "the appearance of the Americans in such undreamt of numbers on the western battle front."

Professor Hans Delbrouck, another expert, said "the real guilty one was the leader." It is assumed that Professor Delbrouck refers to General Ludendorff, who was the practical dictator of Germany at the end of the war.

SWARMS OF REFUGEES BURDEN ON BULGARIA

Pour In From Greek Macedonia and Cannot Find Food or Shelter.

SOFIA, Burgaria, Dec. 8.— The numerous refugees who continue to enter Bulgaria from Greek Macedonia constitute a grave moral and financial burden upon this country.

Winter is setting in and it is almost impossible to find shelter for the refugees who wait at the frontiers and suffer from exposure and lack of food.

Refugees Die on Border.

Recently at the border town of Svilingred eight refugees died, and the local authorities are at a loss to know what measure to adopt.

Two league of nations delegates, who are in part resonsible for the welfare and the supervison of the Greek and Bulgarian minorities are now in Athens trying to prevent further emigration during the winter.

Influx Causes Hostility.

Unfortunately, the heavy immigration of Bulgarian refugees entering this country causes Bulgarians to adopt a hostile attitude toward the Greeks living in Bulgaria, and these living in Bulgaria, and these in their turn decide to emigrate.

The root of the trouble probably lies in the fact that Greece is so crowded with refugees from Anatolia that she wants to clear out all Bulgarians and is virtually forcing them to leave.

F. W. PEEK JR., WILL SPEAK IN TORONTO

First Man to Produce Artificial Lightning of 2,000,000 Volts.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Dec. 8.—F. W. Peek, Jr., consulting engineer of the General Electric Company, and the first man in the world to produce artificial lightning of 2,000,000 volts, will give a talk before the Royal Canadian Institute in Toronto on December 13, on "Lightning."

Mr. Peek collaborated with Dr. C. P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, in the early experiments, and since the death of Dr. Steinmetz a year ago has carried on the experiments and investigations with interesting and startling results.

Perhaps the most popular of his findings have been that it is 15 times more darngerous for a person to stand up than to lie down during an electrical storm, and that there is a protected area about a tree or pole at such times. This area is determined from his investigations with artificial lightning in the General Electric Laboratory here, has a radius four times in length of the tree or pole. That is, about a pole 50 feet high, lightning will either hit the police or strike outside a radius 200 feet from the bottom of the pole, which tends to show that a person standing 100 feet from a 50-foot pole during a storm would be safe.

And Women Must Weep

BY GEORGE BRITT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—"To Sliver—whose job was harder than looping the Atlantic, and a damn sight more important. W. W. N."

This inscription, hand-written by William Washburn Nutting in the first copy of his book, "The Track of the Typhoon," is a consoling treasure now to "Sliver" as she awaits news of him and his boat, the "Leiv Eiriksson."

"Sliver" is Mrs. Nutting. Her husband, with Arthur S. Hildebrand, author, John Olaf Todahgl, marine artist, and Theodore Fleischer, Norwegian government scientist, sailed westward from Frederikshaab, Greenland, in a 41-foot "skoite" on Sept 9.

After more than two months, she still is waiting, in spite of an alarm broadcast along the North Atlantic coasts and ship lanes and a special search by the United States cruiser Trenton.

Boats are Nutting's hobby and business. He writes of them and then gets out of his armchair and sails them. He built a boat on an inland lake in Indiana when he was 12 years old.

The present trip from Bergen by way of Iceland and Greenland is the first voyage over that tossing, ice-choked northern path in a boat so small since the vikings sailed their dragon ships to Vinland. It was undertaken to demonstrate the safety of small boats and to inspire moderns to find their play on the challeng- robust sea.

Mrs. Nutting exemplifies one of Kingsley's heroines in his poignant "Three Fishers," who went sailing away to the west, each thinking of the woman who loved him best.

W. W. NUTTING.

More than ten years ago her husband alone sailed his 28-foot boat, the Nereis, to Newfoundland and back. He was away four and a half months, and she heard only occasionally from him.

In 1921 he sailed the 45-foot Typhoon to the Cowes regatta, and was long overdue on his return across the Atlantic. But never has she had such a hope-straining wait as now.

"If he should never come back, this is just the way he would have wanted to go," she says with a brave look in her tearless blue eyes.

Mrs. W. W. Nutting and the "Leiv Eiriksson," the boat in which her husband and his party are lost in the artic.

MODERN MOTHER HAS BECOME HER DAUGHTER'S CHUM, SAYS CYNTHIA

By Cynthia Grey.

Not so many years ago a woman as old when she was forty.

There was nothing ahead of her ut spectacles, black silk dresses and e rearing of her grand-children.

But this is not so any more!

Whatever may be said for or against the mad, breathless age we ve in, it is the best time for middle-aged women that this world has ever een.

For the middle- aged woman today is not middle aged at all. She is ill young.

She has read the beauty hints as well as the chili-sauce recipes on the woman's page. And she has worked hard to keep her complexion and her slim figure.

What has happened is that the woman of forty has decided to be beautiful, to remain beautiful.

It used to be considered a sin to use cold cream and face powder.. The woman who did was not "nice." ... ...

Providence traced the lines and wrinkles on a woman's face and she didn't lift a finger much less an electric vibrator, to stop them!

Today every neighbourhood has its beauty shop as well as its corner grocery.

It isn't considered wicked any more to look as rosy and pretty and sleek as possible. It isn't even necessary to look your age any more. In fact, its' quite important not to do that very thing!

So that forty finds a woman eager and ready to do the things she could'nt do while she wore a path between the cook-stove and the crib when her family was growing up. And she looks the part!

It's such fun to shop now," a woman friend told me. 'My daughter and I always go together, and we wear about the same kind of hats and dresses. My clothes are just as gay and giddy as hers. And we usually wind up by going to the barber's to have our hair trimmed."

There's your modern mother for you! She's her daughter's chum. And if there are any dangers in the dance palace, mother knows all about them. For she's out learning the Chinese toddle with Dad.

And she's perfectly equipped to show a daughter difference between, she's had the experience of summer.

a real man and the finale-hopper with whom daughter finds herself in love! For she knows both kinds.

Mother working eternally at patch-work quilts and pumpkin pies in the old homestead makes a beautiful picture, but wasn't it awfully hard on Mother— especially when everyone else was out doing interesting things.

It's far more pleasant to think that she's come out of the kitchen and is doing an interesting thing or two herself, isn't it

The woman of forty—or forty-five—is like a November rose. She looks quite as fresh as a June rose, but

ALL VEHICLES NEED A LIGHT

Lightless Vehicles Have Taken an Appalling Toll of Life.

GREATEST MENACE.

At long last, it would seem the lightless vehicle is to be prohibited from using the public highways of this province at night and so, aside from the reckless or otherwise unfit, the greatest menace on the highways between dusk and dawn is to be eliminated. Hon. Geo. S. Henry who fathered the last bill to this end, has now the mandate of Ontario in support of this measure. For a decade and a half he has had the active support of the Ontario Motor League in this humanitarian endeavor for during that time the Motor League has campaigned for the abolition of this all too prolific cause of highway fatalities and casualties.

Editorials on this subject have appeared in many of the newspapers of the province and it is significant that without exception they strongly support the proposal that all vehicles be required by law to carry lights at night.

The following excerpts from newspapers of the province are indicative of public opinion on this vital matter. In a lengthy editorial the Brantford Expositor declared in part:

"The numerous motor accidents that have ocurred on the highways of the province at night on account of the absence of lights on vehicles, have called attention once more to the necessity of a law to compel all vehicles using the public highways during the hours of darkness to carry light, the matter is of such vital interest to the public safety that it is almost inconceivable that the demand for such legislation has been so long disregarded. Experience has shown that it is not sufficient for the speedy motor cars to carry lights. It is very easy in the flickering shadows for the fast cars to run down unlighted horse-drawn vehicles. The marvel is that drivers of horse-drawn vehicles are willing to venture on the roads without lights, thus disregarding their own safety.

"This is a matter that concerns the safety of all those who use the roads at night.

"The demand for this law in Ontario ought to be urgent and insistent until it is placed upon the statutes. The Ontario Motor League deserves all the help and commendation that can be given, in its effort to impress the need of this law upon the Legislature of the province.

"The Peterboro Examiner concludes an editorial on the subject with:

"The Government should not let the next session go by without bringing down the much-to-be desired legislation. The bill is long overdue."

The Owen Sound Sun-Times urges editorially:

"Everything that can possibly be done to make the roads safer for night travel should be done. Even if most are willing to take chances of being spilled into the ditch by a passing car, that has come suddenly upon them in the dark or on a foggy night, they should not be permitted to add to the risks of night travel to save the small expense of providing lights for their horse-drawn vehicles.

"The wardens of counties in Ontario have been in conference with the Provincial Advisory Committee of the Provincial Legislature and it has been agreed to advocate legislation providing that all vehicles using the highways at night shall carry lights. This should not require to be advocated. It is so evidently fair, and indeed necessary, that the Legislature should take it up even if the Government does not introduce a bill. It has been far too long delayed, already.

"There is no argument that can be advanced for requiring autos to carry lights that does not equally apply to all vehicles."

In dealing with the proposal of the Wardens that the light-on-all-vehicles law be initiated on the provincial highways, the Hamilton Spectator declares:

"While the necessity for such illumination is, no doubt, greater on the more frequented highways, it is desirable, when introducing this legislation, to make it of universal application. There should be no discrimination of the kind in contemplation. The vehicle which makes use of the public highways ought to be equipped with proper lights, and the Legislature should promptly pass laws to that effect. Neglect to do this in the past has been responsible for many distressing accidents. There is no excuse for further delay."

The Hamilton Herald editorially remarks:

"Everyone who has travelled on a provincial highway at night knows that safety calls for the carrying of lights on horse drawn vehicles as well as motor vehicles. On a dark night it is often extremely difficult for the driver of a motor car to discern a vehicle ahead, going in the same direction, if it carries no light; and the slower-going vehicle is in danger of being run down.

"Strangely enough, the reason why there is no law making it compulsory to carry lights on horse-drawn vehicles is that public opinion in the rural districts is strongly set against any such regulation. One would suppose that for the sake of their own safety the farmers would favor it; but to carry lights would cost a little extra trouble, hence the objection.

"Objection could probably be removed by the adoption of a simple expedient; Let there be an amendment to the statute law, providing that in the case of a collision between a motor vehicle and a horse drawn vehicle after dark, an action for damages will not lie if the horse drawn vehicle carried no light at the time of the accident

Communists Had Plans Laid For Capture of Turcoing City Hall.

NET IS SPREAD.

PARIS, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—The police to-day were quietly putting the finishing touches on a net they have thrown around all the Communist strongholds in preparation for further thrusts against the "Reds" if these are ordered.

It was announced that all who were found to have participated in a revolutionary movement would be arrested and deported.

The French Communist party is understood to have sent secret instructions to Moscow asking the return of Comrade Suzanne Girod, a charmirng and seductive French woman who occupies a high place in the councils of the third international.

It is also rumored that Henry Gulbeaux, a French Communist under sentence of death for desertion from a mission to Russia, has returned to this country. The authorities have been ordered to locate and arrest him, as they did Jaques Sadoul, a similar deserter, who was taken to Orleans yesterday for trial by the Council of War.

The alleged Communist plans which were nipped in the bud by the Government's swift thrust included the seizing of the City Hall of Turcoing.

Up till Saturday, December 6th, the total unemployed on the bureau's books was 113, while that number has increased slightly to-day.

There are a few in the city applying for charity.

FREQUENTLY you decide to spend the evening in town with some friend. The first part is easy. Dinner at a pleasant restaurant. But afterwards . . . What will you do to carry on this business of having a good time?

You didn't go around to the different theatres, to be driven to an unsatisfactory choice by fatigue and time. If it's worth while to consult the advertisements about amusements, how much worth while must it be when it comes to the spending of he household money.

Read the advertisements. They place before you the full choice of the trustworthy goods in the market. They describe advantages, and give you full information before you have to stir out of your chair. Pursue for every article you buy the method you use when it comes to amusements

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

On he rode, bending over the horse's neck, lifting it with every stride, keeping its nose straight to the road—a mile at a leap—a mile at a jump—a mile at each stretch of its splendid, steely body; until, having ridden the night through, he saw in the distance, in the greenish gloom of young day, a dark mass looming up: the oasis of Terek el-Bey—and Bagdad not far away.

The dark mass was becoming more distinct with every second. It split into tents and palm trees; and Ahmed dismounted to say his morning prayers:

"Allah! I praise Thee and I thank Thee! For Thou art the Lord God! Thou art . . ."

He lookee up.

There, straggling down the road, coming from the direction of Bagdad, he saw a huge mob of men and women and children; hurrying, hurrying; loaded with household goods, having picked up what first had come to hand, like people when their home is burning above their heads—useless, absurd things; beating their breasts; crying, yelling, weeping—and hurrying, ever hurrying.

Ahmed stopped an old man.

"What has happened?" he demanded.

"The Mongols have taken Bagdad," came the shattering reply. "They have captured the Caliph and the Princess Zobeid. They are murdering the people. They are polluting the wells. They are stabling their horses in the temples of Allah. They are crucifying the priests. They are looting and burning the ancient town!"

"Yoo-yoo-yoo! Yoo-yoo-yoo!"—rose again the sobbing and wailing, while Ahmed bowed toward Mecca.

"Forgive me, O Lord God," he said, "that this morning I cannot finish my prayer. But my heart and soul and fist are needed at Bagdad!"

CHAPTER X.

On the evening before, after Wong K'ai had replied to the message of the Mongol Prince's fluttering handkerchief by dipping the crimson, triangular flag three times, he had waited until dark.

Bagdad was asleep. Night lay over the slumbering town with a trailing cloak of purple shadows. In the black depths of the sky hung tiny points of light that glistened with the cold gleam of diamonds. The bazaars were shuttered until the morning. So were the houses and palaces, with no sign of life except, here and there, a light springing warm and friendly through chink or curtained window. The mosques were empty. Nobody was abroad except, occasionally, a watchman making the rounds with swinging lantern and steele shod pike; a prowling leprous beggar nosing for scraps in a heap of refuse; a lover returning from a scented, romantic meeting. Another half-hour—and the watchmen fell asleep in dark posterns and doorways; squatting comfortably, their pikes across their drawn-up knees; the beggars sought the asylum of their hovels to whine their complaints to other beggars; the lovers returned home to dream.

Not a sound now except a dim stir of leaves blown about by some vagabond wisp of wind.

Black, silent, the night looked down.

Then, at the shock of midnight, according to the prearranged signal, Wong K'ai mounted the tower of the Caravanserai of the Tartar Traders. There, secretly, an enormous beacon had been prepared these many weeks. He lit it. A few seconds later, the flame of it stabbed through the velvety gloom with an intense, strident, threatening, golden wedge. Another second—and from the mineret of the Mosque of Suleyman the Magnificent a gleaming circle of torches replied to the beacon, sending showers of sparks. At once, in the four quarters of the city, other torches took up the message, puncturing the night. The sky grew scarlet and crimson, like a netted weave of molten, half-liquid metal, with a trail of emerald-green and peacock-green cutting through it. Reds softened to violets. The torches moved through the streets, with the tramp-tramp-tramp of marching feet. The fires were like the blood-gleam in an immense, black opal.

Came a bull-like roar of long-stemmed Mongol war trumpets; a beating of drums; a shrilling and wailing of fifes.

"Who goes there?"—the watchmen's challenging questions as shadows came round the street corners with a crackle of naked steel.

They had no time to find the answer. Out of the dark in back of them—where these many hours Mongol spies had been watching them—leaped other shadows. The flash of curved Mongol daggers. Pikes clattered harmlessly to the ground. A sob and gurgle of death. Blood staining bright tunics, staining darkly the earth.

The next moment it seemed as if all Bagdad's alleys and bazaars and caravanserais were disgorging the flat-featured, yellow-skinned warriors of the North and the East, iron-capped, chain-armored, armed with lances and swords and battle-axes. A forest of oval-bladed, tall spears moved rapidly across the Square of the One-Eyed Jew. Other Mongols rushed out of houses and palaces where they had hired themselves out as servants.

A Babel of war cries rose, in Taryar and Mongol and harsh gutteral Manchu.

In companies of a hundred each, four abreast, they marched through Bagdad, with a steady, forward motion. Scarred, wind-beaten—stained with the blood of many battles, the mud of many bivouacs, but in their tramp the ringing rhythm of success, pennants and standards fluttering vivid brightness of device and colors above the dazzling glitter of tall spears.

Then, as always, with the scent and hope of loot, the Mongol ranks broke here and there as fists crashed against doors, as weapons pried open locks, as men rushed across thresholds to rob and kill.

"An hour's looting! Then the attack against the palace!" He smiled with cruel amusement. "Wild dogs must be fed before they can be trained!"

They were excited shouts and queries as windows were thrown open. Householders leaned out. Heads were quickly withdrawn as battle-axes came whistling and whirling through the air.

"Allah! What was it? A band of robbers from the dessert, setting at defiance the Caliph's law? Bedawin raiders?

"Help! Help! Soldiers! Police! This is the Caliph's town! Must we have our honest sleep disturbed by pulling, quarrelling desert rats?"

Then, as the torches flared higher, bathing the streets in a sea of light, as steel-clad warriors invaded the houses:

"Oh—by the Prophet!—the Mongols! The Mongols!—God protect us!"

A shudder ran over Bagdad. The Mongols! The flat-nosed, yellow-skinned riders of the North! The terror of all Asia and half Europe! The Scourge of God! The dread warriors with the awe of whose name German and Russian mothers frightened their naughty children!

"Dear Lord God!" came a Moslem priest's stammered prayer—"against the darkness of the night when it overtaketh me and against the Mongol scourge, I betake me for refuge to Allah, the Lord of Daybreak . . ."

He had no time to finish the prayer. A squat, bow-legged Mongol captain rushed into the Mosque. His crooked sabre flashed away from the tassled cord that held it. The point of it gleamed like a cresset of evil passions. It descended. It cut across the priest's neck with a dull, sickening whish-whish-whish. The priest fell backward with a soft, gurgling cry—his blood trickling slowly, staining God's altar3 with splotches of rich crimson.

Arab soldiers tumbled out of their barracks, strapping on their weapons as they ran. They went down before the Mongol lances as ripe wheat before a reaper's blade. The scourge passed on. Gates shook. Walls crumbled. The streets ran red with blood. Flames licked over roofs with yellow tongues.

They tore through the peaceful town with the swish of the sword, the scream and bray of war trumpets, the rasp of bamboo lance butts, the thud of broad blades; here and there like a scarlet typhoon of destruction; blazing up and down the streets and alleys with the leap of their lean knives; already, from the desert and forest and mountain, the carrion-hawks wheeling and dipping to the feast and paralleling the Mongols' progress on eager wings; looting, burning, killing.

"An easy thing to write about," comments the ancient Arabic chronicle—"a horrible thing to picture. For the sabre was the only god whom these accursed dog-faced Mongols worshipped. May their souls burn in the lowest depths of perdition for a thousand eternities to come!"

Looting. Burning. Killing.

Treasure smashed and torn and trampled on, because found useless or too heavy to carry away. Priceless rugs slashed. Priceless porcelain shivered to pieces. Priceless lives—of children and poets and philosophers—sacrificed to the god of the sabre. Broken doors. Gutted shops. Shivered walls. Huddled in frightened heaps, crawled into the darkness of cellars and cisterns, where the wounded, a remnant of the living, crazed with anguish and terror. Out in the open streets and alleys, was stench of festering flesh, loathsomeness, a crimson, sickening mush of what once had been useful, contented human life.

Ruins. Temples of God desecrated. Shaggy Tartar ponies stabled in the holiest of holies. An Empire lost in a night.

Death. Turture. Decay. Sacrilege. The Mongol's historic mission before Islam tamed and civilized him. And, up in his room in the Caliph's palace, the Mongol Prince looking out upon the doomed city of Bagdad and uttering the ancient boast of his dynasty:

"I am the enemy of god—of pity—and of mercy!"

In the meantime, out in the streets, the captains were giving orders to stop the sack:

"To the palace! To the attack! To-morrow you can continue your looting!"

They fell once more into military formation. Four abreast, they rolled through the streets of Bagdad, relentless, resistless, with the thunder of the drums, the bull-like roar of the long-stemmed trumpets, the sardonic shrilling of the fifes, the crackle of weapons, the yelling of savage, throaty war cries—with a sweeping, indomitable energy that raised the crunching, cruel soul of the Mongol scourge into something nearly magnificent.

On—the forest of lances! On—the dazzling glitter of tall spears! On—with the flames that licked over the Bagdad bazaars peaking higher and higher, changing night into ruddy day, glinting on steel and iron with running white high-lights, shimmering with gold and silver on keen-edged swords and armor.

They swarmed like locusts. They killed whatever was in their path. Thus Germany had known them, paying for defeat with the flower of its knighted chivalry on East Prussia's and Silesia's battlefields. Thus Russia and Poland had feared them, trampled into bloody mire beneath the feet of their small, shaggy ponies. Thus China and India and Hungary had wilted beneath their blight. Thus, time and again, they had drawn a crimson furrow across half the world. Thus, this day, Bagdad—and with Bagdad all Araby, all Islam—seemed doomed to fall under their pitiless yoke.

They marched down the broad avenue that led to the palace of the Caliph; marched clumsily—being men born and bred on horseback—but steadily. The high call of an ivory horn stabbed out; it was repeated from troop to troop; and at once they split into three columns. One column swung West to cut off the defenders should they try to retreat or sally. The second column flanked the great garden which surrounded the palace, made a living platform and staircase with the help of their steel-bossed, buffalo-hide arm shields, clambered up on the wall, jumped down the farther side. The third column, composed of picked Manchu shock troops, giants in size and strength, made direct for the steel front gate. It gave under their massed impetus as if it were brittle glass—and fear swept over the palace servants and slaves and eunuchs who, at the news of the Mongol attack, had been formed there to give battle.

They ran away, throwing down their weapons, with frenzied cries, pressing, pressing—fighting, killing each other in their mad haste to escape. A sea of black and brown and white—hands striking out crazily, futilely—voices bellowing puny defiance—other voices imploring for mercy—tearing screams as the Mongol spears went home—bodies falling, trampled, crushed.

The Caliph's bodyguard of noble Arabs rallied. They fought bravely. But the Mongol horde waved them aside as with a single, contemptuous gesture—killed them with that same gesture. On the battlements a few watchmen jumped into the fray. They were tumbled off the walls to be caught and impaled by the forest of lances below.

The Mongols poured into the palace.

Too late the Caliph had understood the Mongol Prince's treachery. At first, like the city watchmen, like the Bagdad citizens roused from sleep, he had imagined that it was only a passing riot of Bedawin desertmen. Too late, now that he knew, accompanied by a handful of soldiers and by the Princes of India and Persia—poor little man, his spirit was willing though his flesh was decidedly over-weight—he rushed toward the Mongol Prince's room to make him pay with his life.

Too late!

On the stairway they met the vanguard of the invaders; were pulled down; heard the Mongol Prince's ironic command to his warriors as he stepped from his room:

"Do not harm them. For as to the Caliph, I shudder at the sacrilegious thought of killing my future father-in-law. And as to the descendant of Hindustan's impotent gods and the descendant of Persia's grease pots—why"—he laughed—"before I kill them I shall have them harnessed like horses to my chariot of victory to-morrow, when I shall drive in triumph through the streets of Bagdad!"

To the Persian's greater glory be it said that, in spite of his fear, he broke into a flood of abuse, calling the other every bad name he could think of:

More of the sort. Nor did the Mongol interrupt him. He waited until lack of breath caused the Persian to stop. Then he smiled.

"You are braver than I imagined, O great sausage!" he replied. "Very well. Your tortures to-morrow shall be lengthy, novel, and exquisite—to let me see how brave you really are!"

Then, at his order, they dragged the captives away, while he returned to his room, closing the door.

From the outside, strident cries and yells drifted in as the Mongol swords leaped to their grim work.

He smiled. Then he frowned. He wished to be alone, quite alone with his pride and his coiling thoughts. So he closed the windows and the heavy iron shutters. The noises from the outside ceased. Only a dim memory of sounds was left in gliding, vibrant tone waves—very soft, very far away, not at all like the echo of battle and death.

There was now in the room a cloak of enormous, breath-clogging stillness. Crushing, unhuman stillness.

For a few seconds he stood quite motionless, thoughts flashing and zigzagging through his brain, deeply furrowing his yellow, stark devil's-mask of a face.

Then he walked to a taboret on which was a narrow, square package wrapped in silk of imperial yellow, embroidered with the five-clawed dragon. He took off the wrappin; took out a dozen tiny, very thin tablets of emerald-green, transparent jade inlaid in gold with a succession of Mandarin hieroglyphics. These tablets were the ancestral tablets of his clan, reachin back into the dim mists of antiquity when his forefathers were still wild shepherd chiefs neer the shores of Lake Baikal, in Central Asia. Generation for eneration, century for century, victory for victory, also occasional defeats when the Mongols were driven back into the steppes, thence to issi again, a generation later, with renewed vigor and savagery—generation for gene a on, the history of his clan was i o d-engraved there on the smooth slow, proper ceremony. He filled a bronze bowl with black incense powder, lit it, and watched the scented smoke curl up in opalescent spirals. From the ceiling lamp a yellow ray of light stabbed down, cutting across his face as clean as with a knife, emphasizing the prominent cheek bones, the oblique, heavy-liddedeyes, the thin lips, heightening the expression of stony relentlessness on his features, yet, too, strangely, incongruously, lending to them something akin to spiritual ecstasy. He stared at the coiling incense clouds. Through the whirling, perfumed smoke he saw the green glitter of his ancestral tablets; saw there his own aim and the aim of his race—like a blood-red, challenging scrawl across the history of all the world.

Again he bowed, with hands clasped across his chest. Then he spoke. It was a prayer to his race, his tribe, his clan, his dynasty, himself.

A prayer. Too, a grim prophecy:

"As long as water runs and the wind blows, as long as fire burns and the seas toss, so long shall the Mongol race endure. It runs its way like a shuttle through all the broad lands of the earth, waving an eternal, unbreakable fabric. Time and again, in the past, the Mongol power has gone down before the gathered strength of other races, snatching at and taking the luring jewel of dominion. Time and again we returned to the attack; we shivered the fetters; we enslaved the enslavers. Time and again, in the future, the Mongol power shall go down before the gathered strength of other races, snatching at and taking the luring jewel of power. Time and again we shall return to the attack; we shall shiver the fetters; we shall enslave the enslavers." His voice rose shrilly, triumphantly. "Yellow, toothy wolves we, of our mothers' bearing! Never shall we eat dirt to stay our craving! Ours is the greatest ambition, the greatest call, the greatest mission on earth. We cleanse with the swish of the sword when it is red. And the end is not yet; will not be for many centuries; never will be. For ours is the only pure race on earth. Our race is undying, eternal. The Emperors of Germany and of Russia, the Kings of Poland and Hungary, the Dukes of Lithuania and the Volga Tribes, the Chiefs and Khans and Princes of half the world have gone down before the shining Mongol sword. Thus, in the future, Kings and Nations and Republics shall kow-tow before our curved scimitars and kiss the shadows of our horses' feet. Time and again! Time and again! For ours is the vigor and the energy and the subtle brain and the harsh, ruthless will. Ours is forever the mighty, ever resurgent resurrection of race. All that is welded together by the rest of mankind we shall again and again tear asunder. All that has been built by the rest of mankind we shall again and again overthrow. All the weak deities invented and worshipped by the rest of mankind we shall again and again send down to oblivion and ridicule. For we are the Scourge of God!"

He bowed once more before the jade tablets; then turned as the door opened to admit Wong K'ai.

"To-morrow morning," he said, "I shall elevate the Princess Zobeid to the dragon throne. She is of foreign race. I know. But the Mongol race is stronger. My great-grandfather married a German Princess captured in war, but the son of this union, my grandfather, was pure Mongol. My grandfather married an Indian Princess stolen by Tartar raiders, but my father was pure Mongol. My father married a Persian Princess, sent to him as a tribute by the Shah-in-Shah, but I am pure Mongol. I shall marry an Arab Princess. But my sons shall be pure Mongol."

He paused; went on:

ARTICLE No. 9

It's the ambition of all auction players to become experts, but it is really surprising how little real work they are willing to do to accomplish this result.

There are probably three million people in the country today who play auction, and yet not five per cent of them ever buy a book on auction and if they do, it is usually placed carefully in the book case and never opened. The writer's own little book is as popular as any, not necessarily because it is the best, but because it gives the players what they need and in a way they can understand. But if you will not read a book on the game you will derive much benefit from a study of the various hands that are analyzed in these articles, and if you keep at it, you are bound to improve your game, and if you learn to play a little better than your associates, you will win, even without the aces and kings. As one player described the game of a well-known expert: "The boy certainly knows how to play 'em. He doesn't get much to work with, but he can sure make sevens and eights act like kings and queens."

We cannot all be experts but we can certainly improve our game and one of the best ways to do so is to study over the analyses of the test hands given in these articles.

Every one of these hands will bring up points of playing or bidding that, if properly understood, will be invaluable. These hands have all come up in actual play and been submitted to the writer for analysis. Study them over and make up your mind as to the correct bid or play in each instance. When the analysis is given in the next article, compare your opinion with the writer's and if there is any difference, think it over and then adapt yourself and your game accordingly. Handled in this way, test hands will be invaluable.

KING OWNS SALOON; BUT RENTS IT OUT

THE FEATHERS INN WITH KING GEORGE IN INSET

(By Milton Bronner.)

DERSINGHAM, England, Dec. 8.—I've just fattened King George's purse by buying a glass of ale from him.

King George didn't serve it to me, but I drank it in the "pub" of the Feathers Inn in this peaceful village in Norfouk county.

The Feathers Inn may not mean much to you but it's unique in this world because it's owned by the king of England.

Every glass of foaming ale, every whisky and soda, every soft drink sold across the bar adds to the king's financial batting average.

The late King Edward VII used to come over from his neighboring castle to quaff a glass or two when he was thirsty.

Wales' Crest Above Door.

To-day it numbers among its principal customers many of the employes of King George who work at Sandringham.

The Feathers Inn displays prominently the crest and motto of all the princes of Wales, heirs to the British throne.

Over the doorway is the sign "Hotel," and painted over that are the three ostrich feathers forming the crest of the prince.

And under the feathers is the motto, "Ich dien," —German for "I serve." Whether this means "I serve beer" I can't be positive, but the fact remains that they do. And it's downright stalwart stuff, as they used to say in the days when a yeoman was a yeoman.

This village is the nearest one to the royal estate of Sandringham, residence of King Edward and of his queen, Alexandra, who lives there now.

Many years ago it was realized it would never do to compel employes of the estate to go 19 miles to King Lynn to get a drink. Englishmen won't walk 10 miles for a drink, even if their American brothers will. So King Edward had the present inn built—a neat structure of red brick and brown stone chips.

But George Doesn't Buy.

King George never has "bought," although his father used to empty a flagon with the best of them.

The manager of the place once worked for royalty. From his record it was known he would be quiet, efficient and uncommunicative. The man who runs a place for the king must not be a gossip.

It seems a shame. Bartenders and "pub" managers are supposed to listen to all the troubles of their patrons and comfort them with choice gossip and admonitions to "have another."

The Feathers Inn, too, would rather see you drink ginger ale than the harder variety. Otherwise it's a right snug little bar on a "right little, tight little island."

YOURS.

And yet it's only about $450 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

None of us has more than a faint conception of the size, wealth and potential powers. United States represents something greater than the brain can grasp. Devoting a whole lifetime to travel and inspection, you'd wind up having seen only a tiny fraction of the whole.

WOLVES ATTACKED PORT ARTHUR MAN

Mate Lapanin, Trapper on Little Pine Lake, Fought Off Pack of Sixteen.

PORT ARTHUR, December 8.—Mate Lapanin, a trapper on the Little Pine Lake, north of Seagram, staggered into Long Lac on Saturday well nigh exhausted and recounted a thrilling experience he had with wolves.

He had been out on his trap lines, and at the farthest end he found a wolf caught. He skinned the animal, placing the hide in his pack, and then made for home. Shortly afterwards he heard the wolves howling, and, judged from the direction the sound came, that they were consuming the remains of the dead wolf.

Then ,to use Lapanin's own words, "They came on my tracks, singing!"

When they broke from cover and advanced slowly, growling and showing their fangs, he counted sixteen in the pack.

This rather perturbed him, for he had never encountered so many in a single pack before. The wolves advanced to within a hundred feet, and then they paused.

Lapanin bound his axe with the aid of some moose hide throngs from his pack securely upon a stout green pole, and advanced on them. They retreated a short distance.

He continued on his way and the wolves followed him, the leader finally snapping at him and tearing his trousers.

The trapper then went into action and killed the animal. The animals were quiet for a time, evidently enjoying the repast on their late leader's carcass, but once again the pack took up the cry.

This made him hurry, and he reached the railroad and the town just a lap ahead of the animals.

PERCY BOND RE-ELECTED TO O. H. A. EXECUTIVE AT ANNUAL MEETING

RESIDENCE RULE.

Delegates Decide to Tighten Regulation—'Pro" Coaches Still Barred.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—That clubs are well satisfied with the rule barring pro coaches was demonstrated in no uncertain manner at the thirty-fifth annual convention of Ontario Hockey Association held in the Temple Building Saturday when an amendment to allow pro coaches if they applied and were granted permission by the executive to act in that capacity, was defeated by a large majority.

A further tightening up of the residence rule was made by the delegates who voted to compel a player who changes his place of residence to notify the secretary on forms provided of his change of residence within two weeks after it takes place.

The amendment to allow villages to draw players from towns was declared lost by a two-third vote and the secretary was given power to appoint all referees instead of allowing clubs to agree.

Insure Players.

The executive's recommendation to the clubs to take out insurance for players found favor and it was passed without a dissenting voice, as was the one on a consolation series for beaten intermediate and junior teams.

All senior, intermediate and junior players must have amateur cards before O.H.A. playing certificates are issued. The passing of this amendment was just following out the C.A.H.A. rule.

The meeting was one of the most successful ever held, eighty-five clubs being represented while to date fees have been paid for nine senior teams, 58 intermediate and 66 junior ,a total of 133. Entries close on Wednesday, December 10th and groupings will be arranged on Friday, December 12. Suggestions for groupings are requested.

Mr. J. P. Mulqueen, chairman of the Olympic Committee, thanked the association for its wonderful help towards financing the expenses of the Olympic team.

Mr. George S. Dudley of Midland moved a vote of thanks to the members of the Canadian Olympic hockey team, world's amateur champions, for the way they had upheld the prestige of Canada and the Ontario Hockey Association at Chamonix, France, last February.

Praise for 'Bill"

The retiring president, Mr. W. A. Fry was congratulated on his able administration of the affairs of the association during his two years' term of office and his successor, Mr. William Easson of Stratford was warmly welcomed to the highest office in the greatest amateur hockey organization in the world.

R. Butler Elected.

With the exception of the second vice presidency all the senior officers of the association were elected by acclamation and in the contest for that office Mr. Richard Butler of Lindsay, senior member of the executive committee defeated Mr. Angus Campbell of Cobalt, and a life member of the Ontario Hockey Association. Ten candidates were nominated for the executive committee but withdrew leaving nine to stand and the successful ones were J. P. Bond, Peterboro; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; George S. Dudley, Midland; and Wylie Wilkinson, Galt. With the exception of Mr. Dudley, those elected were members of the old executive. Mr. Wilkinson was unable to attend the meeting.

A letter from Mr. Francis Nelson, the only life member of the O.H.A. was read and its was moved and carried that the greetings of the association be telegraphed to Mr. Nelson at San Diego, California.

The officers of the association are as folows:

President—W. A. Easson, Stratford.

Immediate past president—W. A. Fry, Dunnville.

First vice-president—George B. McKay, Kitchener.

Second vice-president — Richard Butler, Lindsay.

Treasurer—Sheriff J. F. Paxton, Whitby.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

A.A.U. of C. governor—W. W. Davidson, Toronto.

Executive committee—J P. Bond, Peterboro; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; George S. Dudley, Midland; Wylie Wilkinson, Galt. Two more members are to be appointed by the president and one will come from the Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

CHICAGO PROPOSES TO STOP JAYWALKERS

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. (21 United Press).—Police powers to attach a fine on "jaywalkers" is the aim of certain legislation sponsored by the Chicago Safety Commission, that will be pushed for passage at the next session of the legislature, according to Sir Mayer secretary of the commission.

Mayer's plan is fashioned after one proposed by Police Commissioner Enright of New York. Support of the automobile clubs is being lined up for the measure. Passing of such a measure would be a stroke in retaliation or mitigation of the police drives against speeders, the drivers organizations point out.

According to Mayer, more than 90 per cent. of the fatal automobile accidents in Chicago this year have resulted from jaywalking. "If pedestrians won't take care of themselves, the law will have to take care of them," Mayer said.

GROVE SCHOOL RUGBY SUPPER

OLD BOYS THERE

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 8.—The annual footbal supper of the Lakefield Preparatory School was held on Friday evening, Dec. 5th. The big school room was cleared out of desks and forms and decorated profusely with greens and flags. Streamers in red and green, the school colours, and hooded lights gave a fairy-like aspect to the usually sombre room. After service in the Chapel the guests sat down to the usual generous repast at seven o'clock and the room was at once filled with gay talk and laughter, as the boys tackled the different courses, bursting into hilarious welcome as Old Boy visitors, who had motored from Toronto, came in. The usual toast list was run off, that to the school being proposed by Rankin Nesbitt of Osgoode Hall who gave an account of the work of the Old Boys' Association, and expressed the loyalty and affection of all Old Boys to the school.

The toast to the ladies was responded to by Gavin Rainnie in a most amusing speech. The young gentleman spoke from an apparently varied experience and was sure that ladies are indispensable.

The Rugby Team.

The football team with its unbroken series of victories, received whole hearted praise at the hands of Mr. Wood, the team coach and the captain, Pedlar, in neat speech gave the credit to the capable, energetic training it received. Old Boys and absent friends was proposed by Mr. Marling and Mr. Gilliyray briefly responded. Mr. Fletcher spoke feelingly on behalf of the new boys. The reply to this toast is always eagerly looked for. As a rule new boys are too full for utterance, but Hodgens surprised and delighted his hearers in a well delivered, thoughtful speech, upholding the rights of the new boys.

Prizes Presented.

After the speeches the different prizes, medals and sups, won during the autumn were presented and after the singing of the school Latin song, grace was said bringing a happy evening to a close.

Owing to the large number of boys in the school, the list of invited guests was unavoidably limited to Old Boys and those immediate connected with the school. Next year when the new wing will be built, ample accomodation will be available, but the old school room will be missed.

MARANVILLE CAPTAIN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, traded to the Chicago Nationals by Pittsburg, has been appointed captain of the Cubs, manager Bill Killefer has announced. Killefer will remain in New York for the major league meetings next week.

MONTREAL TEAM BEAT SENATORS

SCORE WAS 3-1

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Montreal's new professional team provided the first upset of the National Hockey League season when they defeated the Ottawa Senators at the Forum on Saturday night 3 to 1. They piled up a safe lead in the first two periods and stood off the determined attacks of the Senators in the final session to score their first victory as a club.

Clint Benedict, in goal, and "Punch" Broadbent, on the forward line, were the bright stars of the local team in its triumph, the two former Ottawa players, as was predicted before the game, giving their utmost to send their former teammates down to defeat. In this they were helped by an Ottawa youth playing his first season of pro. hockey, Fred Lowrey, Montreal centre, earning sustained plaudits from the 8,000 enthusiasts for his spectacular play.

Of this trio Clint Benedict emerged as the main stumbling block to the Ottawa squad, the rangy net custodian was at his very best, displaying all the coolness and self-confidence under bombardment which in the past has earned him premier honors among the goalkeepers of the country.

For the first two periods he turned aside every possible kind of shot and it looked as if he was going to blank Ottawa, but with three minutes to go in the final session and the local defence weakening, Big Ed. Gorman went through alone and beat Benedict for the Senators lone tally.

While Benedict was maintaining inviolate the local net, Broadbent was sniping away at Connell in the Ottawa goal from every angle with the result that when the final bell rang his share in the victory was two counters after splendid efforts, especially in that he was a closely marked player from first to last and his counters were made with opponents draped around him.

Ottawa was without the services of their star defence player, George Boucher, who was out of the game with infected hands. The team was further handicapped with Frank Nighbor playing below form. The brilliant Ottawa centre, holder of the Dr. Hart trophy as the most valuable player in the league last season, had been badly used up in the previous two games and appeared on the ice with his face well plastered.

"BIKE" GRIND ENDS.

Australian and Dutchman Win Six Day Race in New York.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Reggie McNamara, of Australia and Pete Van Kempen, marvel of Holland, Sunday morning, won the annual six day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden by piling up an immense total of points in the sprints in the final hour. Bobby Walthour, Jr., son of the famous "Dixie Flier" and Franco Georgetti of Italy, the "Mid" team of the race, finished second.

McNamara and his partner whirled through the last dashes in a manner which wore down their youthful opponents, gathering 1,037 points in the scheduled sprints, while the second team could obtain but 540, despite desperate riding.

Next behind the youthful combination came Buysse and Goossens of Belgium who had been lapped early in the week and were unable to conserve the power to recoup during the incessant dashes of the final minutes. Goulet, riding his last race, lost his team mate, Moran, who was injured on Thursday morning, suffering a broken collar-bone. He teamed with McBeath of Australia but finished three laps behind the leaders.

LIPTON SAILS.

Yachtsman Says He Will Challenge U. S. Next Year.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Sir Thomas Lipton, Irish baronet, whose attempts to lift the America's Cup have made international yachting history for 25 years, left for home on the Leviathan Saturday after a six weeks business trip to Canada and the United States.

The genial sportsman departed flinging the same merry quips at reporters which marked his arrival. His parting shot was a request for a trolley car to take him across the great open spaces of the liner to his stateroom.

Sir Thomas added nothing to his previous announcement that he intended to challenge next year for the America's Cup, the test to be made in 1926. His challenger, not yet built will be called the "Shamrock V."

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Holstein Breeders' Club Held Annual Meeting and Elected Officers.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 8.—The Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club held its annual meeting in the Town Hall, Millbrook, with twenty-seven members in attendance.

The president, W. Fred Fallis, of Millbrook, occupied the chair. During the discussion of business matters it was decided to hold the next sale of Holstein cattle at Bowmanville in March, 1925, at the Beith livery stables, provided these premises could be secured at that time.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—W. Fred Fallis, Millbrook.

Vice-President—A. Muir, Courtice.

Secretary-Treasurer—L. C. Snowden, Bowmanville.

Auditors—Neil Mutton and R. M. Cale, Bowmanville.

Directors: For Darlington — N. Metcalf, J. D. Stevens: for Hope—A. J. Connals, J. D. Pearce; for Cavan—H. Seymour, T. W. Belch; for Clarke—A. A. Gibson, H. Jose.

Sales Committee—R. R Stevens, sales manager; A. Muir, A. L. Pearce, N. Mutton, L. C. Snowden, W. F. Fallis.

Dinner was served at the Waverley Inn at noon, V. Lambert catering. Among those who addressed the club at the conclusion of the meal were: F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative for Durham County, Port Hope; Harry Seymour, Cavan; Messrs. Abernethy, Bowmanville; Cowan, Peterboro, and R. R. Stevens, Bowmanville.

Annual Bazaar.

The opening day of the bazaar, under the ausnices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, proved most successful, the number of prospective purchasers present when the sale began at 2 p.m. Friday giving promise, later fulfilled, of a brisk business throughout the afternoon.

The bazaar was held in the store formerly occupied by J. L. Byam, and the premises were found particularly suitable for such an affair. The decorations were distinctively of a Christmas character, green and red streamers predominating, interspersed with Christmas bells, large and small, while the evergreens used with the red bunting overhead, and on the tables of the various booths, supplied the necessary contrasting color.

The general convenor was Miss May Needham, president of the Aid Society. Perhaps one of the most attractive counters was that where the flowers were sold, the clever handiwork of Mrs. A. J. Brown, who was in charge of their sale; Mrs. Ross Edmunds had a well-supplied and daintily arranged handkerchief stall, most of these being gifts from friends near and far who had been solicited, by means of a small folder with verse inscribed, to assist with this part of the bazaar.

Mrs. J. McKnight and Mrs. G. Locke were kept busy at the fancy work section, while Mrs. C. Garside and Mrs. G. E. Burnham, who looked after the aprons, had no lack of customers. Mrs. (Rev.) F. W. Howard and Miss Ella Elson sold the dainty accessories for baby's wardrobe. The rummage counter was attended by Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. P. Stinson and Mrs. W. Fred. Fallis had articles for use and table supplies in the kitchen department. Many took afternoon tea between three and five-thirty, Mrs. G. W. Sayles giving ready service as the occasion demanded. As usual, the kiddies enjoyed the fish pond, its contents being almost exhausted by closing time; Misses May Duncan and Pearl Burnham were in charge. Mrs. F. Smith and Mrs. A. Weatherun looked after the 'Country Store,' disposing of a considerable quantity of stock.

The sale continued on Saturday, supplies being replenished in the meantime. Besides the afternoon tea, a hot supper was served at 6 p.m. Mrs. Sayles and Mrs. O. Williamson having this under their supervision.

GOSLIN'S RECORD.

Washington Slugger Most Timely Hitter in American League.

A new king of timely hitters was crowned in the American League for the 1924 season, the title going to Leon Goslin, outfielder of the champion Washington team.

Goslin is credited in the official averages with being responsible for 129 runs crossing the plate through virtue of his batting. He made this mark in 154 games. Babe Ruth was second to Goslin for effective hitting, responsible for 121 runs in 153 games. Bob Meusel, however, has a better percentage of runs driven in per game, with his record of 120 in 143 games.

On 1923 Ruth and Speaker tied for the honor of driving in most runs, each being credited with 130. Speaker is far down the list in the 1924 records.

Ruth's record of 170 bases on balls made in 1922 was cut to 142 in 1924. Emory Rigney was the only other batter in the American League to walk as many as 100 times.

Ruth retained the swinging "championship," having struck out eighty-one times, but he had his eye on the ball better in 1923, when he was fanned ninety-three times by opposing pitchers.

Joe Sewell struck out but thirteen times in 133 games, one more strike-out than was charged against him in the same number of games the previous season.

Mamush was hit oftenest by pitched balls, sixteen times in 120 games.

ANOTHER TITLE WON BY QUEEN'S

DOMINION HONOR

KINGSTON, Dec. 8.—The second Rugby Championship of the Dominion for the year came to Queen's here Saturday when Queen's seconds defeated Sarnia by the score of 25 to 2 in a game played on a field of mud and under threatening weather conditions. Only about 2,000 fans were on hand and they had plenty of chances to holler for the tri-color was always superior at every stage of the game.

Perhaps the most sensational plays were made by Carl Voss the spectacular half-back of Queen's who in the third quarter pulled a brilliant run of sixty-five yards down the side of the field and then in the last quarter dribbled the ball from centre over Sarnia line dropping on it for a try. Voss played a great game as did also Norrie the big line plunger and Alec Ada.

Karn was the best of the losers and was ably backed by Jackson and A. Wilson but the remainder of the team were below the calibre of the tri-color. For the first quarter and part of the second Sarnia fought hard and it was anyone's battle.

BRITONS DEFEATED.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

CHRISTMAS DECORATING.

Dear Sir:

Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to draw your attention to the danger to life and property from Christmas decorations, such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, etc. Displays of this nature, and the lighting arrangements in connection there with, add very considerably to ordinary risks of fire.

I would also point out that should an accident of the kind occur in a crowded store or meeting, the rapid spread of fire in such inflammable material is almost certain to occasion a panic with attendant risks to life and limb. The National Fire Protection Association and the Ontario Fire Marshall recommend that all fabrics for decoration purposes should be immersed in a solution of Commercial Ammomnium Phosphate in the proportion of one pound of Phosphate to one gallon of water. If then slightly wrung and dried they will offer considerable resistance to fire until again washed.

If this is not practicable ,a few simple precautions may reduce the danger to a minimum, and these should be considered essential where large numbers of people and particularly children are to ge gathered.

See that inflammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steampipes, stovepipes, electric light bulbs, etc.

See that your electrical circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights.

Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are sufficient, in good order and readily accessible.

See that all exits are plainly marked and not obstructed.

Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised.

Yours truly,
Fire Chief G. Gimblett.

CROSSING PROTECTION.

Police Commission Passes Circulars to Fire Water and Light Committee.

Protection at inter-sections in the city was the chief topic at a meeting of the Police Commission on Saturday. The Commissioners were of the opinion that some action should be taken to protect the citizens during the passage of the fire apparatus, and also to protect the drivers of the apparatus. Circulars describing a siren, to be operated from the fire hall, were referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council.

There were present His Honor Judge Huyeke, chairman; Magistrate O. A. Langley, and Mayor J. J. Turner.

"FLETTNER'S ROTOR" SAILS WITHOUT SAILS— HAILED AS ONE OF GREATEST INVENTIONS IN MOTIVE POWER IN ALL TIME

The exploits of Herr Flettner will shortly be plastered all over the front pages of American newspapers provided his present plans do not fizzle.

Flettner is a German, now living in Holland, who has invented a wind ship or sailing ship without any sails That sounds like World Vaudeville. But wait a minute.

This windship isn't a wild dream. It has been demonstrated so satisfactorily that it is the scientific sensation of Europe. Big steamship companies expect to use his invention on freighters, displacing coal.

Instead of sails, Flettner uses huge cylinders shaped like smokestacks. These revolve and, in some magical way not disclosed, harness the terrific power of air currents. Berlin will erect similar cylinders to generate electricity for lighting streets and so on.

The possibilities of such an invention are almost beyond the imagination. Industry and transportation would be revolutionized. wind furnishing the power now obtained from coal.

It seems too good to be true. And possibly it is. But Flettner's invention has the marks of authenticity, both in its demonstrations to date and in the big corporations that have interested themselves in it.

Stupendous power is going to waste in the air. The force that blows your hat off, uproots trees and turns the windmill could, properly harnessed, relieve man of a large part of his labor. Our generation has neglected the power of the winds, which for many centuries were enslaved to carry man's commerce on the seas.

A man in Cleveland, O., rigged up weathervanes that generated sufficient electricity to light his home. This is a faint shadow of what could be done on a gigantic scale.

The power of the tides also awaits harnessing. So does the fierce heat of the sun. We have barely begun to use the power that nature has placed all about us.

But winds and tides and sun's heat will become our slaves in time—no doubt, long before scientists discover how to release the energy stored in the atom or finish drilling a hole deep into the earth to tap the interior heat.

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 6.—(Special.) Five years ago Robert Orr, of Mono Mills, is stated to have planted an acre of ginseng and this year he dug two thousand roots, for which it is reported he is offered about $10.50 a pound or in the neighborhood of $21,000. It takes a long time to get returns from ginseng, but it pays well when the crop is secured. Ginseng is a native plant in this district and it and potash were the two first products, for which the very first settlers received returns. Ginseng was gathered in the forests, where it grew in a wild state, shipped from this section of the country to Montreal and thence to China, where it was much in demand.

As to just what constitutes the duty of a police officer in regard to loitering in doorways and as to whether his jurisdiction over private property is a matter that came up for discussion in the town council. It centred around the question, have the police power to keep citizens out of doorways? A letter from a property owner on King street to the council brought the matter up. This letter complained of men and boys loitering in private and business doorways; of noise and disgusting language at times. One councillor thought the council should pass a by-law giving the Chief power to move people from doorways which are private property. Another thought that there was already sufficient legislation to cover this. The matter was finally referred to the police, the police committee and the property owners, in order that they may confer upon it.

The municipal council of the town of Cobourg has decided to make another effort to get the Federal government to repair the esplanade at the wharf, which is much needed. It is proposed that a deputation go to Ottawa to confer with the Minister of Public Works.

Leaves Trenton Terminal.

The position of a yard master at the Trenton terminal of the C.P. R. is to be discontinued. It has been held by Mr. Alex. Neilson, who went from Toronto to Trenton, for the last nine years. Mr. Neilson has been a member of the Public school board and a member of the Trenton parks commission, and his removal from Trenton is regretted.

Agricutural statistics state that there are more dairy cattle than the beef types now in the county. The farmer, however, is fully aware that a big crop and a big herd, do not tend towards high prices. At a big auction sale on the provincial road, east, a few days ago, when much stock was offered, all sold better than the dairy cows. At the recent Holstein breeders' sale held here, cows brought a lower price than a year ago. The same condition is reported from other sales in this district.

FRASER AUXILIARY.

Sale of Gifts and Cooking on Saturday Afternoon.

The Fraser Auxiliary of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church held a dainty sale of Christmas gifts and home-made cooking, with afternoon tea, in the Sunday School rooms of the church on Saturday afternoon. There was a good attendance of ladies for the sale. The booths were decorated with Christmas red and green, and the tea-table and small auxiliary tables were arranged effectively with red carnations and silver candelabra. The acting president of the Auxiliary, Mrs. D. Drummond, was general convenor. Miss J. McRae had charge of the fancy work section, assisted by Mrs. M. Comstock, Mrs. A. S. Couper, Miss A. Davidson and Miss Jean Stewart. The kitchen and aprons sale was supervised by Miss E. Scott, with Miss L. Eakin, Miss F. Rosenburg and Mrs. W. Thompson. Mrs. H. Wightman, assisted by Mrs. L. J. Leclair and Miss L. Hall, had the sale of home-made cooking, and candy was sold by Miss E. MacVannel, Mrs. Cooper and Miss M. Ross. Mrs. H. Stenson presided in the tea-room, assisted by Mrs. J. Marsh, Mrs. H. Gillespie, Mrs. D. Drummond, Mrs. B. Gillespie, Miss M. R. Rannie, Miss Florence Hamilton and Miss L. Hamilton.

NEW SHOE STYLE.

Put your best foot forward, men, for this latest design in masculine footwear. Notice the cute little strap and buckle—you must come over and see it. But all kidding aside boys, it's an idea. It keeps the top of the shoe from gaping after it gets old and worn. And if your laces break you can go for days without putting in new ones. This shoe is in grain calf-skin with brass eyelets, and they call it the "Snap."

PRODUCER

The movies have a woman producer now. Mrs. Thomas H. Ince, the widow of the pioneer film man, has taken over the direction of his studios.

THEATRES AT THE CAPITOL.

NEW NEGRI-LUBITSCH PRODUCTION DUE HERE.

"Forbidden Paradise," an Ernst Lubitsch - Paramount production starring Pola Negri, will be the feature at the Capitol Theatre to-day and Tuesday.

The story, adapted from the stage play, "The Czarina," is a romance of love and intrigue in an unnamed Balkan kingdom. Rod La Rocque, Adolphe Menjou and Pauline Starke are featured in support of the star.

Here's Pola in the kind of a role that made her famous in a production directed by the man who first discovered her and introduced her to the American public in 'Passion.' Here's Pola displaying all the charm and seductiveness that have made her one of the most talked of personages on the screen to-day in a picture directed by a man who knows her every whim and fancy, a man who, so to speak, has grown right up with her on the screen. "Forbidden Paradise," in other words, is a Negri-Lubitsch knockout, a picture to please everyone.

Agnes Christine Johnston and Hans Kraly adapted the story for the screen. Fred Malatesta, Nick De Ruiz, Mme. D'Aumery and others have important roles in the cast. If you liked Pola in her earlier picture, you'll fairly rave over her in "Forbidden Paradise." It's a real entertainer by a master-producer.

AT THE ROYAL.

HUTCHINSON'S "THE CLEAN HEART" ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED IN NEW YORK — ROYAL GETS SHOWING BEFORE TORONTO.

The following clippings from New York newspaper reviews show to some extent the reception accorded A. S. M. Hutchison's "The Clean Heart." It is no doubt one of the year's really big productions, and the Royal is fortunate to get it ahead of Toronto:

"It is a masterpiece, and perfect in every detail. 'The Clean Heart' has had humor, imagination and a wholesome respect of the original intentions of the author to go into the fashioning of the screen version. The titles have been taken intact from the novel. There has been no attempt to win 'sympathy' for the hero or the heroine, and the picture is filled with little touches which really reflect great credit on the director alone. For instance when the lovers are drawn by a storm into a cottage which is for sale and each visualizes it as a home. Mr. Blackton has had a happy thought. Instead of showing just one idea, he shows the cottage as it appears to the prospective bridegroom and then as the bride sees it. The character is so plainly shown in what each sees in the future. It delighted us."—Harriette Underhill, Herald-Tribune.

"And we earnestly hope that everyone is going to get the thrill out of it that we did. Having suspected that we were terribly fed up on pictures and having nearly resolved to go into the housekeeping department, we are glad to learn that the fault, dear Brutus, is not in ourselves but in the films."—Harriette Underhill, Herald-Tribune.

"The story is filled with highlights and the suspense does not let down for a moment. Even before the befuddled hero meets the girl there is excitement with Otis Harlan, as the rabbit-like Puddlebox, assisting Marmont in convincing scenes on the rocky cliffs and caves along the ocean. It is a stirring sequence, these few moments in the cave, with the stormy sea gradually surging in." — Herbert Crocker, Morning Telegraph.

"There is also an interesting episode with old vagabond Puddlebox, which involves an exciting struggle with the Devonshire tides and which is excellently played by Otis Harlan. Then there is the eager sensitive work done by Mr. Marmont and the deft direction by J. Stuart Blackton, who knows how to turn a London fog to his advantage. But above all this, there is the charm which makes Hutchinson a best-seller, the charm of a tale which drips sentimentality at every port and yet has power enough to twist its reader into its own saccharine mood." — Alison Smith, Evening World.

"There is also a thrill when the girl, hysterical when the novelist sneers at marriage, runs from the house where they both sought refuge from the storm and dashes along the cliff far above the sea. Marmont catches her as she falls, but is unable to draw her to safety, and the girl, knowing that she is gradually pulling him down, lets go of his hold and drops several hundred feet into the water."—Herbert Crocker, Morning Telegraph.

"Percy Marmont is so good at this sort of thing that he makes the picture far from dull. He is better in the part than any other motion picture actor we can call to mind." —W. R., Morning World.

"It must not be supposed that this is a gloomy picture, as it is not in spite of the theme. There are dramatic moments and many others filled with cheer." — N. Y. Times.

AT THE REGENT.

POWERFUL PICTURE OF STRIKING ROMANCE CREATES NEW FILM STAR.

"The Man Who Came Back," From Fox Studios, Is Superior to Great Play on John Fleming Wilson's Story.

"The Man Who Came Back" —a William Fox production— comes to the Regent Theatre to-day.

Probably there is no better way to describe it than to say that it is very like the play throughout and, in spots, even better. There are few theatre lovers who have not seen the stage version of this great story by John Fleming Wilson. When Jules Eckert Goodman first wrote the play, it was produced on Broadway by William A. Brady and ran over a year. Then various road shows were sent out with the same remarkable success until it became well known throughout the whole country. It is the kind of story that strikes deep and is not easily forgotten.

Henry Potter, the traditional black sheep son of a wealthy New Yorker, incurs his father's wrath through his continual misdemeanors and is sent to San Francisco to try to make good. It results in his travelling a faster pace than ever, contracting enormous debts and meeting a cabaret girl named Marcelle who falls in love with him. His father's representative, sent to see what progress he has made, pays his debts only on condition that Henry go to Shanghai where he may perhaps redeem himself by a fresh start, and at any rate, can do less damage to the family name.

In Shanghai, the boy allows himself to fall to the very lowest depths, drinking heavily and frequenting the most notorious dives in the city. In one of these he finds Marcelle again, and learns that she has followed him there because of her love for him. She, too, has lost her grip on life, and is on the way to becoming a drug addict. Touched by her devotion, Henry Potter feels the first real desire he has ever had to mend his ways. They agree to stick together, and each help the other to retrace every step they have traveled down until they reach the heights again. If he drinks, or if she resorts to the needle, the compact is to be broken, but not until that happens.

Six months later finds them married, both working, both strong and sure of themselves and of each other. A chance comes to go to Honolulu, where Henry may be superintendent of a pineapple ranch. They take it. There the real test of their love comes in the arrival of Henry's dignified Aunt Isabel and the girl she had long ago chosen as the proper wife for him. Marcelle overhears them urging her husband to go home with them and leave all that ties him to the old life. She is afraid that she is holding him against his will and, to free him, pretends that she has resorted to the needle again. Appearing before his guests, apparently under the influence of a drug, she urges him to leave her and go back to New York. He refuses; sends the guests away, and then tells her that she is his wife and that he is going to make her first rate whether she wants to be or not. He seizes a whip and is about to beat her to submission when she realizes that he has proved his love by sticking, in spite of the compact, and tells him the truth. Then it is his turn to realize the depth of her love, which was great enough to give him up. It is a big scene—the biggest of the whole picture, and it gives both George O'Brien (who plays Henry Potter) and Dorothy Mackaill (Marcelle) an opportunity for unusually fine emotional acting.

PLACE YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS ON THE OUTSIDE OF YOUR LETTERS AND PARCELS

Over 2,000,000 undeliverable articles go to the dead letter office every year. Many of these articles would never reach the dead letter office if reasonable care was taken in the addressing of them. Moreover, in the majority of cases the senders fail to put their name and address on the outside of the letters and parcels, which means that the articles have to be opened for examination, and in many instances there is no indication of the sender's name and address, so that the articles have to be sold. Therefore, SEE THAT YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS ARE ON THE OUTSIDE OF ANY ARTICLE THAT YOU SEND in order that if it is undeliverable it may be returned to you promptly and unopened.

HELD A BAZAAR

The combined members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. James' Methodist Church and of the King's Own and Excel Bible Classes of the same church held a very successful small bazaar and sale of home-made cooking on Friday and Saturday of last week, at 173½ Simcoe Street. The ladies had quantities of pretty and useful things on sale and plenty of delicious home-made cooking, and there was a good patronage of the bazaar during the two days. Mrs. Harold Fry acted as general convenor: Mesdames Pratt, Armstrong and Fell had charge of the sale of home-made cooking; Mesdames Stenton, T. Brown and R. Stokes of the aprons and whitewear; Mesdames Emery and Rooke of the fancy work booth. The sale of quilts was supervised by Mrs. R. Bannon. Mrs. J. D. Richardson, Mrs. Foster and Miss May Ritchie had the fancy work booth, which was in charge of the King's Own Bible Class, and Mrs. J. Fairbrother and Miss Doris Ebbs had the booth of the Excel Bible Class. The various sections were prettily decorated.

WIDE-ARMED CHAIRS.

A wide-armed chair such as you see in cafeteries makes a most useful kitchen chair, painted to match the woodwork. The broad arm makes a convenient place to rest utensils or to copy recipes or do household figuring.

RUFFLES A FEATURE.

Dresses this season depend upon their chic for little unexpected touches rather than elaborate ornamentation. On this Nile green crepe frock the two ruffles which form the skirt are attached in the front with a jabot effect that breaks the conventional line and forms a charming decoration. The upper part of the costume could not be more severely plain.

INTERESTING TALK ROTARY LUNCHEON

4,000 DELEGATES.

At the Rotary luncheon to-day an interesting address was given by F. D. Kerr, K.C., past president of the Ontario Bar Association, on his trip to England with a delegation of lawyers and judges from Canada and United States. Mr. Kerr said that distinguished members of the English Bar Association had been coming to Canada and United States for the past ten years to address us, but until this year no members of the Canadian or American Associations had visited England for that purpose. They had cordially invited us time and again, so this year between 500 and 700 Canadian lawyers and 3,500 American lawyers and their wives visited the Old Country.

The common laws of England is the foundation of all the laws of Canada and United States except the Province of Quebec and the State of Louisana, said the speaker. The connection between Canada and the United States and Great Britain and France is strong. The treaty of Paris declared that Canada should always be British, and although there has been several wars between these countries since that time, they have always been good friends and always should be good friends. These countries seem to have been linked together for peace, goodwill and prosperity of the world. It means everything to us that these nations are united.

When we went to England we were not going to a strange country, we were going to the home of a great many of our ancestors. The ships on which we sailed were former German cruisers. We landed at Southampton and were greeted by the Lord Mayor of Southampton and a delegation from the English Bar Association. Describing the railway facilities in England, he said there is nothing that can compare with them. If an engineer shunted trains around in England the way they are shunted around in Canada, the people would get out and wring his neck. We acted like a bunch of children, everyone gazing at the beautiful and strange sights.

I introduced myself as being from Peterboro, Canada, and whether Peterboro had anything to do with it or not, I got along fine as soon as I told them where I was from.

The spirit of tolerance, truth and goodwill that abounds in England, can alone keep the countries together. We attended a service at Westminster Abbey, and hours before the service started the place was packed to the doors. Americans, Canadians and Englishmen alike all sat together at the service. So far as the delegates from Great Britain, Canada and United States were concerned, nothing would divide them. We went to a garden party at Buckingham Palace, and I had the pleasure of meeting the King of England. I did not meet the Queen, but I saw her from a short distance, and my estimation of her is, that she is the most beautiful woman and most womanly woman that I have ever seen. We visited Scotland, Ireland and France and also had the honor of placing a wreath on the grave of the unknown French soldier. We all came away from England very proud of the Mother Country and with the opinion that Canada has a great part to play among the nations of the world.

Leon Frazer, who represented the local Rotarian Club at a meeting for the care of crippled children, held in Toronto last week, reported that it was decided at the meeting that the crippled children are to be taken care of by the County Councils and City Councils.

J. W. McDermid presided and gave a short account of the success of the Rose Ball held in the G.W.V.A. Hall. The ball proved to be a great success and the ladies are to be congratulated on their splendid work.

WEDDING BELLS.

BROWN—ANDERSON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Lakefield Presbyterian church on December the sixth at four o'clock by the Rev. P. L. Jull, of Christena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson, of Lock 24, to Mr. Allan Brown, of Stony Beach, Sask.

The bride, who looked charming in a gown of blue georgette, with silver trimming and hat to match and carrying a bouquet of white chrysanthemums, entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Alice Hunter. Miss May Anderson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and was very becoming in blue canton crepe, and carried a bouquet of pink Chrysanthemums, while the groom was supported by Mr. Alex. Black, of Peterborough.

After the ceremony was performed the immediate friends returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous dinner was served.

After a short stay with friends the young couple will leave for the west, where they will reside.

MYSTERY HIDES CONSUL'S DEATH WOMAN IN ROOM

U. S. Representative in Belgrade Shot in Back of Head.

INQUIRY OPEN.

Young Woman Found Dead Holding Revolver—Suicide Theory Rejected.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press)., —The death of vice-consul Henry A .Dayton, shot several days ago in Belgrade, was reported to-day to the state department.

Still a Mystery.

BELGRADE, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press). — The shooting of Henry Dayton, United States vice- consul at Belgrade and the killing of a young woman, Anna Ousoupaiti, in his home are still a mystery. The police have completed the inquiry and have sent the report to the judge who has opened an investigation.

An autopsy and a careful examination of the scene of the tragedy, according to the police appear to have established the following facts:

First: Anna Ousoupaitis was struck by a bullet above the temple. The bullet came out at the nape of her neck, richoehetting off the wall. The shot apparently was fired at a certain distance as the girls hair was not singed.

Second: Blood stains found on the door handles and soap in the bath room came from the hands of Dayton.

Third: The presence of hairs in the barrel of the revolver that the dead woman held in her hand shows that the weapon has handled after the last shot was fired from it. Blood vessels in Anna's forearms were cut, but not severed and no blood has spurted on her hands or sleeves.

No Suicide.

The police further affirm that while the position of the wounds in the occipital region of Dayton's head confirm that he was shot from behind the position of the woman's body and other indications make the theory that she committed suicide nighly improbable.

The vice- consul recovered consciousness to-day and the judge desired to take his deposition, but postponded this action in deference to the wishes of the United States Consulate which feared a serious effect on the wounded man because of his extreme weakness.

SAYS U. S. NAVY UNFIT FOR WAR

Only 5 Out of 18 First Line Ships Ft For Action.

FAR BEHIND.

WASHINGTON, December 8. — The Navy League of the U. S. said in a statement last night, that only five out of eighteen first line ships in the United States navy are fit for action.

The league pronouncement is based on the reports of secretaries of the navy department; since 1922 the statement says the United States was far behind Great Britain and Japan in relative naval armaments prescribed in the 5-5-3 ratio agreement of the Washington Arms Conference.

PREDICTS SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

New York Parson Draws Attention to Biblical Prophesy.

NEW YORK, December 8. — Basing his sermon on a Biblical prophecy, Dr. John Roach Stratton, of the Calvary Baptist Church, predicted on Sunday night that the second coming of Christ was near at hand.

"The Bible tells us," he declared, that the event will be preceded by an age of self-love, covetousness, boastfulness, pride and blasphemy. Is not the fact that even ministers in their pulpits deny and ridicule the great truths of revealed religion, proof that the number of blasphemers is increasing?" he continued. "Is not the disobedience of children to their parents a most conspicuous sign of these times?" "When we see affection lavished on dogs, yes, when we see modern women even kissing these contemptible little dogs, and calling them their babies, is it not proof that they are lacking in natural affection?" "Above all, there is Sunday golf, theatricals and the mad passion for pleasure."

ATTEMPT TO KILL FASCIST DEPUTY

ROME, Dec. 8.—(United Press). —Unknown men fired four shots with revolvers at Deputy Farinacci, one of Premier Mussolini's principal lieutenants, in Cremona, to-day. The deputy was not hit.

News of the attempted assassination aroused intense excitement throughout Italy, and the Government prepared to take prompt measures to avert punitive measures against the Socialists and Communists in Cremona by the local Fascist organization.

A hurried meeting of Fascist leaders in Rome was called and orders were sent to all the party's provincial organizations to remain calm.

Farinacci has been active in the Fascist party since its early days, and has made many enemies among the Communists and Extreme Socialists.

Threats against his life have been made several times since the assassination of the Socialist Deputy Matteotti and other political assassinations which followed this murder.

GERMAN POLITICAL TANGLE LEFT UNCHANGED BY SUNDAY'S VOTING

Republican Groups Seeking Agreement as Basis for Coalition.

JUNKERS GAIN

Former Marx - Stresemann Cabinet May Continue in Office.

BERLIN, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press).—The net result of Sunday's balloting for the Reichstag and the Prussian diet is set down by political observers as indicating a distinct set-back for progressive policies and parliamentary government in that it leaves in its wake an interparty situation which affords no basis for the construction of a government pledged to a programme of unadulterated Liberalism. This condition is amply reflected by editorials appearing in the Nationalist and Conservative Bourgeoise press which professes to see in the party line-up brought about by Sunday's national polling the long-sought opportunity to eliminate the Socialists, and possibly also the Democrats, from participation in future governments.

No concealment is made in governmental circles of the fact that the Von Tirpitz-Von Bismarck party has not only been returned in its full former strength, but has also enhanced its representation in the Prussian Diet by thirty-four mandates. As this state legislature has always been the goal of Prussian re-action because it affords an important strategic operative base, the party's capture of increased seats there in contradiction to a loss of twenty seats suffered by the Socialists, warrants unconcealed pleasure of the Nationalists with Sunday's elections.

A Tangled Result.

The circumstance that Ludendorff's party, through its loss of eighteen seats, is believed to have virtually eliminated itself from further political consideration and that the Communists lost seventeen seats in the Reichstag, is declared to suggest no useful offset to the realization that the unrevised official election count, as now at hand, leaves German internal politics in an awkwardly tangled state. Contemplating the various solutions to the apparent parliamentary impasse occasioned by the indecisive vote, Germania, which is close to Chancellor Marx, suggests as the only available solution the formation of a so-called big coalition. This coalition, according to the newspaper, would comprise the Socialists, Clericals, People's Party and Democrats, and, on issues of foreign policies, could count on the supprt of the Bavarian People's Party and several non-

The Kings' card depicts Charles I granting to the Pilgrim fathers the charter for founding the Puritan Settlement in Massachusetts.

The "heavens give safety to your purpose,' 'a quotation from Shakespeare, appears beneath the picture.

The card of Queen Mary bears a sphinx and a pyramid, past which Mary, Joseph, and the Christchild are seen enroute to Egypt.

For the topical picture of his card the Prince of Wales delved into old Italian history. During many centuries the Venetians used to observe a ceremony known as "the blessing and espousal of the sea." On this card appear the words "Each day a gem wrought in golden setting of happy thoughts and fairest memories."

LONDON, Dec. 9. — (United Press).—How rapidly fuel oil is ousting coal in ocean transport is revealed by the report of Lloyd's Rigister of Shipping for the year ended June, 1924, which shows the great increase in the use of oil fuel in ships.

In July, 1914, the gross tonnage of steamers fitted for burning oil fuel was 1,310,209. In July, 1923, the figures were 15,792,418 while at July, 1924, the tonnage had reached 17,134,072.

AFRICANS LIKE WHALE.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Canned cuts of whale meat are considered a great delicacy in West Africa, according to the Board of Trade Journal. Practically the whole of the whale meat canned in British Columbia last year was sold among the settlements between Liberia and the Congo.

West Africa has thus solved the problem of finding a market for whale meat after the oil has been extracted, for whale meat has become a really popular viand in that part of the world.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB OPTIMISTIC

Business Outlook Seldom Better Than Now, Says Head of Bethlehem Steel—Demand for Steel Products Are Heavy.

BY CHARLES M. SCHWAB
Chairman, Board of Directors, Bethlehem Steel Corporation

I have seldom been more optimistic as to the near future than now There is every indication that business is going ahead on a firm foundation, backed by good agricultural prices, increasing efficiency of all workers and the demand for the products of American factories both in this country and abroad.

Demand for steel products is increasing even faster than the rate of production and there is every indication that the steel companies have a good year ahead of them.

The principal buyers of our products, namely, the railroad industry, the building industry and automobile industry, are all planning for conditions of sound business and at least normal buying next year.

Business men throughout the country have gradually worked up a feeling of confidence.

With a demand for our products and a confidence in the future, American business must be good.

C.P.R. ANNOUNCE BIG NOTE ISSUE

FOR EXTENSIONS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.— Official announcement as a result of a meeting of the board of directors of the Canadian Pacific Monday of the issuance by the company of $20,000,000 four and a half per cent note certificates secured by deferred payments on lands was made at the company's offices.

In explanation of the issue E. W. Beatty, president of the company, made the following statement:

"The company is not short of funds by any means, its bank account being of very comfortable porportions, but it has for many years been the company's policy to maintain a strong position in its cash resources and, considering the magnitude of the enterprise, this is manifestly prudent. Works of improvement in contemplation to provide for its traffic and for the betterment of existing facilities will require a considerable sum in the near future, and to meet these expenditures and provide ample working capital for other purposes, the directors of the company have decided to make an issue of note certificates in much the same way as was adopted in 1914, save that the issue will be of a public character instead of being restricted to participation by its own shareholders.

"In the belief that more extensive holdings of the company's securities in Canada is desirable free from all standpoints, the company has sold the issue to a strong Canadian financial group consisting of the Bank of Montreal, the National City Company, the Royal Bank of Canada, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Securities Company, Wood, Gundy and Company, and A. E. Ames and Company.

Already a very wide distribution is secured at a price to the public which will make it an attractive investment. It was quite o pen to the company to secure the requisite funds in the United States on terms equally favorable, but in view of the interest in the company's securities by Canadian investors as evidenced by the increase in the holdings of its common stock and bonds, the directors were glad to be able to make the issue a Canadian one."

THE WEATHER.

The rainfall yesterday amounted to .60 of an inch. This was the heaviest rain (in fact the only rain of any considerable extent) since the last week in September. This precipitation took the form of snow in the east and west, as well as in the north. From Ottawa and Montreal easterly considerable snow now lies on the ground, while in the western states and the prairie provinces old-fashioned blizzards have prevailed.—W.P.

BRITONS BUILD OTHER NATIONS

MONEY GONE, TOO

LONDON, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Lt. Col. L. C. Amery colonial secretary, addressing Australian club in London Monday said Great Britain in the last two generations had squandered millions of the finest people and thousands of millions of pounds in money largely in building up other nations which neither in war nor peace would ever be what an enlarged Australia, Canada, New Zealand or South Africa might have been.

"We are learning wisdom now, though it is somewhat late," Col. Amery proceeded. "The most effective assistance we can give our emigrants is to buy the things they produce. Though there was a slight lapse a few months ago I trust there will be an ever-increasing pressure on the government to carry out the policy of Imperial preference, not only in tariffs but in every other direction to strengthen the empire."

Referring incidentally to the questions of Singapore naval base Col. Amery described Singapore as another gateway which might be value less unless the means were provided to enable British ships to be re-equipped there.

"That is a purely internal matter for ourselves," which we not only are entitled to look after but are bound to make sure of."

In conclusion Col. Amery said that in the vast developments pending in the Pacific Australia and New Zealand must give a lead to the new world, as Great Britain had given a lead to the old world.

SEASON'S WORST STORM.

Blizzard Swept Upper Lakes Monday—Ships in Harbors.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 9.—The worst blizzard of the season prevailed over the upper lakes Monday a northeast gale with blinding snow. Everything is hove into the nearest shelter and wireless reports are that nothing is moving. The Glenbrae, due to leave Sunday for Duluth with screenings, has not ventured out, and anxiety is felt lest the grain fleet will not arrive here in time to clear before expiry of insurance period.

CITY COUNCIL EMBARKS UPON POWER INQUIRY

Special Session Approves Report of Committee After Long Discussion.

VOTE WAS 7 TO 3

No Publication of Council's Basis of Action Authorized by Motion.

By adopting the resolution of the Committee of the Whole the City Council in special session last night burned its boats behind it and advanced on an investigation under oath of allegations regarding Campbell Flour Mills electric power account. It is alleged by the Council that there is a mystery attaching to the supply of power which it is desired to clear up.

In discussing the plan several difficulties were threshed out and the way smoothed for an unhampered inquiry.

Solicitor's Powers.

Alderman Stocker: Would the selection of witnesses be in the hands of the solicitor?

Mayor Turner: Yes, but not counsel.

Alderman Stocker: What does the judge know about it. He will require expert witnesses and he will demand them.

Mayor Turner: No. He will hear the witnesses we have to produce.

Alderman Stocker: I want the legal committee to have charge of its own business.

Alderman Maher said he had given some thought to the expense of the action. If there is any mystery to be cleared up it is our duty to the people to clear it up.

Alderman Crowe thought expert legal talent not needed and the city solicitor would be quite capable.

Alderman Stocker: I want to see that the legal committee is consulted.

Alderman Phelan said he could not see the advantage that would accrue to the city. "We're going to spend money without having anything to show for it."

Mayor Turner replied that the Commission would be expected to bill for the unpaid amount in case the judge found that there had been an undercharge.

Alderman Meyers remarked that the question is one of right and wrong. The Hydro Electric Commission has put its meters against the consensus of opinion of the milling fraternity from coast to coast.

Admitting both to be correct and worthy of respect the Hydro still says that its meters are more correct.

Alderman Crowe said that the Manufacturer's Committee deserves thanks for opening the question and the matter should be cleaned up. It is right that the citizens should know all the facts, and the Campbell Flour Mills Co. should put its output on the table.

Alderman Maher moved the adoption of the committee report, including the resolution to investigate, and Alderman Morrison seconded the motion. In speaking to the motion Alderman Maher said the facts have been dealt with by all the council and he advocated giving the citizens full particulars.

Alderman Phelan said he would not support the motion as he did not see any good to be attained.

Alderman Fife remarked that he did not see how it would take much to prove the city council's figures correct. An intelligent man must see from the figures before council that there was some power used that was not paid for. He would like to see the full particulars published and await developments before opening the investigation.

Vote 7 to 3.

On a division called for by Alderman Phelan, the Council stood—for the investigation, Aldermen Jones, Fife, Meyers, Crowe, Morrison, Maher, and Mayor Turner.

Those who voted against the investigation were Aldermen Phelan, Turner and Stocker.

The question of publication of the statement was taken up again, the Council having decided to ask the investigation, and Mayor Turner remarked that the public has confidence in its Council and the particulars of its case need not be published.

After further discussion it was decided not to publish any particulars of the Council's case.

Alderman Crowe's last word was, "I want the public to know it all."

BRITAIN REASSURES COUNCIL OF NATIONS LEAGUE OF HER RESPECT

ROME CONFERENCE

Thirty-Second Session of the League Council—Dinner Guests of the King.

ROME, Dec. 9.—Vigorously proclaimed confidence in the League of Nations as a potent force for world peace and human happiness was the dominant note at the meeting Monday of the thirty-second session of the council of the League of Nations which auspiciously egan its deliberations in Doria Palace, famed for its treasures of art.

The necessity for this new insistence on the League's usefulness was undoubtedly occasioned by Great Britain's recent request for postponement of consideration of the question of the Geneva peace protocol and of arrangements for a conference on disarmament, and by the ensuing impression permeating some quarters that Britain was growing cold on the League.

Austen Chamberlain, British secretary for foreign affairs, plainly went out of his way yesterday to dispel any such impression. He explained at what inconvenience to the British cabinet and parliament he had come to Rome, but said that the Government and people, and even the opposition, favored his journey because all wished to show respect for the League and their high sense of the value of things which the League has achieved and the high hopes entertained for the League's future success.

Avowal of Respect.

The British foreign secretary remarked that he could only repeat the words of the Earl of Balfour, that if the league did not exist "we should have to invent it." He concluded that the respect of the British Empire for the League and its confidence in the League's fairness, impartiality and justice, was demonstrated by Great Britain's willingness to accept any decision to be rendered on the Irak frontier problem involving a settlement of the Mosul conflict.

Peace Protocol Vital.

FELL FROM TRAIN

Kingston Man Found on Track With Fractured Skull.

KINGSTON, Ont, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Andrew Forsythe of Portsmouth was found Monday morning on the Canadian National Railway tracks about a mile and a half west of Napanee seriously injured and it is believed that he fell from a freight train proceeding east. He was suffering from a severe head injury and he was picked up and sent on to the General Hospital by Provincial Officer Thompson of Napanee. The man was examined by Dr. A. R. B. Williamson and it was believed that he was suffering from a fractured skull. One arm was broken. He was without a vest or coat of any kind and he carried a roll of bills amounting to about $200

SYMPATHY REQUIRED

To Solve Unemployment Problem, Says "Ralph Connor."

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press)—Industryr was defined before the Rotary Club today by Rev. Dr. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) as a co-operative enterprise for the service of the community, and he also declared that a solution in each individual case may be reached in industrial disputes by mutual consideration. A little brotherly sympathy to solve the question of unemployment about which the working man was today thinking more than about any other difficulty should be, he said, the first problem of industry.

QUESTIONS FOR POWER ENQUIRY ARE AGREED ON

St. Lawrence Development Scheme Extended to Include Great Lakes Waters.

NAVIGATION, TOO

Terms of Investigation Next Presented to Governments of U. S. and Canada.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.— (Canadian Press.) — An agreement has been reached between technical officers representing Canada and the United States as to the questions to be answered by the enlarged joint engineering board which will report upon the question of proposed St. Lawrence development. The agreement marks the conclusion of negotiations extending over several months. Under the arrangement arrived at between the two countries, these terms of reference will now go to the respective national advisory committees to be reported upon by them to the governments of each country which will have final powers. The instructions to the engineering board are thus within measurable distance of ratification and a few weeks at the most should see the examination of the project from an engineering basis, actively under way.

The present proposal, according to departmental officials, embraces the examination of a project extending from the Upper Lakes to Tidewater and from the standpoint not only of navigation but of power. The former examination of the project was limited to the study of the St. Lawrence.

Questions Withheld.

Until they have been examined and passed upon by the national advisory committee and approved by the government, the terms of the reference will not be available for publication. In a Washington despatch, it was stated that the recent meeting of engineers at Washington was a victory for the Canadian point of view but Hon. George P. Graham, minister of railways and chairman of the national advisory committee for Canada, stated Monday that neither country was approaching this most important question with the idea of securing some cheap advantage over the other.

"What we are trying to do," said Mr. Graham, "is seriously to grapple with what is probably the biggest problem, so far as engineering is concerned that has been before the government of either country for many years."

Mr. Graham stated that negotiations might be expected to lead to a broadening out of the principle of co-operation between two friendly nations working out their destiny side by side, with mutual respect and good will. The proposals under way were of a scope and nature never before attempted and it was not the intention of anyone concerned to approach the matter in a petty spirit.

Canada's Attitude.

Canada has, it is understood, endeavored to confine the terms of reference to such questions as had an actual bearing upon the St. Lawrence problem. It has been felt all along that any engineering report, to be of practical value, must take into account the effects of the Chicago diversion upon the Great Lakes St. Lawrence watershed. The Chicago diversion is the only diversion of the moment which effects the St. Lawrence flow as waters temporarily diverted from Lake Erie at Niagara come back into the system and are again available in the St. Lawrence, while the diversions at Niagara are said not to come within the scope of the present inquiry, it is understood that Canada will not oppose a re-consideration of the situation at Niagara as provided in the Waterways Treaty of 1909. If this latter is desired by the United States; but it is felt that there should be no distraction from the present task which has to do primarily with the through deep waterway.

The technical officers who represented Canada at Washington were: Mr. Odilon Lefebvre, of Montreal, and General C. H. Mitchell of Toronto. The matters considered were of sufficient importance to warrant the presence also of the chairman of the Canadian section of the joint engineering board and as such, B. W. McLachlan, of Ottawa, attended in an advisory capacity.

Gough, Home Bank director, this morning probed into commisions bank paid for deposits received from the City of Toronto and province of Ontario. Gordon L. The witness thought Richardson got about $13,500 in commissions. He also seen A. E. Witness also understood that commissions were paid for provincial deposits.

STEAMER ASHORE.

Passengers and Crew Reported Safe at Parry Sound.

PARRY SOUND, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press). — It was announced this morning that the passengers and crew of the steamer Grenville, ashore in Byng Inlet, Georgian Bay, are all safe at Gereaux Island Lighthouse. M. J. Brais, marine agent, has received definite word to this effect.

The Grenville was driven ashore in heavy gales that have prevailed here for nearly forty-eight hours.

All day yesterday the steamer Strathbogie endeavored to get the Grenville off the reef.

Wrecking tugs have been telegraphed for from Sarnia. It is expected that the vessel will, on their arrival, be released and taken to the dry-dock for repairs.

In the meantime the weather continues stormy. Little can be done to-day to assist the much-buffetted ship.

Dreams

Some persons always dream of climbing.

There are those who night after night see themselves in their visions attempting always to reach something above them.

If one is climbing a step ladder their success in life will probably be measured by the height they attain on the ladder.

Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through the hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears Get a bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enchances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Dont' stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy andnustrous, and you appear years younger.

ALTAR MUST BE CHURCH CENTRE

Rev. Mr. Watson Says Pulpit Only the Medium of Teaching, in Sermon.

AT MARMORA

MARMORA, Dec. 8. — A very striking sermon was deliveerd at St. Paul's church last Sunday morning by the Rector from the words, "Father, I will that they also whom Thou has given Me, be with Me where I am," John 17:24.

The preacher, Rev. Caiger Watson, said that if he were called upon to name his subject that morning he would call it "The Touch of Jesus." In St. John's Gospel, there are many striking and beautiful passages wherein the love of Jesus Christ is set forth. We therein read prayers of Jesus Christ for forgiveness and grace for His followers, one of the greatest and most perplexing problems that has faced the church from the beginning has been that of being with Jesus. It has come up for discussion and has been the leading theme in much religious controversy.

Christ's Design.

It is evident that Jesus Christ wanted His disciples to be with Him or rather better put, He wants to be with them. He prayed for His disciples very fervently and very enthusiastically. He did not pray that they should become powerful speakers or great leaders among men. He prayed that they might be one with Him. We might think from the text that He was thinking entirely of the hereafter as He uttered those words. It was not the thought which He had however. He was not thinking solely of heaven. He was thinking of all time, because on another occasion He said, "Lo, I am with you always." When He says this, He means very plainly that it is a vast and tremendous necessity for us to travel in close companionship and comradeship with Him. It was because of their touch with Christ that people could say of His earliest followers that they had been with Jesus. None of the earliest fathers were extremely literary men. St. Paul was perhaps an exception. The early Christians were men and women who had been with Jesus and so they appealed to those who looked for comfort and assistance. It does not mean that to be with Jesus, a man must be illiterate. It is to be noticed though that contact with Jesus did not make those early saints great scholars.

World Groping.

We see the world to-day weary of its plight and looking and seeking for help. We who are part of the world, think help should come from our Jerusalem. Why don't we get this help from God's church? Who is Jesus? Jesus is God. Where is Jesus? Jesus is everywhere. That is the trouble with us. We don't want to find Jesus everywhere. We want to find him merely somewhere. We wish we could see Jesus and go to Him as in the long ago. So we say: "If Jesus would only meet us somewhere instead of everywhere, how altered things would be for us? We would get away from the weaknesses and failures of life and be what He wants us to be."

Referring to a Methodist hymn on "Walking and talking with Jesus," Rev. Mr. Watson declared that there was a great amount of truth in it. When God made us, He made us in certain ways. We find people possessed of the idea that we were created just to come into this world without God being at all interested and that is the end of the matter. This is not so. We are sacramental beings. When we meet with a friend we shake hands. That is a sacrament. The handshake is the outward sign. Inwardly there is the converse of two spirits.

Marriage is intended to be sacramental. Behind it is the comradeship of two spirits. When people are only mated, marriage is not sacramental. Some people dread the sacramental because they think it is the prerogative of the Church of Rome.

Ceremony and Ritual.

The same they will think to be equally true of ceremonies within a church. In every lodge room there is ritual and ceremony. A good many people want to deny the church of ceremony or ritual and want services to be turned into a semblance of a Quaker meeting, according to thought which they obtain from "God is a spirit and they that worship Him, must worship Him in a spirit and in truth. You find Christ not tangible but incarnate upon His altar. "I will come to you and touch you." If you won't believe this, you are past help till you do. The last thought would be in connection with preaching.

A great many years ago something happened which was very good and also very bad. The reformation turned out wrong thoughts from the minds of people and put right thoughts there. But man trusted in his own brains rather than to God's spirit. He broke away from the essentials and made the non-essentials essential. Church folk broke away from the altar and made the pulpit the centre of the church. They introduced the preaching service.

Sacramental Christians.

We have got to be sacramental Christians. The pulpit must not be made the centre, but the altar. All that must happen in the pulpit must be the teaching whereby communion with Jesus Christ is made known. When we are touched by Christ, we can go out into the same world but we will not be the same in relation to it. It would be perfectly possible for us to live and die for Jesus as the martyrs, if we like them, keep in touch with Jesus all the time.

CROWE EXAMINING KORETZ

Leo Koretz, who skipped outof Chicago a year ago with something like $2,000,000 relatives and friends had given him to invest in his Panama oil scheme, is back to face the music. He is seen here being questioned by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, immediately following his return from Halifax, N.S., where he was apprehended. And Leo, according to the prosecutor, has confessed his Bayano River plans were nothing but fraud.

WOMEN FOUGHT FOR ROUGE AND WILL STICK WITH IT

There is Nothing New in the Make-Up Line; Ruse Was Used by Egyptians.

ARTIFICIAL MOLES

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 9.—(United Press). — The Parisian makeup—chalk white cheeks and carmined lips—meets with no approval in America. It is the original "blah" as far as the American woman is concerned.

In the first place, American women have been fighting for the privilege, of wearing rouge for years and now that they have gained that privilege, they do not intend to give it up. Not so very long ago we liked to term the woman who wore rouge "the painted lady." We drew our skirts away from her as we passed her on the streets. Today, rouge-wearing is so general in the United States that we think nothing of it.

Rouge in itself is harmless enough. It is only when one is badly rouged that one causes comment. It has been proven that powder and rouge tend to protect the skin against the wind and the sun and thus keep the complexion in better condition than if it were left natural.

American beauty is not the type that can stand pallor. We are a robust, athletic race and those of us who lack robustness must buy its equivalent at the drug store, for we have trained our men folks to regard our pink-and-white complexions as a vital part of us. A great deal of our so-called beauty depends upon the fact that we keep our noses powdered and that we have developed the art of assimulating the school-girl complexion, regardless of our age. Old age means nothing to us, for we are constantly counteracting it with cosmetics and facial massages and the day when the American woman will be content to go about with a colorles face is indeed far off.

Rouge Is Ancient.

Rouge is as old as the proverbial hills. In fact, there is nothing new under the sun—in the makeup line. When the ancient Egyptians favored the red-headed ladies, it was largely because these ladies were adepts at using henna. For centuries the Chinese and Japanese women have used paint, eyebrow pencils and lip coloring. Even the plucking of the eyebrows is an old custom.

At present the slender plucked eyebrow is not as popular as it has been, although the eyebrow is shaped into a natural line by the use of brilliantine and an occasional pull of the tweezers. There is a fine hair-line of distinction here! In other words ,the eyebrow can be shaped, but it must not look artificially shaped.

Recently we have noticed many girls with attractive moles at the corners of their eyes which on close inspection proved to be but brown marks made by eyebrow pencils which had been artfully dusted with powder until they looked very real indeed. Surely these are less conspicuous than the little black court-plasters which our mother wore and far more natural looking.

The girl with a slight indentation in her chin can accentuate this so that she will look as though she has a dimple if she uses a brown eyebrow pencil forming a shadow in the indentation. Of course, she must powder over the penciling thus blending the object. Any shading of the face with eyebrow pencil should only be attempted for evening occasions.

Death Penalty Useless, Says a Prison Warden

BALTIMORE, Dec. 9.—(Associated Press).—Capital punishment is without value as a deterrent to crime, Colonel Claude B. Sweezey, warden of the Maryland Penitentiary and House of Correction, recently told 100 members of the Grand Jurors' Association at their monthly meeting.

The murderer himself, Colonel Sweezey declared, does not expect to be caught, and in the heat of his passion never gives a thought to the degree of his penalty. In the main, he said, capital punishment dooms to death only murderers, who are "the most level-headed and the squarest" of men behind prison walls, and the least likely to commit a similar crime again.

HEART TROUBLE SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Mrs. Geo. E. Bowman, Morrisburg, Ont., writes:—"I am writing you a few lines to let you know of my experience with Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Two years ago I became very poorly with my heart and nerves and whenever I took the least little bit of exercise my heart would start to jump and flutter. I could not walk up-stairs without having to sit down and rest before I was half-way up, on account of my breath becoming so short.

WHY BE OFFENSIVE WITH BAD BREATH?

Mr. J. Perry of 702 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I awakened each morning with an unpleasant taste and was often reminded by my wife that my breath was disagreeable.

"I tried perfumed tablets, mouth washes and other camouflages which gave only temporary relief.

"After consulting my dentist and finding my teeth in good condition, I confided in a friend, who suggested that possibly my trouble was constipation—faulty intestinal elimination. After taking a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, my stomach and bowels were relieved, foul and impure gases eliminated.

"I now enjoy a wholesome breath as well as improved health. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small, easy to take, move the bowels in a gentle manner—without discomfort and distress."

GERMAN POLITICAL

partisan minor groups which control a dozen mandates.

As the newly elected Reichstag, according to Germania, is destined to determine the trend of German policies, for a number of years to come, it is assumed by this newspaper—the Clerical Party's organ—that the proposed coalition embracing these variegated factions would be obviously equipped to take over the government.

Hostile Groups.

The ultimate consummation of this coalition, it is objected, presupposes a definite reconciliation between the Socialists, who now head the column in the Reichstag's parties, and Stresemann's People's party, with especial reference to the recent lively exchange of campaign amenities and the more firmly entrenched fundamental hostility emanating from the pronounced disparity in principles of both parties. In addition, it is pointed out that Stresemann would also have to perform an "about face" in order to emancipate himself from his pet scheme of establishing a simon pure Bourgeoise Cabinet As the new Reichstag is allowed thirty days time to perfect its organization, it is not expected that an attempt will be made before the holidays to disentangle the parliamentary knot. It is also not considered improbable that the Marx-Stresemann Cabinet will be empowered to continue in office until inter-party bartering has or has not brought about a coalition solution.

Nationalist leaders assert that their party can afford to mark time. This also appears to be the sentiment among the Socialists who declare that they are now the dominating party in the Reichstag.

A LAMPREY CAUGHT

Fish Foreign to the St. Lawrence Found in Hoop Net.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—A lamprey, a fish rarely caught in St. Lawrence waters, was found in a hoop net at Halsteads Bay by Thos. Shipman, an Ivy Lea fisherman, and was on exhibition here Monday. The peculiarity of the fish lies in seven orifices on either side of its body, which are distant from its mouth and are used in breathing.

BRITAIN REASSURES

fic settlement of disputes there was a very earnest strain running through the private comment of all the members of the council on Great Britain's suggestion for a postponement. It is indicated that the protocol was very much alive and is likely to continue to live. Dr. Benes of Czecho-Slovakia said to the press correspondents:—

"The protocol has been signed by sixteen states and is being eagerly examined by all the states members of the League. Tomorrow we hope to define the exact status of the protocol and the arrangements for the disarmament conference by a series of declarations. Personally I never though the conference would be held next year and I am glad that more time will be afforded for the preliminaries."

Aristide Briand of France said he quite appreciated Great Britain's reasons for asking for a postponement.

In the meantime the council decided to appoint a special committee of fifteen world jurists to inaugurate on a vast scope the study and codification of international law. President Coolidge's name was prominently brought into the discussion of this subject when the Swedish foreign minister M. Unden emphasized that the president had recently recommended such codification.

International Law Institute.

new committee must pass upn the offer of the Italian government to found an international institute of private law at Rome and may decide to take up the delicate problem of defining the frontier between domestic and international law—a question which was thrust on the international stage by the Geneva peace protocol because of the so-called Japanes amendment.

The council voted to pursue a vigorous combat on malignant malaria and sleeping sickness and to organize a special interchange of health personnel from among the group of Latin-American countries and in November next an interchange in Japan. It was also decided that caring for the health of children the world over will be one of the important aspects of the League's work of protecting children generally.

On the suggestion of M. Guani, of Uruguay, the council called the attention of all countries to the wisdom of adopting as soon as possible the regulations and symbols fixed by the international commission on aerial navigation for the orderly designation of aerial routes.

A great crowd assembled in a pouring rain outside Doria Palace to watch the arrival and departure of the members of the council and later filled the council chamber to overflowing. Last night the council dined with the King.

MAYOR TURNER.

There is even more than the usual dearth of municipal election gossip in Peterborough at the present time despite the fact that polling day is less than a month away.

Partially, at least, this may be accounted for by the general understanding that there will be no mayoralty contest, and that Mayor Turner will be given a second term by acclamation.

It has been the usual practice in Peterborough to extend the courtesy of a second year in the chief magistrate's chair to each new Mayor, and while, of course, that is a practice that could be departed from in this particular instance, there is little probability of a change.

Mayor Turner has given such a convincing demonstration of his fitness for the position that another term would be assured, even if there had not been an unwritten second year law.

Without undue flattery, it can be said of His Worship that he has made an admirable presiding officer, has worthily acted as the representative of the citizens at public functions, has invested his office with dignity and savoir faire, has always been at the disposal of the people and ready to listen to any suggestion pertaining to the city's welfare, and has himself supplied constructive ides that have been or will be of benefit.

EARLY SHOPPING.

There is nothing new that can be said about Christmas shopping and the advantages of getting it done well before Yuletide.

Every year the newspapers have pointed out the unfairness of leaving gift buying to the last few days, and there is reason to believe this persistent hammering home of the facts has had some results, although there is still a needless concentration of Christmas buying in the final week.

The time is short now, and to those of its readers who have still the bulk of their gifts to purchase the Examiner merely points out that the selection will be better tomorrow than a week later, that there is a much better chance of getting what you want now than next week, and that in order to get the best of attention and service the shopper who makes it a point to get out early in the day is on the right track.

Not only is there too great a tendency to leave shopping until late in the month, but there is also a general habit of putting it off until late in the day, with the inevitable result of confusion and rush during the peak hours.

There must be many people who could do their shopping earlier in the day if they realized the advantage of so doing.

If the majority of them would try that system for a day or two the results both to themselves and the merchants and their sales staffs would be decidedly beneficial.

OPTIMISM.

The Home Bank probe will aid in allaying the smouldering revolutionary feelings of a large portion of Canada's population who were beginning to think that the indiscriminate and dishonest promoters and bank wreckers were immune from just punishment, says the Quebec Telegraph. Canada, for some years, has been a stamping ground for every description of unscrupulous company promoters. It is hoped that a lesson has been learned; that our banks will refuse to render further financial assistance to this class. It does not tend to the advancement of the country at large, but only the enrichment of a few insiders, or, the making of over-night millionaires. Through this process many flourishing corporations have floundered.

Canada has a great future! It is one of the richest undeveloped countries in the world. Foreign capital must be secured to develop it. But it must also convert its own capital to its own industrial life. It must stop the millions which are daily flowing to outside development. It must keep this money at home. The big men must help to bring this about. This is within their power. They must provide legitimate investments for Canadians, as well as outsiders. They must make an effort to restore that lost confidence which has been brought about by unlimited, unhindered and unprincipled promoters, who have top-loaded too many of Canada's industrial corporations, with surplus "watered stock."

Canada has every reason to be optimistic even though the coming winter may not see a quick reaction, but the worst is over, and from now on Canada and the world will see brighter, better and happier industrial days.

FORGETTING THE UNPLEASANT.

How's your memory? Mawn Lipowsky, Russian memory wizard, who is astounding American university professors with his extraordinary mental stunts, denies that young boys and girls have the best memories. Until now, we were unaware that any such notion prevailed. However—

Adults over 20 years of age have the best and the most retentive memories, says the Russian wiz.

This should interest the public, judging by the success of organizations that train the memory.

Unfortunately, we have more details to remember than our ancestors. Great-grandfather, for instance, may have had nothing to remember except that he must get to the co-operage factory and be sure to take his lunch with him.

Today the office worker arrives on the job and picks up the threads of hundreds of uncompleted tasks. His memory is so taxed that he can't trust it. He has to rely mainly on memo pads and other reminders.

The brain, grown accustomed to relying on "memory reminders," naturally gets in the habit of letting the jotted note do the work. The real memory becomes unreliable, weakened by disuse. However, does that matter much? What is the difference, just so we have a system for not forgetting?

The brain has an opposite function that has never been given the atention it deserves—namely, the ability to forget. Children have this ability. They forget because they want to. Many a child is honest, insisting that he doesn't recall having done such-and-such a taboo.

We forget the things we want to forget. Like the man who dislikes repaying loans, or who "puts out of his mind" the unpleasant things of life.

When nerves get on edge, this instinctive "forgettory," the opposite of memory, asserts itself. A man tosses in bed, going over and over the details of what he did today or plans to do or say tomorrow.

Considerable of the unpleasantness of life is due to inability to forget. But a forgettory can be cultivated, quite as much as memory can be improved.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

No, the bootlegger, and his children, must be ostracized from society, our schools and associations, or we can never make our children forget the thought of liquor, but we still can—and this is where we are remiss—fortify their minds and imagination against the curse of liquor and make them strong in body and soul to resist it even though it is under the control of a Government and law-abiding people.

This is a side of this grave question which some of our prohibitionists fail to take into consideration altogether.—Quebec Telegraph.

With this view the Examiner is thoroughly in accord.

It has been more than once pointed out that the temperance organizations are falling down in their work because they have left the fight to the lawmakers and the law-enforcement officers, professing to believe that the evils of intemperance can be banished merely by the passing of a statute.

There are still victims of alcohol despite prohibition laws, but, unfortunately, the excellent missionary work of the old days has been dropped.

Our Eastern contemporary is not far wrong when it declares that the great horror, danger and evil of intemperance should be taught every man, woman and child from one end of the country to the other.

There is not enough of that kind of instruction, and a great too much reliance placed upon the law as a protection against the ill-effects of strong drink.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Two utterances which got into print yesterday are worthy of the attention of all of us who have the interest and welfare of Canada at heart.

One was the annual report presented to the United States Congress by Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, in which he pointed out that the United States during the past four years has cut down its public expenditures to such an extent that the total during the past year was $3,000,000,000 less than in 1920 and that the total national taxation paid by citizens of the United States had fallen from $54 per head in 1920 to $27 per head now. He expressed the view also that business in the United States is in a "thoroughly sound position," that industrial production has increased, that employment has increased, that the railway traffic is at almost the highest level on record, and that even agriculture is finding its position greatly improved.

The other utterance to which we refer as having found publication yesterday was that of Sir Frederic Williams-Taylor, General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, the greatest financial institution in Canada and one of the largest on the Continent. Sir Frederic in his ddress at the annual meeting of the bank said, among other things, the following:

"My view, in brief, of the situation is that business generally in Canada is unsatisfactory, but with some bright spots. This expression of opinion may not be popular, but it seems to me much better to look the matter squarely in the face than to allow ourselves to be led astray by popular delusions. That general trade is dull, to put it mildly, is no delusion. Many of our industries are running on half-time, with diminished profits or no profits at all. Taxation is heavy to an extent which discourages new enterprises. The cost of living is high and our population in point of numbers is at a standstill, or worse."

Sir Frederic went on to say that we in Canada have much to be thankful for, for if this were a poor country our case would be a bad one, "but we have riches in our forests, our fields, our fisheries and in our minerals, and also in our mighty water powers and in the industry and ambition of our people." If Canada were a private business enterprise, he said, the situation would present no great difficulty because the obvious course would be followed of cutting down expenses and getting on a paying basis. For this last he said two things are essential, namely lower taxation and at least as cheap living as in the United States.

How does the contrast between these two utterances strike you, particularly when in regard to Secretary Mellon's statements concerning debt and taxation in the United States we have to admit that in this country our public debt has been increasing by hundreds of millions of dollars at a time when the United States' debt has been decreasing by thousands of millions of dollars, and that our national taxation in Canada has been increasing in a period when taxation in the United States has been decreasing by one-half?

The Journal does not wish to be a Jeremiah. We have been calling attention constantly to the absence of any effort by the Government and Parliament in this country to reduce expenditure, or to make a beginning in the way of decreased public debt and lessened taxation. Perhaps we have been suspected of making the worst of the Canadian financial case for political reasons. Let any who may have that thought in their minds reflect that the General Manager of the Bank of Montreal is certainly not speaking from a party standpoint.

The subject is distasteful enough to us, but looking ahead of a time which is evidently steadily approaching when the decreased public expenditure of the United States, and decreased taxation there, will bring a tremendous economic pressure to bear on the Canadian people and will tend to crush our industry and drive a large part of our present Canadian business and many of our people into the United States, it is impossible to feel peace of mind regarding the apathy of our government and people towards the financial position of the country nationally.—Ottawa Journal.

So far the Toronto Star has not blamed Sir Adam Beck for the defeat of the Argos and Varsity. It must have overlooked that.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—Export heifers were $6 to $6.75, cows, $4.50 to $5.50 and bulls $4.25 to $5 a cwt. One load of steers averaging 1,250 lbs each went to a packer at $7 a cwt. A few light choice butchers' heifers were bought at $6.50 a cwt. The exporters only secured around 150 steers up till noon, but were dickering on five loads for which the seller asked $8 a cwt.

There was the usual Christmas run of baby beeves and choice ones brought $10 to $10.50, and those of fair quality $7 to $9 a cwt. Few handyweight butchers made over $6.75 a cwt. But real choice ones were scarce. Good butchers were $6.25 to $6.50; mediums, $5.50 to $5.75, and good common butchers, $4.50 to $4.75. Canner cows were readily taken at $2 a cwt. Trading was brisk all morning and the scales could not keep pace with the demand.

Calves were again a good market with real choice vealers 12 cents and good light ones 11 cents. Medium quality calves brought up to 9½ cents and common ones averaged 7 cents. Grassers were usually 4 cents a pound.

The lamb market was slow, but appeared to be at least steady. Four showy 75-lb. lambs brought 17 cents a pound and a load of handyweights with nearly half bucks sold at 13½ for the ewes and milchers and 11½ cents for the bucks. Choice light lambs were 13 to 13½ cents for ewes and wethers. Heavy lambs were wanted not above 12 cents. Good butchers' sheep sold at 7 cents.

Today's hog prices were unstable and one packer buyer admitted that they might be a little firmer than the regulation $8.50 a cwt. f.o.b. price. It was generally admitted that any sales would be registered at $8.75 a cwt. f.o.b. or an advance of 25 cents a cwt.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8. —Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:— Sterling demand $4.71; Sterling cables $4.71 3-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Smashing of high price records for the season took place to-day in grain and provisions with corn and wheat reaching a new peak on all the months that were traded in. Reports of severe crop damage to corn in Argentina led to a big general wave of speculative buying. Corn closed strong at 2 to 2 3-8 cents advance, May 1.26 3-4. Wheat finished from 1 1-2 to 1 7-8 cents net higher, May 164 to 164 1-8 and July 144 7-8 to 145, with oats 1 3-8 to 1 7-8 cents up and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to 20 cents gain.

According to advices which were widely circulated, the corn crop in Argentina may yet produce half a normal yield, provided heavy rains come within the next two weeks.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—There was some enquiries from foreign buyers for Canadian grain here to-day, but outside of sales of a few loads that were on passage little new business was reported. The trade in cash grain in the local market was reported quiet, but the tone was steady and prices unchanged with car lots of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.06, and No. 3 grade at $1.05 per bushel, ex-track, Ontario No. 2 white oats at 62 cents No. 3 grade at 60 cents and No. 4 grade at 59 cents per bushel, ex-track.

In sympathy with the strengh that has prevailed in the Canadian cash wheat situation of late a stronger feeling developed in the local market for spring grades of flour and prices were advanced 10 cents per barrel. There was no change in winter wheat flour, but the undertone was firm.

The feature of the millfeed situation was the firmer feeling that prevailed and prices advanced $1.00 per ton. There was no change in rolled oats.

Prices on strictly fresh eggs were advanced five cents per dozen, which was attributed to the limited supplies coming forward. There was no change in storage grades. The butter market was without any new feature to note, prices were steady and the trade volume fair.

There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for supplies of cheese and as cables were stronger a fair amount of business resulted and it was reported that sales of western June made white and colored goods were made at 18 1-4 cents per pound on the spot and some holders asking 18 1-2 cents per pound.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.65 to $2.75.

MURDERED MAN CUT TO PIECES

Five Persons Held in Hamilton Murder Case—A Woman Helped.

HAMILTON, December 9. — Canadian Press. — Yakum Stabo, Panko Stabo, Bill Shermett, Mike Radich, and Mrs. Joe Baytoizae, held by the police, will all face a charge of murdering Joe Baytoizae, following the verdict of the coroner's jury, which last night heard further evidence in the case.

The jury found that Baytoizae, whose body was found on the mountainside, near Mount Albion, was killed in the cellar of his own house, and his body taken to the spot in an auto.

They found that the men above named were implicated.

Mrs. Baytoizae is in the Hamilton jail, with all the male prisoners excepting Shermett, who is now awaiting trial in Sydney, N. S., and will be brought to Hamilton.

Shermett had bloodstains on his trousers the morning after Baytoizae's death, it was declared. There were bloodstains on the cellar floor.

The body was placed in a large black blanket, tied and taken through a cellar window at the side of the house to an auto which waited in an alleyway. There were red stains on the window of the house, and Mrs. Baytoizae ordered her oldest son to paint every window in the house red.

The sons of the victim unfolded the story of the crime. The youngest lad, seven years old, declared he saw a man stick a knife into his father when he was underneath the cellar steps. He could not name the man. The other boy, Walter, was sent to the store at 5 o'clock in the morning. On returning he saw a large bundle being pulled through a cellar window. He noticed the shoes hanging out, and told the jurors that he was sure they were those his father wore. The lad had been warned by his father not to repeat anything. Tony said his father went to the races on July 31st, and came back at one o'clock in the morning. His mother struck him over the head with a heavy iron poker, and he fell to the floor. A second blow was struck and his father put to bed. The next morning his mother told him that his father had been taken away. He said that the men now held were present. His mother struck his father, the boy said, because he lost his money. Walter also named the men who were at the house that night. He also swore that there were blood stains on Bill Shermett's clothing.

Corroboration of this was given by John Urkewich, at whose place Shermett boarded. He said that he had noticed the blood stains on Shermett's pants, and that Shermett and Urkewich's wife had washed them off.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 9.—The fire alarm rang in from Ward Three on Monday morning about nine o'clock. The chimney of the house on Queen Street, just at the end of the town, was on fire, and so much smoke came from it as to envelop the house. The fire truck was soon on the spot and extinguished the blaze. No damage was done. The house is a double house, known as the Fred. Kellar home, and is occupied by Mr. Hines and family and his son and family.

On motion of Mrs. Turner and Mrs. F. Phillips, it was decided to give over the one League meeting on the Monday night of the Mission Band concert. Plans were discussed for the winter months. The President asked all members to be present next Monday and come with the fifth chapter of Matthew and the first chapter of Genesis memorized, as there will be a "baseball game" in the Sunday school room on that night.

As Miss Keir, the missionary vice-president, was unable to be present she sent her programme. Rev. W. Elliot had this in charge: Devotional scripture reading and topic, Miss Catherine Clarke; vocal duett by Mrs. Shapter and Miss Jordan, accompanied on the piano by Miss Evelyn Shapter; a reading, "The Shepherd Story" by Miss Rose Hollenby; topic, "Our First Race Problem." A story of the Indians of Canada by S. J. Abernethy. This dealt with the work of the Methodist missions to help the Indians. There was also a short outline of Rev. Wm. Case, the father of Indian missions. Every item on the programme was good and enjoyed by those present.

Subscriptions were also taken for the forward movement by Miss Hoover, the missionary treasurer.

The clerk of the town of Campbellford reported for the month of November, five births, two marriages and tow deaths.

THOUSANDS SANG AS GALLOWS THUD

Execution in England This Morning of William George Smith.

HULL, Eng., Dec. 9. — (United Press).—William George Smith, a young painter, for whose reprieve thousands of persons prayed in an open field Sunday, and on whose behalf workers of Hull threatened a general strike, died on the scaffold to-day. A petition to the Home Office proved unavailing, and a crowd of 4,000 gathered outside the prison gates and sang a hymn while the execution was taking place. There were no immediate disturbances despite the threat of Commander Kenworthy, M.P., that rioting and bloodshed would ensue unless Smith were reprieved.

Smith killed a married woman with whom he had been intimate. She was older than he, and the sympathies of the community were with the condemned. He climbed the scaffold unassisted to-day, and prayed a moment while the hangman waited, and met death bravely. Outside, the music of the hymn swelled on the morning air, many women fainting as the thud of the execution could be heard.

CHICAGO'S WATER SUPPLY

E. D. Adcock Argues That Chicago Has Authority to Withdraw 10,000 Cubic Feet Per Second.

WASHINGTON, December 9. — Federal authority to regulate the withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan by the Chicago Sanitary District as long as it does not impair navigation on the Chicago River, was challenged in the Supreme Court yesterday by E. D. Adcock, in arguing appeal from injunction limiting the withdrawal to 4167 cubic feet per second, designated in a permit issued by the Secretary of War.

The District, Adcock contended, had ample authority for the withdrawal of 10,000 cubic feet, by the present rate of diversion, which is under attack by the government.

Replying to a question from the bench, he asserted that in the absence of legislation by Congress, the Federal Government did not have authority to restrict the flow on the ground of injury to navigation on the Great Lakes. The government's side of the case will be heard today.

With all the pomp and pageantry of pre-war days, the King and Queen closely guarded drove to Westminster from Buckingham Palace in the famous state coach of gilt and crystal, surrounded by life guards.

BETHANY, Dec. 9.—The annual bazaar held on Saturday evening by the Adult Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday School was a social and profitable success. The weather was responsible for keeping several away on account of the deplorable condition of the roads, but a good crowd from the village and vicinity were present to view and purchase the many useful and pretty articles which were priced to fit the pocket book of all present with the result that with the exception of a very few articles they were sold out at nine o'clock. The Sunday School room was very attractively decorated with evergreen trees and red streamers with bright Xmas bells hanging above the several booths. Tea was served from five to seven, after which Mr. A. Monk, Supt. of the school opened the bazaar with a few well chosen words, and the singing of the National Anthem.

On entering the Sunday School room the visitors were heartily welcomed by Mrs. P. O. Brown.

These tables were capably looked after by the Misses Marion Fallis, Jean Thorndyke, Betty Salisbury, Helen Byers, Mildred Davis and Winnie Dawe, members of the Girls Mission Club. A candy booth was also in evidence which was entirely under the control of the G. M. C. under the direction of the president, Miss P. Howden, assisted by the Misses Hazel Steer and Mabel Challice. MUST RESPECT ALL TREATIES OF ALLIES

Note Will Be Despatched to China by Allied Powers.

(By Ray G. Marshall—United Press Correspondent).

PEKING, Dec. 9.—The diplomatic corps is considering the immediate despatch of a note to China, warning the present De Facto Government of Peking that whatever permanent government is established, they must have the assurance that it will observe all existing treaties.

Otherwise, de jure recognition will be withheld. "Easy over the forthcoming visit of Sun Yat Sen, the diplomatic corps fears that one of the first acts in connection with Sun's arrival may be the scrapping of all treaties. Borjen is a military power in the south. Sun is regarded, nevertheless, as a dangerous political schemer. If the existing treaties were broken they could be restored only with difficulty, even by a subsequent Conservative Government.

The plans of Sun Yat Sen, Feng Yu Hsiang, C. T. Wong and others are anxiously awaited by foreign diplomats.

MAYOR'S RECIPE FOR GOOD TOWN

Inspirational Address by Worship at Y.M.C.A.—Citizens' Help Essential.

"The recipe for a good town" was the subject of the inspirational talk given by Mayor Turner at the first of the weekly suppers held in the Y.M.C.A. banquet hall the other evening. Mr. Turner brought along a large show card on which was neatly painted his "recipes."

The first five ingredients were "Pep," "Grit," "Push," "Snap," "Energy," and these were all necessary in the citizens of the imaginary town. The next were "Schools," "Morality" and "Churches," which brought about "Harmony" and cordiality.

The next was "Advertising" and "Persistence" and then "Public spirit" and "Co-operation."

Then the people living in the town must "talk about it" and "speak well of it," and the town must have a "healthy location."

Each citizen should "help to improve it," and "advertise in its papers," and "patronize its merchants." They must "elect good men to office," and "a good band, the best advertisement in a town," should be supported.

The players on the P.C.I. Rugby team were the guests of honor, and were congratulated for their showing by Mr. G. H. Roper. Dr. F. C. Neal spoke of the clean and sporting way in which the boys had played every game.

Robert Sturgeon, the winner of the Junior and Intermediate Tennis Championships of the city, was presented with two crests by Mr. Geo. Scott on behalf of the local Tennis Club.

ALLUSIONS TO "MR. A" BY ACTORS ARE FORBIDDEN

British Lord Chamberlain Applies Ban on Comic Hits.

LONDON, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press Cable).—It was announced here Monday that the Lord Chamberlain, who has supervision over the staging of plays and theatres, has issued a ban on any reference to "Mr. A." in theatrical productions.

This decision deals a serious blow to comedians and topical song writers, especially as the Christmas pantomime season is near. Among those who take the decision seriously it has drawn contemptuous criticism on the ground that the efforts of the India office to suppress the Indian potentates' identity having proved abortive the state department is now determined to prove itself fruitlessly interfering. They ask how can such a ban prevent obilque jests and intermissions, probably realized only by the keener section of the audience because their meaning is hidden.

PAYSHEETS WRONG

OTTAWA, Dec 9.—Evidence of wrong entry dates in paysheets of a team of horses owned by a road foreman being rented for country work and carried on the paysheets in a name other than that of the owner, together with testimony of a "loose" system of timekeeping, marked the judicial probe into Carleton County road work in Osgoode Township, before Judge Colin O'Brien at the court house Monday.

The inquiry which was asked for some time ago, by the county council, has nothing whatever to do with the municipal affairs, or road work of the township of Osgoode itself.

"Eczema All Over Arms Suffered for 12 Years"

Mrs. Murray Hough, Wiarton, Ont., writes:

"I had eczema for twelve years. Every once in a while it would break out and spread all over my arms. I tried all kinds of treatments to relieve it, but without success. One Spring it broke out and nothing gave me relief, even the salve I got from the doctor did no good. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment and it healed the eczema in a short time. INFRINGED ON TRADE MARK WRIGLEY FINED $1,471,101

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Judge J. H. Wilkerson in federal court here yesterday ordered the William Wrigley Co., chewing gum manufacturers, to pay $1,471,101.37 to the L. P. Larson, a competitor, for infringement on Larson company patent.

The amount is supposed to represent profits the Wrigley firm made on the sale of double mint chewing gum from 1914 to 1918. The court held the name constituted an infringement on Larson's patented name of "wintermint."

A master in chancery had formerly awarded Larson $2,800,000 on his claim. Judge Wilkerson reduced this amount by charging Larson with Wrigley's advertising bill on double mint gum.

TO GIVE ADDRESS LOCAL ENGINEERS

Interesting Speaker at Thursday Night's Meeting in Chamber of Commerce.

The Peterboro Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada will hold their next regular meeting in the Chamber of Commerce, Thursday, Dec. 11th, at 8.15 p.m. The branch have been fortunate in securing a speaker, Mr. J. D. Craig, B.A., B.Sc., M.E.I.C., of the Department of Interior, Ottawa.

Mr. Craig is engineer of the International Boundary Commission, and was officer in charge of the Arctic Expeditions of 1922 and 1923, organized by the Department of the Interior through its North - West Territories and Yukon Branch.

Mr. Craig has consented to give an address on the "Experiences of the Government Engineers' Arctic Trips" and this address will be illustrated with six reels of films taken by Mr. Geo. H. Valiquette, the Government cinematographer.

These expeditions were made in the famous old steamer "Arctic," which was taken over by the Canadian Government in 1922 and was refitted and stored under the supervision of her commander, Captain J. E. Bernier, who has many northern trips to his credit in the "Arctic."

The 1922 expedition went as far north as 76 deg.10 min. to Craig Harbor, on Ellismere Island, where posts were established, while in 1923 the expedition reached a point 78 deg. 47 min. north and covered 7,250 miles during its three months' absence. An interesting feature of the 1923 expedition was the trial of three Eskimos before Mr. L. A. Rivet, K.C., of Montreal. The jury for this trial were chosen from the officers and crew of the "Arctic."

The executive of the local branch are congratulating themselves on their good fortune in securing Mr. Craig for this meeting, and feel sure that his address will be most popular and of great interest, not only to engineers, but to the general public. They therefore wish to take this opportunity to extend to anyone who may be interested a cordial invitation to attend this meeting.

"Tell Zobeid to prepare for the wedding. Let it be a wedding after the Mongol manner. Bestow on every one of my soldiers a horse, a slave, and three gold pieces. Bestow on every one of my war captains nine times nine white stallions, nine times nine precious pearls, nine times nine crimson robes of honor, nine times nine pieces of gold, nine times nine rolls of silk, and nine times nine female slaves. Have all the astrologers, sorcerers, soothsayers, and witch-doctors fed at my expense. Let there be a tinkling of bells and burning of incense and chanting of songs throughout Bagdad. See that all the Moslem priests be crucified at the altars of their impotent Allah. Have all the Christian and Jewish merchants' teeth pulled, one by one, so that their cries may make sweet music. Give to the Princess Zobeid as my wedding present the Kingdom of Tartary, the Chieftainship of Outer Mongolia, the Viceroyalty of Manchuria, the Island of Wak, and the revenues from nineteen thousand villages and cities in Russia and Siberia. Tell her that I shall confer upon her the charming and elegant title of the Model of Ten Thousand Female Generations to Come!"

"Listen is obey, O Great Dragon!" murmured Wong K'ai and withdrew, while the Prince of the Mongols walked over to the window and opened it.

He looked out.

Gradually the loom of the night lifted; the fires set here and there by the looting Mongol warriors had died out; and the smoke veil which had covered the town twisted up in baroque spirals and tore into gauze-like arabesques.

He gave a sensuous, throaty exclamation of triumph.

For dou there at his feet Bagdad became more and more distinct every minute. There stretched hundreds of flat, dazzling white roof-tops, richly adorned towers, fairy-like turrets, and bell-shaped Arab domes. Under the rays of the young sun the sloping roof of a mosque in the middle of the city burned like the plumage of a gigantic peacock with every mysterious blend of blue and green and purple and heliotrope. The whole was buried in flaunting gardens gay with many-colored trees and shrubs and bushes, with crotons and mangoes, with roses and mellingtonias, with poinsettias and begonia creepers.

Bagdad! Bagdad was his! His the dominion over Araby and—soon, soon—over all Islam! His the subjection of these stiff-necked Arabs, these stiff-necked Semites! His the worship of their grief-stricken sobbing and wailing that beat up from city and palace in immense tone waves. . . .

Yet in the palace there was one that night who neither wailed nor sobbed nor complained. It was Zobeid, although there were Mongol warriors in her very bedroom, watching her for fear that she might commit suicide.

But there was no such thought in her brain. Huddled close against Zemzem, she whispered to her the reason for her serene fortitude of soul.

"Ahmed is coming!" she said. "Aye! He is coming! I saw it in the magic crystal!"

"But he is alone, Heaven-Born! What can one man do against the Mongol horde?"

"Have you ever been in love, Zemzem?" smiled Zobeid.

"Oh, yes. Three or four times."

"I do not believe you."

"Why not, Heaven-Born?"

"Because, if you had really been in love, you would know that the loved one can do anything—anything and everything. Good-night, Zemzem!"

And she slept quietly, fearlessly with neither dream nor nightmare, while down the road from Terek el-Bey, the Thief of Bagdad spurred his great black stallion through the night, through the green and yellow of young morning, at last arriving at Bagdad and demanding entrance with a loud voice.

A yellow-skinned, flat-nosed, iron-capped warrior appeared on the wall and looked down.

"Go away!" he said in his loutish Mongol speech. "The gates of Bagdad are closed until after the wedding."

"Whose wedding?"

"The wedding of Cham Sheng, the Great Dragon, and Zobeid, daughter of the Caliph."

The man withdrew; returned as Ahmed leaned from his horse, rattling at the gate, beating against it with the hilt of his sword, shouting nosily and insolently:

"Let me in, let me in, dog-snouted Mongol pig! Hey, there, let me in, O most unbeautiful yellow pimple, bereft of all the virtues!"

The other raised his battle-axe threateningly.

"I gave you fair words," he said. "Now I give you fair warning. If you do not go away, immediately, quietly, like a decent lad, by the tribal gods of my clan, I shall . . ."

"Pah!" sneered Ahmed. "Powerless gods—the gods of your clan! Swinish gods for a swinish race! Pot-bellied, yellow-skinned, slit-eyed, ridiculous, indecent Mongol gods! Wait! Hold your hand a second"—as the battle-axe was about to come down whistling through the air—"and I will show you what mine own God can do! Allah, the One, the All-Powerful! Look, Mongol pig! Behold the blessed miracle!"

And, the thought popping into his brain, his fingers obeying the thought, he dipped them deeply into the magic silver box that was filled to the brim with the tiny seeds—the wishing seeds—the seeds from the Tree of Righteous but Unfulfilled Desires.

He sprinkled the seeds thickly on the ground

He spoke hurriedly, fervently:

"O Allah! I want soldiers! Mounted, armed soldiers! Brave Moslem soldiers! Fearless soldiers, Arabs and Turks and Moors and Egyptians—soldiers from all the lands of Islam—to protect Bagdad from Mongol desecration—to save the ancient city—to save Zobeid! Soldiers I want—numerous as the waves of the sea, the sand grains of the desert!"

And suddenly the Mongol captain's sneer changed into a stare of incredulity, a grimace of surprise, fear, horror, as, springing from the ground like great flowers, there rose an immense army of mounted Moslem fighting-men, men of a dozen races, brandishing their weapons.

RECITAL IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

(By Jeannette.)

The vocal recital given in St. Paul's Presbyterian church last evening by Albert E. Greenlaw, basso-chantante, of Detroit, assisted by Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Edwina Palmer, was an interesting exposition of the art of this colored singer who is a popular favorite in Peterborough. The recital was brief, ending at half past nine o'clock, and was attended by nearly three hundred people. Held under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, the proceeds will be devoted to the religious work of this organization. Mr. H. R. H. Kenner introduced the visiting singer of the evening.

Mr. Greenlaw has a splendid, full, rotund voice, rich in tone and of deep bass timbre. He sings with expression and enthusiasm, doing his best work possibly in the negro melodies and the negro spirituals that form a portion of his programme.

He sang very beautifully a number of selections that were simple yet effective. A trio of spirituals, those odd characteristic melodies that the negro slaves in the cotton field sang as they worked, the vocal expression of the plaintive woe of a captive race, with their deep religious sentiment and recurrent refrain, were heartily applauded. They included "Nobody Knows the Trouble I See," "The Gospel Train," and "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray."

A rendition of portions of "Old Black Joe" and "My Old Kentucky Home" was splendidly given, and "One Fleeting Hour," with violin obligato by Miss Palmer, was a lovely, appealing number. Mr. Greenlaw also sang the favorite "Bandolero," its declamatory passages and rich music eminently suited to his powerful voice; a couple of little love songs, "June Will Bring the Roses," and "Stars May Forget to Shine Out," also a tender, minor-toned lullaby, "Sleep, Little Baby of Mine." Mr. M. B. Chenhall played Mr. Greenlaw's accompaniments with masterly proficiency.

Renewed applause was also given to the fine instrumental music played by Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Edwina Palmer. Both played extremely well, as usual, several selections that harmonized with the simple nature of the vocal music.

Miss Palmer's contributions included a Slavonic dance, by Kreisler; Massenet's sweet, symphonic "Meditation," from "Thais," and Schubert's dainty ballet music from the opera "Rosamunde." Miss Palmer's music was beautifully rounded out by the sympathetic accompaniments on the piano by Miss Logan.

Pianoforte solo numbers by Miss Logan were a lovely rendition of "A Fairy Tale," by Medtner; and "Iriana," by Aldeniz, a thing of unexpected rhythm and delicate little roulades of clear, translucent sound, descriptive of a street scene in a Spanish village.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 9.—(United Press).—New Orleans is to be the scene of one of the most notable gatherings of churchmen in the fall of 1925 that ever assembled in the south—perhaps in the nation, if plans being worked out by the Protestant Episcopal Church of America go through.

The meeting will be the annual convention of that religious body and it will attract bishops, rectors and other prominent church workers from all parts of the United States, Canada, tropical America, as well as from England and other parts of the world, according to Charles W. Tompkins and William Hoster of New York, assistant treasurer and director of publicity respectively for the National Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church. They came here recently to make preliminary arrangements for the gathering. The convention of the Women's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church will be held at the same time. Both meetings will be held in the local Athenaeum and the Shrine Temple, where plenty of room is available.

Fully five thousand churchmen are expected to be attracted to the Crescent City for the convention, including 130 bishops and more than three hundred rectors.

GEORGE PETERS' 92ND BIRTHDAY

On Friday last, December 5th, Mr. George Peters, of 450 Rogers street, celebrated his 92nd birthday. One of the oldest residents of the city, Mr. Peters is one of the most modest. A man who all his life has been interested in books and reading and education, he was the mentor of many of the residents of the district in his younger years, when he taught school at Cavan, Orono and Smith, and he will be remembered also by many citizens as the kindly guardian for a quarter of a century of the old Mechanics' Institute, the library that supplied the city with reading matter before the present Carnegie-endowed institution came into being.

Mr. Peters retired from active life some years ago. He is still an inveterate reader, although a large reading glass is necessary to supplement the failing sight of the mild blue eyes. A small man, with white beard and pink cheeks, Mr. Peters has the humorous, kindly outlook of one whose life has been passed in quiet ways and peaceful pursuits. Until recently his chief indoor amusements were studies of Euclid and algebra, with the garden occupying his attention in the summer time.

Mr. Peters was born in the West Indies, on the Island of Barbadoes, on December 5th, 1832, of Scotch parentage. His father was a British soldier, attached to the 93rd Highland Regiment, stationed in the West Indies. When Mr. Peters was three and one-half years old, his parents went to England. They came to Canada in 1838, just about the time of the Mackenzie Rebellion, making the voyage on the British man-o'-war Inconstant. The soldiers, who wore kilts, were obliged to discard them in the cold Canadain winters. As a little boy, Mr. Peters can remember his father speaking of the rebels strung up to their death on the streets of Kingston.

He went to Normal school in Toronto, where he can remember first having smelt coal-oil, in the year 1859, when the evil-smelling, unfined oil of those days illuminated the hall for a dance that wound up the Normal school year. Regulations were very strict in those days. Scholars of opposite sex were not alowed to use the same rooming-houses and they were forbidden to walk or talk with each other on the streets or in the class-rooms, so that the annual dance was quite an event.

And Mr. Peters remembers, too, the first telegraph installed, in St. Catharines, about 1847, when the citizens used to watch the wires in the expectation of seeing the messages fly along their exterior.

In 1862, Mr. and Mrs. Peters were married in Bowmanville. Mrs. Peters is eighty-seven years old, but is a hale and hearty old lady.

During his school-teaching years, Mr. Peters had charges at Kirby, in Clark Township, near Newcastle; at St. Mary's, at Fairmount, in this district, where he went in 1867, and spent three years; then in Orono, in Cavan, where he spent five years teaching school, and in Smith township. Pupils of Mr. Peters are scattered over the United States and Canada. Some of those still living in Peterboro include George E. Elliott, J. J. McBain, Ed. M. Elliott, J. F. Thornton and J. E. A. Fitzgerald. He was probably the first Normal school teacher in charge of rural schools in this district.

Those were the days when compulsory attendance was not in vogue, as now, and when pupils paid a charge of a York shilling a month for their tuition.

Two weeks in August were the annual holidays of the teachers, and it was not until Mr. Peters had been teaching for some time that Saturday holidays came into vogue.

He was one of the first masters to introduce physiological maps into his class room, and some of the trustees considered them too immodest for public presentation.

Mr. Peters rode on the first train carrying passengers from Toronto to Brampton. Invited to go by the engineer, of whose identity little memory remains save that of his cognomen of "Windy Bill," Mr. Peters proudly relates that he went as a "dead-head," and travelled on the engine. "It was like travelling on a boat, the grades were so bad." He remembers also the first boats running across from Toronto to Niagara, the "Chief Justice Robinson," and "William the Fourth." And he can recall the days when wood formed the only fuel, and the streets of "Muddy York," particularly Yonge street, were crammed with wood wagons at all times. At the railway stations, thousands of cords of wood were piled in readiness for transportation needs.

Those were the days, too, when the Canadian Parliament met in Toronto, when Sir John A. MacDonald and D'Arcy McGee were the orators of the House, and when William Lyon Mackenzie was paid scant attention to. Postage rates at that time were high. A letter to the United States cost ten cents, the charge being paid by the receiver of the missive, but the transmitter paid the twenty-five cent charge on mail to the Old Country.

Always an inveterate reader, and especially well-read in English literature and the classics, Mr. Peters has his favorite book in "Pickwick Papers." He remembers the times when reading matter was scare, when magazines were few and far between, and then Lever and Lover, and Bulwer Lytton and Dickens were the popular writers of the day.

For forty-five years, twenty-five of which were spent as librarian in the former Mechanics' Institute, where the readers, as compared with the thousands who patronize the present Public Library, rarely reached beyond the four hundred mark, Mr. Peters has resided in the city of Peterboro. He has seen it through the eyes of a student, a gardener and a book-lover, grow and change. He has seen four generations come and go. His two children, Miss Annie E. Peters, and Walter Peters, of The Examiner staff, both live in the city, the former at home. In the evening of life, with his great grandchildren springing up to follow in his footsteps, with far more years of life than the Psalmist's three score and ten to his credit, he is growing old gracefully and peacefully, an example to the hurried generations of modern times.

Mr. Peters' two children are also interested in educational work. Miss Annie Peters was for thirty years a teacher in the Central school here, and Mr. Walter Peters is the well-known "W.P." of The Examiner staff.

SIR GEORGE E. FOSTER,
Canadian Senator, who was to-day received by the King of England.

PROFESSOR'S DEATH LOSS TO M'MASTER

Dr. Joseph L. Gilmour Had Filled Many Important Posts.

BORN IN PETERBORO.

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—In the sudden death on Monday morning of Prof. Joseph L. Gilmour, McMaster University has lost one of the best beloved and most esteemed members of the Faculty. A sense of depression and gloom is very noticeable throughout the institution. Prof. Gilmour occupied the chair of Homiletics and Pastoral Theology. In addition to his work with the theological students, he lectured on the Bible to the students in arts, so that he was well known to all the members of the student body.

Born In Peterborough.

The late professor was born in Peterborough and obtained his early education in that city. He graduated in arts at the University of Toronto, taking the degree of B.A. in 1895, and later his M.A. and in 1889 he graduated in theology at McMaster University, obtaining the degrees B.Th. and B.D. He pursued advanced study in Edinburgh and Oxford, and also in Germany, studying at Marburg and Berlin. Dr. Gilmour held successful pastorates in Orangeville, Brockville, Hamilton and Montreal, being called from the last of these pastorates to the Faculty of McMaster University in 1907. In 1908 he was given the honorary degree of D.D. by McMaster, and in 1915 Knox College conferred upon him the same degree.

Served as War Chaplain.

During the war Prof. Gilmour acted as Chaplain for four years, serving in Canada and in England. While in England he was one of those instrumental in organizing the work of the Khaki University. He was President of the Upper Canada Bible Society from 1921 to 1924.

Mrs. Gilmour is a sister of J. H. Burnham, M.P., of Peterborough. There is a family of two sons and two daughters, three of whom have completed their university courses at McMaster. Rev. George P. Gilmour is pastor of Olivet Baptist Church, Montreal, nowd on leave of absence studying at Oxford, England; Miss Helen is attending the Ontario College of Education, and Miss Emo is in hospital training. The younger son, Burnham, is attending the University Schools.

The funeral service will be held in Castle Memorial Hall, McMaster University, at 8 o'clock this (Tuesday) evening. The body will remain in the university for the night under a student guard of honor, and will be taken to Peterborough for interment.

Gilmour street, Peterborough, was named after the Gilmour family.

The funeral will be held Wednesday on the arrival of the noon C.P.R. train. Interment in Little Lake cemetery.

COUNTY COURT OPENED TO-DAY

Seven Civil Cases on the List —Address to the Grand Jury.

The December Sessions of the County Court opened at the Court House at ten minutes past one o'clock today, His Honor Judge Huycke presiding. The consideration of seven civil cases made up one of the biggest dockets that has faced the General Sessions of the Peace for some time.

Sergeant of Police A. G. Thomas, in dignified black robes, acted as Court Crier. Members of the Bar present included G. W. Gordon, K.C., F.D. Kerr, K.C., Wilfrid Huycke, R. R. Hall, K.C., A. B. Cunningham, K.C. of Kingston, and V. J. McElderry.

V. Boorman, Geo. E. Baptie, Jno. Chase, Allan Caldwell, Howard T. Fallis, Alex Gibson, Geo. Hall, Hartnett, Thos. H. Graham, H. Reid, E. J. H. Vanstone, Jas. H. Wallace, W. R. Morris(foreman).

His Honour, in his address to the Grand Jury, commented on their good looks, which he considered would no doubt be duplicated by their intelligence. He also referred feelingly to the long and faithful service of the late Court Crier Walter Wood, and to the interest taken in all Court matters by that official. "He was a kind-hearted, true-hearted gentleman, susceptible to all the emotions of human nature, and I speak for all the members of the Bar as well as for myself when I regret and deeply deplore his passing."

His Honour mentioned the eight occupants of the jail at present, five for minor offenses and three on remand. Although there are no prisoners awaiting trial, recommendation was made of consideration of two cases which would be presented to them. He also asked them to enquire as to the vagrancy charge laid against one old man of seventy-one years now in the jail.

Reminder was made of the Grand Jury's duty as being not to try the prisoners, but simply to decide whether the evidence presented justified the holding of a trial.

The charge in both instances referred to which would be presented for the decision of the Grand Jury was subornation of perjury, and His Honour explained the circumstances which led up to the laying of both charges ,also the legal meaning of a charge of perjury or false evidence and of subornation of perjury, the latter being influence brought to bear on a witness to cause him or her to perjure himself or herself.

It was the duty of the Grand Jury to decide whether these charges were worthy of trial, the subordination of perjury charge being represented as a very serious offence against the law, or whether they were simply trumped up charges.

He referred to the inspection of public institutions, which was one of their duties, and to the two objects to be considered, firstly, the safety and comfort of the inmates, and, secondly, the economy used in their upkeeping, as being a consideration of the taxpayers.

Two applicants for naturalization presented themselves to the court: Antonio Fabiano and Carmen Carravaggi, both householders, and both married, the former a resident of the district for the past forty years, the latter for about nineteen years.

Mr. F. D. Kerr testified for the latter, and the Chief of Police, on being called, said he had never had occasion to arrest either, and knew nothing to their detriment.

Both, however, were in the dark as to a knowledge of British institutions, which His Honor regarded as an essential.

Fabiano can not read or write and Carravaggi possesses these advantages to a slight extent only.

His Honour took their requests under advisement.

G. N. Gordon announced that the jury case, involving Clarence Bacon and Walter T. Belleghem, in a claim for damages arising out of an automobile collision, with Peck, Kerr and McElderry for the plaintiff and Gordon and O'Brien for the defendant, had been settled.

The non-jury cases of Edmund Wand vs. James Bogue and of Nicholas Renzetti vs. Jno T. O'Connell were laid over for decision by Judge Ward, of Cobourg, as to his final action in both.

The petit jury was composed as follows: Chas. Wiggins, C. W. Garbutt, Douro; T. J. Gordon, Wm. J. Breckenridge, Asphodel; Wm. Hickson, Ennismore; Arthur A. Simmons, Chas. Harding, Jacob H. Payne, Lakefield; Wm. J. Sanderson, Asphodel; Albert Jones, Robt. Hamilton, Dummer, and Bert Trotter.

In the case of Grant Riley Hart and Ross Hart, of Belmont Township, respectively, being a claim for $500 damages arising out of alleged unlawful seizure, W. F. Huycke appeared for the plaintiff and Gordon and O'Brien for the defendant. The men in the case are distantly related.

The plaintiff, Grant Riley Hart, was the first witness called by W. F. Huycke. He testified that, on an absence at Cobourg, his stock and implements on his farm in Belmont Township had been seized by Ross Hart, the information to this effect coming to him in a letter from his wife. He also cited in his claim a certain stove and scales, both having been loaned to the defendant by him last winter.,

W. F. Huycke brought in the item of the loss of milk and butter to the plaintiff's family by reason of the seizure of the cattle, a point to which objection was raised by Mr. Gordon as being too remote from the argument. Objection disregarded by the court.

On cross-examination by G. N. Gordon, acting for the defendant, the witness admitted that a five-year-old heifer, sold during one summer by his wife, on his authority, brought $27, and that he couldn't say whether all the animals on his farm were of equal value or not. Queried as to whether he intended to sell his goods and chattels before removing to Cobourg to reside, he answered that it was his own business, "Your business is to answer my questions," returned Mr. Gordon.

Exhibit One was a note given by the plaintiff to Ross Hart, introduced by Mr. Gordon, which was dated January 12th, 1924, for $60, for two cows bought from Ross Hart for $30 each. "So these two cows which you bought in January for $30 each, grew in value until now they are valued at $75 each," said Mr. Gordon.

The note was never paid, the plaintiff stating that his cattle had gone on seizure towards its payment. The plaintiff also admitted accounts for groceries and insurance owing to Ross Hart of about $100.

A wagon was inserted into the argument, the witness having paid $74 for it eight years ago, and Mr. Gordon claiming that it was now worth $10.

"Yes, I know some claim that," replied the witness, "and maybe you would like to buy it for that amount yourself, so that you could drive down town in it and get twice that for it."

Mrs. Isabel Hart, wife of the plaintiff, was then called. She related the events of September 8th, when, in her husband's absence, the seizure of goods was made.

SOME STYLES AS SEEN ON FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 9.—(United Press).—As has been said before, summer is the season for the poor girl and winter the season for the rich girl. But this year one must alter that statement, for there seems to be no poor girls.

If you don't believe this—hunt for a girl with a simple little blue serge suit. You can't find her. She's wearing a smart cloth coat trimmed with fur this season and she looks like a million dollars.

Thanks to the furriers, we have furs and furs. Some of them cat furs and some of them sables, but they all look about alike when dyed and used in trimming smart winter models. Millinery has stabilized itself until all smart cloche shapes look alike. Some of them cost $2 and some of them cost $50 but when worn properly they all give the same effect.

Just now we see dozens of long fur coats, as the weather is demanding them. The short fur jacquettes which were worn up until a week or so ago are fast disappearing and in their place are either cloth coats trimmed in fur or entire coats of fur.

There are many coats of leopard since this seems to be one of the most popular furs of the year. Any of them are collared with red fox. They are usually straight-lined affairs and cut rather short as to hemline.

Also one sees much color, such as red cloth coats trimmed about border, collar and cuffs with dark fur, like seal, skunk or fox. Green is likewise a popular shade this year. And certain shades of henna are good.

Among the fur coats worn by the younger set are those of natural muskrats. These are popular with the college girl, who wears sensible tan shoes and light tan hosiery and a small felt hat of dark shade.

The black and white effects which have been so popular are not as noticeable as they have been. Black enlivened with red is newer, the red being introduced as lining, or piping, etc., on the coat or suit.

Artificial flowers play no small part this season. Every one is wearing a little bouquet on the fur coat collar. Little red berries, red carnations and orchids are the favorite flowers.

Plaids are conspicuous on the Avenue. Handbags, shoes, kerchiefs, hats, gloves and costumes all use plaid trimmings. Seldom, however, does one see an entire costume of plain, since plaid is used as a trim primarily.

Velvet Frocks.

Velvet is a popular fabric this season. There are simple frocks using this material as well as elaborately beaded ones. Some of the prettiest evening frocks are straight-lined, beltless affairs of pastel velvet without any trimming other than a band of self-colored ostrich or marabou about the hem. Orchid velvet makes a lovely evening gown and such shades as amber, turquoise, coral and nile green are equally beautiful.

These frocks are so simple as to line that they can easily be made at home, if one wishes to make them. They are invariably sleeveless, round as to neckline and straight-lined from top to bottom. No finishing other than the bias design is required at the neckline or about the armpits. It is the material and the correct following of the figure which marks them as chic.

Circular Godets.

Since so many frocks are using the circular godets to give the popular full hemline, it is well to add a word about godets. First, they must be placed at the front or sides of the skirt and never in the rear since the backs of this season's frock must be as plain and straight-lined as possible.

The godet may begin above or below the knee, but where the skirt is quite short it is best to have it begin above the knee. The prettiest way of finishing the skirt with the godet hemline is to use a fur border, as fur accentuates the circular effect. The extremely tall person should beware of the godet skirt, as it is usually unbecoming to her.

MOROS ABIDE BY OLD KORAN RULE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—(Associated Press).—The absence of civilization in the southern provinces of the Philippine Islands is attributed to the lack of home life and the practice of polygamy among the native Moros, said Mrs. Carl M. Moore, wife of the Governor of the southern islands of the Philippines and herself a Filipino. She is visiting in Los Angeles.

"There can be no home life where there is a harem," Mrs. Moore explained. "The lack of home life in the Southern Islands, about 1,500 small islands, totaling not over 1,100 square miles, is due to the influence of the Mohammedan religion. Every man living there under Mohammedan rule not only avails himself of the Koran's granted right to four wives, but he also takes advantage of the modern privilege of divorce. Like a poker player he is continually throwing one wife into the discard and picking a fresh one from the deck, providing himself in this manner with a continual succession of young beauties for his harem.

"Some of the marriage customs of the land-dwelling natives are quaint. A bride seldom attends her own wedding. She is arrayed in her wedding garments, frequently of gaily-colored materials with a veil, many beads and girdles, and then locked in a tomb-like room, where she is guarded by some male relative. The imams, Mohammedan priests, recite a long ceremony over the head of the groom. The bridal pair may then exchange long distance greetings through a barred window, but not until after repeated ceremonies, continuing through several days and nights, are they pronounced married sufficiently to set up an establishment of their own.

"When a woman marries, the bridegroom or his family gives her a dowry. If she runs away from her husband and it is proved that he treated her cruelly, she keeps the dowry, whether lands, cattle or money. But if she is unfaithful and runs away with another man, she must return not only the dowry, but twice the amount. There are very few unfaithful wives."

POPULATION INCREASES.

Australia Now Boasts a Population of 5,835,000.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—The population of Australia, at the end of September last, according to the census, numbers 5,835,000. This is an increase of two per cent. in the population of the Commonwealth in the past three years.

Conscience is the angel within us that will not let us go unwarned.

88 STOREY BUILDING.

Structure Will Occupy Entire Block in Down Town Broadway.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—New York is to have an 88-storey office building, outranking in height the Woolworth Building, which has 51 stories, according to a report in real estate circles.

Peterboro Defeat Niagara Falls 3-1 - - Belmonts and Kiwanis Win Softball Semi-Finals

Much-Touted "All Stars" Lucky to Escape Shut-Out in S.P.A. Game.

HAD ADVANTAGE OF THREE WEEKS' ICE

Peterboro Had One Workout —Start Season With Unselfish Team Play.

DWYER IN FORM

Bailey Scored All Three — McLeod Works Splendidly on Defense.

The Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. squad uncorked a huge surprise on the hockey public last night and got a measure of revenge for last season's defeat when they walloped Niagara Falls' much touted "all stars" 3 goals to 1 in the S.P.A. series at the Toronto Arena.

The Petes led 1 to 0 at the end of the first period, 2 to 0 at the close of the second and had the Falls blanked 3 goals to nil until Murray got a lucky goal on a long shot in the last few seconds of play.

The blue and white outfit were not conceded a chance to win last night's battle.

The odds of course all favoured the Falls crew who went into the game in almost mid-season form, having been practicing steadily for three weeks while three games with senior teams had helped to round the machine into a smooth working unit. The Petes on the other hand had little preliminary work, the only practice they had been able to obtain being a couple of workouts on the canal, and last year's champions had a big edge, not only in condition, but in the fact that their team had "shaken down" while the Petes necessarily had to find their ice legs, keep going and brush up their hockey technique as they went along.

Petes Upset Dope.

Under the conditions the dopesters could see nothing but Gene Fraser's aggregation and odds of 4 to 1 were offered that the Falls would win.

The determination of the whole Peterborough crew, who gave everything they had to earn the verdict, combined with the great goal-keeping of Joe Dwyer, the clever defence work of Harold Parker and Bert McLeod, ably assisted by Grover Halpin, whenever he was called upon, and the effective stick-handling and shooting of Irwin Baily who scored the Petes' three goals were the factors that upset the dope.

Both teams showed some new faces. The additions to the Niagara Falls crew were "Butch" Kelterborn, the former Stratford star; "Babe" Seibert and Molson of Kitchener, and "Hobie" Kitchen of Toronto St. Mary's, four players of senior caliber and experience, while the Petes had all of last year's squad except Rose, who was out of action with a lame back, augumented by Bert McLeod, of last year's Varsity seniors; Irvin Bailey, of Toronto St. Mary's; Russel Salmon, of Bracebridge; La Perre of Timmins, and Eddie Foley, former Peterboro junior.

Strong On Paper.

On paper the Falls looked stronger than last year—but on their performance last night their effectiveness as compared with the 1923-24 champions is to be questioned. Kelterborn, the Stratford boy is a whirlwind skater, and never stops trying but he could not seem to be able to solve the Peterboro defence while Rice, who scored the winning goal against the Petes last season, marred his efectiveness by drawing a bunch of penalties and in the last period was to much peeved to do his stuff. Fraser and Murray on the defence turned in their usual brand and looked better than Seibert and Kitchen who subbed for them occasionally. The wily old Bawtenheimer is off the line up this season and he will be missed.

Even although stacked up against the much-heralded Kelterborn, Bailey looked to be the most effective man on the ice last night. The former St. Mary's youngster shot hard and accurately and his stick-handling had the Falls defence badly worried. Collins at centre and Ranger at left both turned in nice games and Burgess was of much service. Foley, Salmon and La-Pierre were used frequently on the forward line.

Petes' Defense Good.

The defence work, considering the lack of training, left nothing to be desired. Dwyer although he had his first practice yesterday afternoon was the same old stonewall in the nets, giving a fine display all through. McLeod the ex-Varsity and Collingwood player, far from in shape, demonstrated the fact that he will be a tower of strength. He used good judgment in handling attacks and rushed very effectively. Parker's work too stood out, despite his lack of condition, "Snap" teaming up cleverly with McLeod and working in some of his old time rushes. Halpin who was on skates yesterday for the first time was the relief defence man and made a great job of it.

All in all the Petes gave a surprising performance. They skated themselves pretty well into the ground and the last ten minutes left the puck carrying almost altogether to the Falls gang, but dog-tired though they were the blue and white checked the losers all the way in from the blue line and gave them litle chance to score. Their only tally was a pot shot from well out.

There is the material there for a team that should go a long way in the intermediate series. McLeod is a big help to the defence while the addition of Bailey to the forward line adds materially to the scoring ability of the crew. Peterboro hockey fans are in for a great season, judging from the brilliant debut of the Petes last night.

The teams:

Niagara Falls.

Goal—Mayo.
Defence—Murray, Fraser.
Centre—Rice.
Subs—Seibert, Molson, Pennie, Kitchen.

Peterborough.

Goal—Dwyer.
Defence—Parker, McLeod.
Centre—Collins.
Right wing—Bailey.
Subs— Burgess, Foley, Salmon Halpin, La Pierre.
Referee—Bobby Hewitson, Toronto.

Falls Opened Fast.

The pace at the outset was lightning fast, so fast indeed that it seemed impossible to hope that the Petes would be able to hang on. Kelterborn and Rice were leading the Niagara Falls attacks with occasional raids by big Gene Fraser but although the three steamed along at a great clip the Petes forwards were bothering them and the blue and white defence checked them with cool judgment while Dwyer took care of everything they drilled at him. And the Petes were attacking on their own account too. McLeod made a couple of beautiful rushes early in the battle and Mayo had to move fast to head off his shots. Bailey was dangerous on several rushes and a Ranger to Parker play nearly resulted in a counter.

Finally after 15 minutes hard going in which honors were even the Petes broke into the scoring column. It was a snappy three-man combination that turned the trick, Ranger breaking away and passing to Collins who transferred the rubber to Bailey as the defence was reached and the right wing player ripped in a beauty that gave Mayo no chance to save.

The goal acted as a spur upon the Petes and for the balance of the period they gave the Falls a busy session, but failed to register. They skated off the ice at the end of the session 1-0 in front and well satisfied.

Second Period.

The second period was a grueller. The Falls with Kelterborn doing most of the puck carrying and Rice working desperately to get the equalizer were breaking fast but the Petes' defence made few mistakes and Dwyer was invincible. And when the blue and white crew went down they gave the Cataract defence plenty of work. It was hard, close hockey all through the period and there was no scoring until Bailey put the Petes two in front with a minute to go. Parker broke down the side circled into the corner and whipped the rubber out in front to Bailey who rattled the net behind Mayo before the little goalie could swing round. It was a smart play by both Parker and Bailey.

The latter put the game on ice 45 seconds after the third session opened when he went down alone and let go a vicious shot that glanced off Mayo's stick into the top of the net.

The marker, giving Peterborough a three-goal lead settled the argument but not the toil of the fast tiring Petes. The last ten minutes found them satisfied to protect their lead and shoot the puck down the rink and although Niagara Falls attacked with vigor and determination there was always a blue and white player butting into the puck carrier on the pass and despite persistent raids it was not until the last 30 seconds of play that the Cataract crew were able to avert a shutout.

Murray did the trick, ripping down the centre and letting loose a bullet-like drive that was going high until Dwyer cuffed it down into the net. It was a tough break for the rotund goaler after a great exhibition that merited a clean sheet.

Summary:

First Period.

1 Peterboro, Bailey from Ranger and Collins, 15 mins.

Second Period.

2 Peterboro, Bailey from Parker, 19 mins.

Third Period.

3 Peterboro, Bailey, 45 secs.
4 Niagara Falls, Murray, 18 mins. 45 secs.

TEACHERS AND L.O.L. DEFEATED

Belmonts' Big Innings for 8 Runs Beat Pedagogues—Kiwanians Win.

SEMI-FINAL GAMES

"Dunk" Dunkerley slumped badly last night when the Belmonts eliminated his team from the league race by the score of 9 to 2. He went great guns for the first six innings, striking out eleven men and allowing one run, but in the seventh the Belmonts got to his fast reaking hooks for a total of eight runs and seven hits, spoiling the Teachers' chance to get a crack at the Kiwanis.

'Hap" Harrison made his second appearance at the Arena last night and turned in a great game on the mound for the Belmonts, the chalk slingers being mystified by the speed with which Harrison sent them across. He was troubled with a sore arm all through the game, but managed to zip them in fast enough to keep the Teachers at bay.

The Teachers scored first in the fifth inning when Bearborne scored on Frost's single to right. The Teachers kept their lead until the sixth innings when Fannning evened up the count with a home run.

The Belmonts went crazy in the seventh inning and whalloped Dunkerley all over th arena for a total of 8 runs. This put the game on ice and although the Teachers made a bid for a flock of runs in the eighth they only succeeded in registering once and the final score stood 9 to 2.

S.O.S. 6—KIWANIS 7.

The Orangemen came from behind in their game with the Kiwanis last night and threw a scare into the McLean crew, but a single by Breden, accompanied by an error and a line drive by Brown, wound up the game with the Kiwanis one run to the good, the score being 7 to 6. It was a great battle and one of the fastest staged this year. The Orangemen were down 5 to 3 at the end of the fifth, but they chased three across in the seventh, taking the lead and keeping it until the ninth inning, when they blew, the Kiwanis scoring two in quick succession and taking the game right out of the Orangemen's hands. It was a tough game to lose, but it would have been just as tough for the Kiwanis to lose as for the L.O.L.

Carl McLean did the twirling for the Kiwanis. He pitched a steady game throughout, and managed to keep the L.O.L. to 10 scattered hits, while he fanned 10.

Nicholls on the mound for the losers was not as good as in some of his former performances, but he pitched a nice game. He was touched for 16 hits and allowed 2 walks. His team-mates gave him wonderful support.

MYTHOLOGY

Dazzy Vance, the pitcher, was called before the committee of baseball experts who had just crowned him the most valuable player in the National League.

"In recognition of your skill, Mr. Vance, we are presenting you with a gold medal and a check for one thousand smackers," spoke the spokesman, for it was none other.

Mr. Vance's noble pan grew flushed. His eyes sparkled. A sort of spiritual glow semed to hover about him.

"I can't take the money, gentlemen," murmured the athlete, his voice heavy with emotion. "It would detract from the glory of the achievement. The medal is more than enough."

Ty Cobb was the first ball player to take two bases on a bunt and we believe Steve O'Neill was the first to take one base on a triple.

First Choice with Boys and Girls

THE young people know a thing or two about skates.

They know that C.C.M. Automobile Skates are the choice of most of the Champion hockey players and racers. Naturally they want C.C.M.s, too.

Boys and girls know, too, that C.C.M. Skates are wonders for speed—for fast starting and quick stopping—for rapid turning and nimble dodging.

They also know that C.C.M. Automobile Skates are made of Chrome Nickel Steel and given the special C.C.M. heat treatment that gives them a surface as smooth and hard as glass, but with a tough interior "core" that makes them practically unbreakable.

The skates your boy or girl will take real pride in possessing and pleasure in wearing are C.C.M.s. The C.C.M. dealer will help you select a pair for your boy's or girl's Christmas present.

There are C.C.M. models for men and women, too—skates for hockey, racing, figure and pleasure skating—skates for every purpose and everybody.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH WFBH

(NEW YORK, N.Y.—273 METERS)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN.

WFBH, maintained by the Hotel Majestic, comes near to being a total loss, so far as local New York listeners are concerned. It must be sadly recorded that WFBH's transmission and modulation are possibly the poorest of any station in the municipality, so it is doubtful whether any of this column's readers will make haste to make its acquaintance.

From personal experience and from perusing the perorations of the radio critics (some of them self-appointed) with which America's metropolis seems to abound, it must be confessed that all indications point to WFBH as the bad little boy of New York, who will not dress up to please his folks and who religiously evades brushing his teeth. The teeth of WFBH are found in its microphone. One acrimonious journalist, doing a daily column for a New York paper, refers to the fact that WFBH had molasses in its microphone when it started entertaining radio fans.

WFBH has undoubtedly improved immeasurably since those dismal, dark days when it was conceived and brought forth. There has been little to commend the station, however, even were its transmission as pure as that of WEAF or WCAP or WBZ. The concert and dance orchestras of the hotel have provided the biggest features, while vocalists and instrumental soloists of the Class B type have been heard. Good artists shun stations with poor modulation and WFBH cannot hope to improve its class of entertainment until it is able to put the features across with almost flawless transmission.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH BILLIARDS?

Newman's Theory In An Experimental Match.

What is wrong with billiards? Newman, the champion, contends that the game wants brightening, while Smith's belief is that more competition is required. To test Newman's theory an experimental match is being played, the conditions being:

1. The red ball, when pocketed off the billiards-spot, shall be respotted on the pyramid-spot, unless a cannon or losing hazard is made by the same stroke.
2. The baulk half-circle shall be abolished. All strokes played when the cue-ball is in hand must be played by placing the ball on one of the three spots on the baulk line.
3. Not more than six ball-to-ball cannons are allowed to be played consecutively.

Newman's idea is to stop big breaks, and the week's play goes to prove that the innovation in that respect was successful. But who wants to make the game more difficult? The majority of amateurs want some scheme to make the game easier.

However, I fancy Newman's idea of "brighter billiards" will soon be forgotten. Smith is quite frank on the subject. "These ideas of Newman's," he says, "are farcical. They destroy some of the most beautiful strokes in the game—for instance, the raking long loser, the long jenny, and the short jenny."

WRANGEL'S FLEET A FRENCH PROBLEM

Soviet Will Demand its Release and Trouble in Balkans Likely to Result.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—(United Press)—A fleet without a flag, lying in the Port of Bizerte, in the northeast corner of Africa, may soon weigh anchor as a negligible naval factor and steam into international relations, ruffling the smooth waters of European peace. It is the Wrangel flotilla, which took refuge in a southern French port at the time of the Wrangel debacle before the victorious Soviet legions.

The arrival of the fleet caused France considerable annoyance, and has been a heavy expense ever since. When Wrangel's men were driven to the sea, they boarded the boats they had appropriated from the estate of old Russia and headed for friendly havens. France had been very sympathetic with the Wrangel cause, so when the troops arrived here they felt quite at home and many landed and remained. Then France was faced with the problem of the alien navy, which she solved by arranging to have the crews remain aboard and take care of the ships and armament.

But now France has recognized the Russian Soviet State, which claims authority over everything that belonged to old Russia. This claim naturally includes the navy, and it is expected here that the Soviets, in adjusting differences between the two countries, will demand that the ships be turned over to them. They will probably also refuse to reimburse France for what the navy has cost her, and they may even refuse to extend amnesty to the faithful crews. Under such circumstances, can France in honor surrender the ships?

Supremacy of Black Sea.

Other nations are vitally concerned. If Russia gets the fleet she will have the supremacy of the Black Sea, and also the Eastern Mediterranean. The Greek navy is very feeble, and the Turks have practically no navy at all, so they naturally view with alarm the idea of Russia getting these boats again. Roumania and Bulgaria are very interested, each thinking of their own interests and each jealous of the probable naval strength of the Bolsheviks. The situation is such that old-time diplomats are recalling the famous line of Kipling. "There will be trouble in the Balkans in the spring."

The fleet includes two cruisers, one of which, the General Alexeief, launched in 1914, is of 23,000 tons and has some very effective armament. This vessel would be a formidable man-of-war in any Russian water. The other cruiser, the General Kornilof, has a displacement of 6,575 tons, and is over twenty years old. The auxiliary cruiser l'Almaz displaces 3,300 tons.

There are seven destroyers, six of which are comparatively modern, although they are small. They were laid down just before the war. The fleet includes three small torpedo boats and four fairly modern submarines, two launched in 1916 and one in 1918, two gunboats launched in 1916 of 1,100 tons each and several lesser craft, also a supply ship which the French have improved and renamed the Vulcain.

On the whole it is quite a useful fleet, and the Russians are certain to have much to say about it, and every word they say will be re-echoed over the Balkans.

PETES WILL PLAY PRESTON TEAM NEXT

The Petes' clear cut victory over Niagara Falls in the S. P. A. series last night has given Peterboro fans a bad attack of hockey fever and the few reserved seats left of the block put on sale for the first three games are being snapped up. Only a few are left and wise fans will grab them quickly. The purchasers of these seats will have an option on them for the balance of the season.

The Petes move up into the next round of the S.P.A. series, and on Friday night will clash with the Preston senior O.H.A. team at the Toronto arena. Preston eliminated Micky Murray and his Galt team from the series in a game at London last night, and with Dad Ashley and Gunner Arnott going strong will be formidable opposition, but last night's games will do the Petes a world of good, and they are hopeful of giving the Westerners a tough battle for the honours.

A score of faithful fans went to Toronto last night to see the blue and white crew beat the Falls, and the number will be greatly augmented on Friday night for the Preston-Peterboro clash.

$500,000 FIRE AT PORT HURON TO-DAY

PORT HURON, Mich., Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press). — The Grand Trunk elevator here, containing 600,000 bushels of grain, was destroyed and the barge Alexander Maitland, with a cargo of barley, was burned almost to the water's edge, by a fire of undetermined origin this morning. Early estimates of the loss placed it at more than $500,000, including $100,000 to the barge and its cargo.

The fire started in the elevator, and, fanned by a high westerly wind, soon enveloped that structure and spread to the barge moored at the elevator wharf. Although the Maitland's cargo was afire, its bow ablaze, and the walls of the elevator threatened to collapse on its decks, two tugs got lines aboard and pulled for more than half an hour, when the heat melting the three cables with which it was tied to the dock enabled them to tow the craft into the river.

The elevator was built forty years ago, and was valued at $350,000. The grain it contained was said to be worth more than $200,000.

The Alexander Maitland had a net tonnage of 2,996, was built at Buffalo in 1910, and carried a crew of ten. Her home port was Cleveland. The crew was taken aboard a tug.

REVEALED HISTORY ROMANTIC CAREER

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Dec. 9.—(Associated Press).—With the sinking of the rum ship Guilia off the coast of Northern California recently, it was revealed here that the vessel had a history of romance and adventure and was said once to have been owned by a King of Spain. Here is her history as told on "the beach:"

When built 40 years ago for the Spanish king, the graceful clipper yacht, equipped with gold fitting and priceless draperies, was the envy of European royalty.

From the service of the king the vessel passed to that of an English merchant prince, then successively to war service, to a band of British adventurers who called her the Frontiersman, and finally, after the adventurers went bankrupt at San Pedro, into the liquor trade. She was not wanted by the legitimate lines of shipping, because she was a coal burning vessel on an oil burning coast.

Her decks equipped with machine guns to keep away hijackers, she sailed for Havana under the new name of Guilia. Returning from Cuba, the Guilia ran out of fuel off the west coast of Mexico. Her cabin was torn down and fed to the boiler fires, and as a last resort part of her rum cargo was fed to the flames a bottle at a time.

At Ensenada, Lower California, 35 tons of coal were obtained, and the crew prayed that this fuel would take them to Vancouver. But her progress was retarded by a storm, and again the Guilia ran out of coal. She floundered at sea, a forbidden visitor to the nearby California shores which alone could give her aid.

The one-time royal clipper yacht went to the bottom, an abandoned rum runner, scuttled by her crew, reports say.

All the members of the crew were rescued by a passing ship and brought to San Francisco.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

Hutchinson's "The Clean Heart," exceptionally Good Film.

I rise to remark,
And my language is plain,
That for films with a starkly emotional strain,
This play's my idea of a knockout
And the sort that I'd hoped for in vain.

All of which is by way of saying that "The Clean Heart" at the Royal is one of those exceptional productions that make one gasp and take back everything one ever said before about moving pictures. Patrons, who read the best books and demand the best photoplays will revel in it.

Percy Marmont is just the type we had in mind when reading the novel. He depicts all the moods, boyish gaiety and emotional reactions with infectious warmth.

Marguerite de la Motte impresses one most deeply as the unsophicated young charming country girl; her work would be hard to surpass.

Mr. Otis Harlan as the vagabond, gives us many a laugh and you'll wipe away a tear at his sacrifice that his friend may be saved.

We are frankly enthusiastic about this production and advise all patrons to see it and compare it with any other emotional drama seen locally. We believe you will agree with us that "The Clean Heart" is the best of its kind to reach the screens of Peterboro.

Buster Keatin and Larry Semon are both on the programme. The laughs are numerous.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The exotic Pola Negri is at the Capitol Theatre this week and may be seen for the last time to-night in "Forbidden Paradise," the Ernst Lubitsch production which exploits her as a real vamp. Of course, she has always been a vamp, but this picture shows her in a super-role, as the Queen Catherine of an unnamed Balkan kingdom, beautiful and capricious. Hers is not exactly a pleasant part in this production, but it is an excellent example of her peculiar vogue, and affords plenty of scope for her outstanding powers as a screen enchantress. With her slick black bob and her odd gowns, she is an interesting central picture for the intrigues and passions of a miniature court.

The picture has a peculiar ending, quite in line with its odd atmosphere. Pola falls in love with a handsome captain of her guards, but the skeins of romance get tangled up and the object of her colorful affections turns to a milder flame. The queen, however, instead of having him executed after he has joined the revolutionists who plot against the throne, takes a different course and that's what sets a peculiar period to a peculiar story. Pola has great opportunities in this production to pose as much as she desires and does it to her heart's content. However, she fills the eye when she comes on the stage, and it is rather interesting to see her carefully-laid plans deflected and defeated by the minor characters.

Rod LaRocque, with slinky black coiffure and sharp features, is the hero of the pieces, Captain Alexei Czerny, and the interesting Adolphe Menjou is the queen's chancellor, the "god in the machine," who directs her love affairs and bribes the brave revolutionaries to postpone their revolutionizing.

A clever bit in this picture is the small scene that depicts the interview between the queen's chancellor and the captain of the rebels. A couple of close-ups of their hands and nothing else convey a subtle impression to the audience.

BRITISH TARS LEND MOVIE "ATMOSPHERE"

During the filming of "Madonna of the Strets," a story of London life which features Nazimova and Milton Sills, Edwin Carewe, the producer, was in search of typical Limehouse characters to supply "atmosphere" for a certain scene showing London's Chinatown, Hollywood, cosmopolitan as it is, could not yield exactly the right type. Finally, acting under a sudden hunch, Carewe journeyed to San Francisco and headed for the waterfront. A British tramp steamer had just docked. The seamen were coming ashore.

Any of you fellows know Limehouse, in London?" asked the movie director of a group approaching him.

"Know Limehouse?" roared one broad-shouldered tar, "Why, sir, we're the bloats what made Limehouse famous."

That was enough for Carewe. Six British seamen made the most of their three-day holiday ashore by acting in the movies and getting well paid for it.

"Madonna of the Streets," the First National picture, which opens at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

AT THE REGENT.

POPULAR PLAY NOW GREAT FILM DRAMA.

Fox Version of "The Man Who Came Back" Makes Fine Film Featuring George O'Brien.

Once more a well-beloved and successful stage play has increased its popularity in its translation to the screen. "The Man Who Came Back," produced by William Fox from the play by Jules Eckert Goodman and story by John Fleming Wilson, began a 3 days' run at the Regent Theatre yesterday and was well liked by those who attended the opening performance. There is no question of its high entertaining value, thanks to Emmett Flynn, the director, and a capable cast, headed by smiling George O'Brien and Dorothy Mackaill. The leading players are given excellent support by Ralph Lewis, Cyril Chadwick and other able screen favorites.

"The Man Who Came Back" relates a few crowded months in the life of young Potter, son of an indulgent millionaire father. O'Brien appears as the son and gives an interesting portrayal of a jazz-crazy ne'er-do-well early in the picture. He quarrels with a companion during the height of a wild party and knocks him out. Bills pile upon bill until his father is well nigh distracted. He sends the boy to San Francisco to work in a shipyard but the youth, for spite, allows himself to sink lower and lower until he finally reaches the very bottom in a Shanghai dive. Throughout his descent he drags with him a girl, played by Miss Mackaill, who becomes addicted to drugs while he succumbs to liquor.

Then he attempts to rise from the mire and there is hope that he has rehabilitated himself in Hawaii, but one dramatic incident after another is hurled into the plot until the case looks hopeless. The snobbery of an aristocratic aunt complicates matters in a tragic manner. There is a splendid thrill as well as a surprise in the closing twist. "The Man Who Came Back" is well worth anybody's seeing.

Those of us who still remember the boredom of history lessons at school have an opportunity of taking their revenge in the clever burlesque. "Old Bill Through the Ages." Here we have the old notabilities, and the familiar old incidents, given a comic twist, which, though it was of course impossible in the class-room, would undoubtedly have added a new zest and relish to the history lecture.

William the Conqueror, King John, Queen Bess, Shakespeare, and many others all come trooping on the scene, but behaving not strictly according to the book. The Armada, the Doomsday Book, and other well-known incidents, take on a rich glow of hitherto unsuspected, but always harmless, humour, and the whole film goes at a rollicking pace, accompanied by incessant laughter.

AT THE GRAND.

MARY PICKFORD IN "DOROTHY VERNON."

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, Mary Pickford will be at the Grand Opera House in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

This picture, without doubt, is the greatest photoplay that Miss Pickford ever has made. It has everything in it that any other picture of hers ever had—and a lot more. It has romance; it has thrills; it has Mary Pickford in a new grown-up role, but with all the Mary Pickford mannerisms and characteristics that so endeared her to the public in the earlier days of her stardom; there is the delightful Mary Pickford comedy; there is action so fast that it will leave any audience breathless; Mary Pickford is more beautiful by far than in any other of her previous features; and the picture is made from Charles Major's romantic novel of the same title—a novel which long has been in the list of the best sellers of fiction.

Associated with Mary Pickford in this big production are many of the best known stars of the moving screen. Allan Forrest is Sir John Manners, the leading male character; Marc McDermott takes the part of Sir Malcolm Vernon, cousin of Dorothy; there is Anders Randolph, who played with Richard Barthelmess in 'The Bright Shawl'; Clare Eames portrays Queen Elizabeth, making her first screen appearance in this part, which she has played on the stage many times; Estelle Taylor is cast as Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots; Mme. Carrie Daumery is Lady Vernon; Wilfred Lucas is the Earl of Rutland; Courtenay Foote, the Earl of Leicester; Eric Mayne is Lord Burleigh, and Lottie Pickford Forrest, sister of Mary Pickford, returns to the screen in this picture after an absence of many years. Other minor roles are those played by Malcolm Waite, Colin Kenny, Howard Gaye, Jack Fowler and Olaf Skavlan. The director of the production is Marshall Neilan, the photographer Charles Rosher.

A feature of the screening of this big picture in Peterboro will be the vocal numbers of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, who will sing at its various presentations.

LOVELY GOWNS.

Shaded evening gowns are very lovely and fashionable. They relieve a frock of any suggestion of plainness and at the same time they require no trimming that breaks line.

JUSTICE RIDDELL SPEAKS ON THE BULK SALES ACT

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Judgment of a far reaching importance to the farmers, delivered by Mr. Justice Riddell today, when he held that the Bulk Sales Act applied to the farmers. If the decision is upheld it means that the farmers who have creditors or cannot make bulk sales without appointing trustees and calling the creditors together. Some lawyers interpret the decision to mean that farmers will not be able to contract for sale of produce of his orchard without going through procedure laid down by the Act.

"It is a matter of common knowledge," says the judgment, "that the mischief aimed at was disposal of their stocks in bulk to traders, merchants and retail shopkeepers to the detriment of creditors. But "any person" mentioned in the Act, he pointed out, is one of the broadest expressions that can be employed. I am of the opinion that the Act applied to the farmers." The question arose in connection with the exchange by J. W. Robbins of his farm in Garafraxa township, Wellington county, together with live stock and implements and hay for a store property in Toronto. The transfer was opposed by a creditor of Robbins. Injunction obtained by the creditor from Judge Gauld at Hamilton, continued by Justice Riddell pending trial of action.

BALDWIN'S PLAN.

Unwavering Attitude Toward Egypt Reflected in Speech from the Throne.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The new parliament, destined for a long legislative life, lent its ears to the party leaders yesterday after learning from the King's address some of the things the Conservative Government intends to do. Shortly after His Majesty had ceremoniously opened parliament, the Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, with two-thirds of the commons back of him, told the house what his government aims to accomplish.

When the premier had done talking, Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Lloyd George, the leaders of the Labor and Liberal minorities, respectively, proceeded to tell the cabinet ministers and their Conservative colleagues some of the things they thought the government ought and ought not to do.

So far as the House of Commons itself is concerned there is little time to do anything this year except talk, as parliament will begin its long Christmas recess a week from Friday and the members will remain away from Westminster until February 10. One of the questions which will be discussed in parliament very soon is the subject of international debts. The chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Spencer Churchill, will have his say on the matter of these debts next week.

Unpleasant Matter.

Mr. Lloyd George remarked that he regretted the omission from the King's speech of any reference of any effort by the government to deal with the inter-allied debts. He argued that Great Britain had borrowed from the United States only because her allies needed the money and now Great Britain was paying her debts, and not one of her debtors were paying her. This country, he went on, was the heaviest taxed nation in the world. He asked if it was taking part in the negotiations going on between France and the United States in regard to the French debt. He knew it was a very unpleasant matter to ask one's friends to pay their debts, but, he added, "United States never hesitated a moment to call upon this country to pay."

Firm Toward Egypt.

The speech from the throne covered a multitude of affairs, both domestic and foreign. Among most interesting announcements was that the Prince of Wales would shortly pay a visit to Argentina. The King's reference to Egypt was decidedly pointed. He left no doubt as to Great Britain's attitude toward Egypt and declared that the British demands, which have been accepted, "were designed to secure respect for those interests which are of vital concern to my Empire."

Announcement was made in the speech that the government could not recommend parliamentary consideration of the treaties with Russia and further, that the government proposed to proceed with the naval base at Singapore.

Foreign affairs will be taken up by parliament probably at considerable length upon the return of Austen Chamberlain the foreign secretary from Rome. The Government's recent action in Egypt is not likely, it would seem from the tone of today's speeches to be criticized to any great extent except by the Laborites. Mr. Lloyd George asserted that the government ought to take a strong line in that country, but both he and Ramsay MacDonald, looking toward the future advocated some definite programme with regard to certain details of the British policy in Egypt and Sudan.

Labor Amendments.

The parliamentary Labor Party has decided to move an amendment to the King's speech "regretting the policy that is being pursued by His Majesty's advisors with regard to Egypt and Russia."

Labor's other amendment is on a Democratic problem. It regrets that His Masjesty's advisors are committed to the policy of leaving the solution of the housing problem mainly to private enterprise.

With the early discussion of foreign affairs, Great Britain's exact position with regard to the Geneva protocol is likly to get a thorough airing. Mr. Lloyd George said he was glad the government had decided to investigate the question before taking up its position. He wished that the government would consider the effect on opinion in America and whether it would facilitate the entry of the United States into the league or form a new barrier. Both the Liberal and Labor leaders saw in the King's speech the possible intention of the Tories to build up some sort of protective tariff hedge around the British Isles and said so.

Premier Baldwin, however, quickly took occasion to announce that he would not introduce protection nor use the safeguarding of industries act as a wedge to introduce it.

Mr. MacDonald severely criticized Conservatives for the manner in which they had conducted their election campaign. He attributed the huge Conservative majority to the way "old ladies were scared by the Tory talk of Bolsheviki and Red Flags and such like dreadful things."

SNIDER NOT GUILTY OF SHOOTING AT NAPANEE

Fired Into Air on Hallowe'en When Boy Was Hit.

NAPANEE, December 10. — Urban Snider of Odessa, was last night found "not guilty" of shooting Percy Clarke, a fifteen year old boy of the village, on Hallowe'en night, after the jury had deliberated for three hours.

Snider in his own behalf stated that he had shot the revolver in the air from is back steps but had seen no one about.

Quite a sensation was caused in the court room when as the work if selecting a jury was beginning to proceed the prisoner was noticed making what appeared to be signals to each juryman as he was called.

Judge Madden gave warning that this would have to be stopped.

It is understood that the accused is a member of three fraternal orders.

ONLY POLICE PAID FOR O.T.A. REPORTS

Other Persons Liable to Fine For Accepting Money For Informtaion.

OTTAWA, December 10. — Informers in the employ of the various police departments of Ontario will be minus considerable revenue from now on as the result of important amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act as shown in the 1924 Ontario statutes, a copy of which has just reached the Ottawa police.

It is distinctly stated that a police constable, officer or any other person, who receives financial remuneration for supplying information to the police in connection with breaches of the O.T.A. is guilty of an offence and is liable to a venalty of $500 with six months in jail as an alternative.

Police are forbidden to offer any money to obtain information regarding breaches of the O.T.A.. Police offering money and persons accepting it are both liable to a fine of $500 or six months in jail.

Legal opinion has it that a paid informant in order to register a complaint legally must join the police department, if only for one day and would receive a policeman's pay.

43,224 BASEBALLS USED BY NATIONAL LEAGUE

New Attendance Record, But Three Clubs Lost Money.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.— The National League in 1924 enjoyed the greatest patronage in its history, according to the annual report of President John A. Heydler, showing a total paid attendance of 4,340,644 for the past season. This represented an increase of 220,827 paid admissions over the total for 1923 when the previous high record was made.

Despite the apparently general prosperity, however, President Heydler disclosed that the St. Louis and Boston clubs has met with financial losses and, with Cincinnati, had suffered decreased patronage as compared with 1923.

Another part of the president's report disclosed that 43,224 baseballs were used during the season, an increase of 1,668 over 1923. New York purchased the greatest number, 7,560 and Philadelphia the least, 3,450.

BODIES OF LUMBERMEN RECOVERED FROM LAKE

Two Drowned in Pigeon Lake Saturday Night—No Inquest.

LINDSAY, Dec. 10.—The bodies of Roy Savinac, of Gooderham, and Chas. Young, of Bobcaygeon, who were drowned in Pigeon Lake, off Little Bob, on Sunday night, were recovered on Monday. The coroner at Peterboro ordered the removal of the bodies to Bobcaygeon. It appears that thirteen men left the camp on Saturday night and crossed the lake to the village. They all started on the return trip, but only seven attempted to cross the ice. Savinac and Young were unmarried.

GERMAN KILLER TRIED TO TELL

Haarman Twice Called For Minister to Confess, But Was Refused.

RUMORS OF THREATS.

HANOVER, Germany, Dec. 10.—Twice he called for a minister in order to confess, and each time the clergyman refused to answer, Fritz Harrmann, man of many murders, revealed in court to-day.

This assertion was confirmed by police witnesses.

Testimony seemed to support the impression that Harrmann was a tool in the hands of Hans Grans, who played on Harrmann's abnormality.

Harrmann's former landlady, Frau Seemann, testified that six years ago she heard a sound of hacking in Harrmann's rooms and later he gave her bones with flesh on them.

Mockery of Gratitude.

To the testimony of two scientists who examined bottles containing fat and testified it was impossible to determine whether it was human, Harrmann bowed mock gratitude and said:

"Thank you."

Altogether 195 witnesses will be heard, including the fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters of most of the twenty-seven youths he is charged with butchering.

Public excitement was at fever pitch Monday, because of persistent rumors that the relatives of some victims had sworn to take justice into their own hands and kill Harrmann if the slightest opportunity came.

To Identify Skulls.

Mothers of slain persons will be asked to identify clothing.

All of the witnesses to-day, even the women, were thoroughly searched for weapons. The police guards about the old court building were tripled.

The judge is swamped with requests of women's clubs and medical societies to exclude the public from the hearings and to prevent printing of details.

CHANGING RULE OF ROAD

Madrid Had a Peculiar Method of "Keep to the Left."

The traffic in Madrid, which has hitherto kept to the left of the road, has been changed over, and will in future keep to the right. The taxicab drivers celebrated the event by collecting in numbers of several hundreds on the Puerta del Sol, where, when the golden ball on the clock tower fell rattling on its chain, as it does every 12 hours, they all sounded their hooters and horns and set off in procession on the right side of the street to the cheers from the crowded cafes.

The tramwaymen had a more difficult task, as all the points in the city had to be reversed. All motor-cars and trams are placarded with notices saying, "Keep to the right." Only two collisions between trams and motor-cars have so far occurred. The reason for the change was that the rule of the road outside Madrid was "Keep to the right," while in the town it was "Keep to the left."

LONDON POLICE HELD AS MODEL FOR MONTREAL

Transfer From Municipal to Military Control Advocated By R. L. Calder, K.C.

NO INTERFERENCE.

Head of Police Force Should Be Man of Iron Discipline.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—The removal of the city police force from the control of the city municipal authorities and the placing of them under the control of a military man, directly responsible to the attorney-general was the proposal made by R. L. Calder, K.C., former crown prosecutor for Montreal, before Mr. Justice Coderre at the enquiry into Montreal Police affairs yesterday.

Mr. Calder took the London police system as his model, and declared that if the police were not bothered by citizens who broke the by-laws going to alderman or getting aldermen to allow them to do things contrary to the law, they could do much more effective work. There should be strict military discipline for the police, although the detectives should work under a less vigorious form of supervision.

The former crown prosecutor also believed that if the police established a state of siege in each of the "red light" districts and prevented people from going into the disorderly houses, they would soon cause the abolition of the areas, while as a check on the incursion of undesirables from other parts of the continent he thought the French system of identification cards had much to commend it. He was in favor of a police union as a mutual benefit society, but was strongly against any such thing as a complaint committee. He maintained that with the ary system every policeman would have a fair investigation before action was taken against him. The detective force was too small, hampered by the lack of funds, and interfered with by internal strife and lack of support.

That could be cured by adoption of single control in the hands of a master detective, by profession and experience.

If he were asked to recommend on the subject, of he would suggest that the head of the police force should be a man of iron discipline. He might suggest such men as Col. Hughes of Quebec.

LINDSAY WOMAN'S DEATH DUE TO NATURAL CAUSE

Mrs. John Bacon Apparently Died of Exhaustion and Exposure.

LINDSAY, Dec. 10.—Death from natural causes was the verdict of the coroner's jury which was called Tuesday to inquire into the cause of the death of Mrs. John Bacon, who was found in an unconscious condition in her home in Lindsay on Friday, December 5. There was no evidence of foul play, as the woman evidently died from exposure and exhaustion.

Many wild rumors concerning the unfortunate woman were in circulation, some of them having their origin in Haliburton, where she lived until her husband was sent to the penitentiary for a serious offence. Shortly after she moved from the northland her property was destroyed by fire, which was said to be of incendiary origin. She was a hard working woman, and the circumstances surrounding her death have evoked expressions of regret.

JUDGE DOUBTS YOUTHS' MORALS

Criminal Cases in Kingston Court Involved Offences Against Girls.

MANNERS CHANGING.

KINGSTON, Ont. Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—In the county court Tuesday Judge Lavell, in referring to the grand jury, three criminal cases which all related to offences against young girls said: "One hesitates to draw a hasty deduction from this, but I think it fair to say that in any indication of a general condition of this kind the cause is deeper than appears on the surface. We should not be too harsh in criticizing young people, but I think all are agreed that the manners of young people have greatly changed during the past years and it is a question whether this has not something to do with the cases now before the court."

True bills were brought in against Fred Shepherd, J. Berry and Arthur Byron, all of whom are charged with offences against girls. The case of Arthur Byron who entered a plea of guilty to a charge of having carnal knowledge of a girl under fourteen years of age, was proceeded with. Byron has a previous conviction of indecent assault against him, and was remanded for sentence until Thursday morning.

GUILTY OF ASSAULT.

Two Men at Brockville Remanded For Sentence—Attacked Elderly Man.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 10.— Pleading guilty yesterday to an assault upon Robert Gamble Morton on August seventh last, Vernon Keyes and William Smith, both of Brewers' Mills, were remanded on bail by Judge Dowsley until December 16, when sentence will be pronounced. The two men elected to be tried by a Judge. With Joseph Webb, also of Brewers' Mills, who is awaiting trial, Keyes and Smith were arrested by the Provincial Police for having attacked and very seriously injured Gamble who was brought to the door of his house late at night under the pretext that a motor party required assistance.

IS NOT PLACE FOR PATIENTS

United Counties Council Has Important Matter Up For Discussion.

TWO INMATES DEAD.

Warden W. M. Fowlds Predicts New Classification in Counties.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, Dec. 10.—The Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham had a short session yesterday, disposing of several items of business with its usual expediency.

The practice of admitting ailing persons to the County House of Refuge was the subject of criticism and may be taken up later in the session.

Warden's Address.

Warden W. M. Fowlds welcomed the councillors and remarked on the misfortune suffered by Reeve Thomas Patterson in having his leg broken while helping a neighbor.

The Warden reported on a gathering of the wardens of the province and predicted a change in the classification of roads to the benefit of the counties. The government found that the township man expects more than he is getting under the present system and roads through the townships can be made cheaper than county roads.

Another matter disclussed by the Warden was the House of Refuge. The government had paid 10 cents per capita a day for inmates of these homes, but this had been discontinued. At a county representation to the government there were only 3 from east of Toronto. The minister felt that revenue from the land helped the county Houses of Refuge and the cities have not this assistance.

Very strong efforts should be made by the counties, the warden said, to get the Houses of Refuge back on the old basis.

Northumberland has been blessed in the harvest and while stock prices are a little lower this means a benefit to the laboring man through lower prices.

House of Refuge.

The medical officer's report on the House of Refuge showed a very satisfatcory condition, but recommendations were made that persons should not be sent there instead of to hospital when needing treatment. In two cases persons were admitted and died within a few days. The regulations were all complied with and the superintendent could do nothing else than admit them.

The warden suggested that this may be done to relieve the townships of the expense, as in the House of Refuge the inmates are kept by the county.

W. F. Elliott, Murray township, expressed the opinion that persons admitted under wrong conditions should be placed back on the municipality that sent them there. "It is merely a case of one municipality imposing on the other municipalities around, if they knew of the illness."

H. H. Holaway (Port Hope), said the authorities of hte House of Refuge depend on the report from the doctor of the municipality and in the case under discussion the report was not accurate. "The physician of this municipality deceitfully loaded the case on the House of Refuge," Mr. Holdaway said.

N. Hartt (Murray), thought the Reeve of Port Hope erred in censuring the doctor, as in this case he might not be responsible.

S. A. Clarke (Cramahe), endeavoured to clear up the question by naming the patient and explaining the case. No action was taken.

Campbellford Bridge.

C. Davidson (Campbellford), objected to the billing of the town for 25 per cent. of the cost of repair of the bridge. He thought the 40 per cent. allowance from the government should be deducted first, and only 25 per cent. of the balance charged to the town.

It was explained that the rebate may not come from the government for some months and in the meantime the counties are out the amount of the repairs, and should be reimbursed by Campbellford's share.

After considerable discussion the matter was let stand and the report sent to the Finance committee.

(Special to The Examiner).

LINDSAY, Dec. 10. — Grieving over the death of his wife a week ago, Seth Armitage, a well-known farmer and apiarist of Eden, Mariposa Township, committed suicide by shooting himself with a rifle yesterday. Despondency and melancholia had settled upon him since his bereavement which had preyed upon and evidently unbalanced his mind. He was found dead by a neighbor in the bee-house on his farm with a bullet hole in his head. Dr. Logan, coroner, of Lindsay, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Mr. Armitage is survived by two sons and three daughters, one of whom lived at home.

LIBERALS GAIN SLIGHT COMFORT IN GERMAN VOTE

Monarchical Parties Have More Than Retained Their Parliamentary Strength.

IMPASSE REMAINS.

Elections Failed to Improve Republicans' Position—Strong Nucleus Lacking.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—Post-election appraisals of Sunday's vote for members of the new Reichstag appear to reach the uniform conclusion that the verdict of the electorate may be set down as serving no practical purpose in connection with solving the parliamentary impasse which prompted President Ebert to dissolve the Reichstag last October.

In government quarters, especially in circles close to Chancellor Marx, expression is given freely to a feeling of disappointment over the circumstances that none of the three Liberal parties came out of the contest with a sufficient increase in mandates to insure a firm nucleus for a coalition which would primarily embrace the Socialists, Clericals and Democrats.

Chancellor Marx will discuss the situation growing out of the election with the cabinet to-day. Then he will confer with President Ebert regarding the course to be pursued.

The Liberal newspapers were less enthusiastic yesterday over the political significance of the gains scored by the Democrats and Socialists in Sunday's voting. Some of the franker commentators permit the inference that the party leaders realize that the gains scored by the constitutional parties afford scant cause for comfort, in view of the fact that the Monarchical parties actually have more than retained their previous parliamentary strength, the Nationalists, the German People's party and the Bavarian People's party even showing a gain of a dozen mandates which more than offset the losses sustained by General Ludendorff's party.

Out of the 493 deputies elected to the new Reichstag, 208 are members of the monarchial parties or Foreign Minister Stresemann's German People's party which favors the so-called democratic monarchy and which displayed the old monarchical colors throughout its recent campaign.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATES.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—J. A. Messervy and Donald McKinnon, K.C., both of Charlottetown, were nominated to contest Queen's county in the next federal election, at the Liberal-Conservative convention held here Tuesday.

HERRIOTT EXHAUSTED.

Ordered to Bed by His Physicians To-day.

(By A. L. Bradford—United Press Staff Correspondent).

PARIS, Dec. 10. — Exhausted by his efforts in directing a national drive against Communists and foreign agitators, Premier Herriot was ordered to bed by his physicians to-day, suffering with grippe and rheumatism.

Just before Herriot retired ill, the Chamber of Deputies gave him an overwhelming vote of confidence on his internal policy of vigorously repressing the "Reds." Appearing in the Chamber, the Premier assured the deputies he had taken drastic measures only to prevent bloodshed.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Through the Ontario Government the Provincial Hydro Commission will vigorously oppose any application of the National Electric to export power from Cairillon Falls on which it is said the company is seeking lease renewal. The electrical company first secured the lease of power rights in 1911, renewal in 1921, and now, according to the report, it is asking for new lease to enable it to export power.

"We would be absolutely opposed to export," stated Sir Adam Beck, "and absolutely opposed to the Dominion Government leasing a water power on the Ottawa in which we are interested."

THE GUMPS—THE WALLS HAVE EARS

MAGNATE PAID $100,000 FOR EYE

Former Toronto Nurse Sues Lawyer in Actions Involving Millionaire.

BREACH OF PROMISE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 10.—In a two page judgment, Mr. Justice Morrison dismissed the action of Mrs. Elma Cathryne Caulfield, w/o is known as Mrs. Boyce, against Charles Sydney Arnold in which she atempted to recover $15,000 from the Vancouver lawyer.

The money had been paid the defendant for services rendered in securing a $100,000 settlement of Mrs. Boyce for the loss of an eye.

Mr. Justice Morrison has decided that Champerty plea is not open to Mrs. Boyce because the $15,000 had been paid to Mr. Arnold, and his lordship has also found that at all times material to the issue Mrs. Boyce acted freely and independently and was under no duress or undue influence or mental incapacity.

The biggest legal sensation in recent years on the Pacific coast was caused by two suits brought by the former wife of Charles Campbell Caulfield, a well-known Toronto barrister, first for the recovery of $15,000, and secondly, for breach of promise to marry. There was an added interest in the first action inasmuch as it involved, not only one prominent Vancouver lawyer, but a prominent millionaire, part owner of the Premier Mine, one of the richest mining properties in Canada.

Mrs. Catherine Caulfield, better known in Vancouver as Mrs. E. C. Boyce, first met Mr. Arnold, the lawyer she sued, when she made an agreement with him for obtaining damages from the millionaire mining man, whom she alleged had destroyed the sight of one of her eyes in the course of an assault.

The course of Mrs. Caulfield's life from the time when, as a graduate nurse in Toronto, she married Charles Campbell Caulfield, to her affair with Arnold came out in evidence in the two trials before Mr. Justice Morrison. She had remained with her first husband for little over a year. They had separated and, some years later, believing that Caulfield had secured a divorce, she married Mr. Boyce, of Edmonton.

A Charge of Bigamy.

In 1920, a charge of bigamy was launched against her at Edmonton, and she returned to that city to face trial. After suspended sentence had been ordered by the court, she had returned to Vancouver.

Later she met the millionaire mining magnate, with whom she became a close friend. It was on March 11, 1923, she claimed, that the quarrel occurred in which she had lost the sight of her left eye. Four days after the accident, she had gone to Mr. Arnold to discuss ways and means of making this man pay for what he had done. By June of that same year the relationship of client and solicitor had changed to a more intimate one, described by Mrs. Boyce as "keeping company."

At both trials, Mrs. Boyce, who was nattily and fashionably dressed, gave her testimony without hesitation. At times she voiced her indignation, and, at other imes, she broke down and wept.

After remarking that the whole point in the first trial for the recovery of the $15,000 was whether Mrs. Caulfield, or Mrs. Boyce, understood what she was doing when she signed an agreement to pay Arnold 15 per cent. of a $100,000 settlement given by this man to avoid the publicity of a trial. Mr. Justice Morrison remarked that he would have to take time to consider the case.

The court was of the opinion that the physicians were certainly well repaid. Their bills for attending to the injury to her eye and her attendant illness had been together $2,500. One doctor had charged $1,500 and the other $5,000. During the negotiations between Arnold and Mrs. Boyce these accounts had been mentioned, she having insisted that no part of them would come out of Arnold's share of the money.

Regarding the fee of $15,000, Arnold admitted, "I told her that was my fee and she paid it, but she remarked that it was the biggest fee I had ever received."

Alleges Breach of Promise.

During the course of the second trial for breach of promise, Mrs. Boyce outlined the course of her intimacy with Arnold which led to repeated promises and discussions of marriage. These first discussions had begun about the month of June, about three months after she had first called upon the Vancouver barrister. Arnold had said that, if she was willing to wait a little while, he would see what he could do about marrying her.

Preparations for the wedding were made. They discussed bridesmaids and ushers, and she purchased a trousseau at a cost of several thousand dollars and a $250 wedding cake.

The only condition which Mr. Arnold stipulated, she testified, was that she obtain a divorce from Charles Campbell Caulfield, whom she married in Toronto, December 21, 1910. The witness said she had left Caulfield after a year because of his conduct.

Divorce proceedings were instituted upon the advice of Mr. Arnold, according to the plaintiff, and the decree was pronounced by the Senate in May, 1924, and ratified by the House of Commons on July 19.

One, dated March 29, 1924, commenced: "Well, lover, I wish you were back home." The writer added that he had "missed you most terribly," and he expressed the hope that everything was satisfactory in Ottawa so that "we can proceed as arranged and get together." He concluded by the wish that they "can be happy in the knowledge you are mine and I yours."

The second letter, written on a Tuesday, started off: "Good morning, sweetheart." Here, too, is a passage:

"I have missed you more than I can express." There is also the statement: "Notwithstanding my eccentricities I really do love you with my whole heart."

The writer continues that he will "help you be happy as you want to be." He says she is "Charley's little girl." The house is being looked after during her absence, states the writer. He "gives the orders for the day, etc.," like she would do and he explains that Pal's mange has not yet been cured and that the fish pond still runs dry.

House Cost $80,000.

During her absence in the east attending to the divorce proceedings, Mr. Arnold resided in the house at 1687 Forty-Ninth Avenue West, she testified. The house cost in the neighborhood of $80,000, she stated, and after losing it, all she got out was $2,000.

She returned from the east in May when Mr. Arnold talked of the honeymoon, she testified.

On June 12 Mr. Arnold packed his bag and walked out, stated Mrs. Boyce. Three days later he returned and she forgave him, she added. Towards the end of their acquaintance she testified that she said to Mr. Arnold that "until he was able to hold his end up he had better get out and stay out because I was tired of looking after him."

On August 29 Mr. Arnold wrote to her and stated that it would be "better for both of us to write finis and close the book." He concluded, "Good-bye and God bless you.—C.S."

The defence was that in the first case the money had willingly been paid, and, therefore, there could be no recovery; in the second, that Mrs. Boyce had not secured her divorce from Caulfield at the time of the alleged promise. Thus a legal promise of marriage could not have been given while either of the parties was married. Beyond this Arnold did not deny the facts.

Ten Thousand Doukhobors Visit Peter Vergin's Tomb

NELSON, B. C., Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—With a coating of snow on the ground and flakes lightly falling, ten thousand Doukhobors this morning are initiating their rite of remembrance at the tomb of the late Peter Vergin on Rocky Cliff, overlooking Brilliant at the head of the Valley of Consolation. No lights are to be carried as the concourse proceeds at a snail's pace over the funeral route of Nov. 2nd to the tomb, lighted by electricity, where fruit and water, the necessities of life, are present as a necessary part of the setting. The rites, which include the chanting of dirges, repeating of psalms and praying, will conclude before dawn at Peter's house, where they started half an hour after midnight.

Ceremonial will be repeated todays of remembrance of their leader who was killed six weeks ago in railway disaster.

DOPE.

Five hundred tons of opium. That's what the world needs in a year for medical purposes. But the world is making six times as much. So 2500 tons are being used for drug addicts.

To curb this traffic there'll be an international opium conference in November. It's generally agreed that the only way to shut off the dope supply is to stop making it. Not an easy job.

Nearly half of the world's opium is produced in India, under an absolute government monopoly. Interests profiting by the traffic will assert their power at the November meeting. The League of Nations will have one of its most crucial tests when it tackles opium at the conference.

LOEB AND LEOPOLD NO LONGER POSE AS SUPERMEN, SAYS JOLIET WARDEN

(By Roy J. Gibbons)

They have awakened to the enormity of their crime.

Fellow prisoners have taken the conceit out of them John L. Whitman, warden of the prison, has quickened their consciences.

Before coming here to spend "life and 99 years," the two young intellectuals simply made a grand gesture at existence. They said they knew no God, no law, no master, no restraint.

But, as guards at the penitentiary will tell you:

"That's a lot of bunk. They're just two fresh kids."

Quite a step-down that, from the role of supermen. Quite a leap from moneyed glory to anonymous station in the city of the "living dead".

Neither Ever Will be a Trusty

"Loeb and Leopold, to me, as the agent of the state to punish and reform them, mean no more than any other prisoners," the warden says.

"They are at the bottom of the scale in grade and will rise under our merit system as they deserve.

"I have put both boys in the chair factory. They are in different parts of the building, however, and do separate work.

"Loeb runs a drilling machine and makes the holes in the bottom of the chairs into which the legs fit. Leopold is in the rattan section and makes the chair bottoms.

"Their next advance is to the new prison. Over there are a number of cell houses where jurisdiction and supervision lessens as the prisoner is advanced. The highest type prisoner is the trusty. He works on our farm without guard.

"Loeb and Leopold never will attain this grade. Their crime was too spectacular. Fellow prisoners would set traps for them into which they would fall and incur the displeasure of the prison officials.

"Leopold has had a better chance at adapting himself. He started in making more chair bottoms than ever had been made before in a single day by any other prisoner. But that had to be stopped.

"The other prisoners would have grown to hate him if he had been allowed to continue. They would have 'framed' him.

"It is hard to explain such things to one unfamiliar with prison life. But those who have been around prisons understand them."

He Breaks Their Supperman Complex

As keeper of this nameless city, Whitman started to invade the egotism of the two killers as soon as they were admitted.

Whitman has a way with convicts He has worked with them and for them for 35 consecutive years in various penal institutions. More than 200,000 prisoners have passed through his hands.

"We will make Loeb and Leopold subservient. Their supermen exaggeration must be broken. They must realize that now it is the people of the state they must obey."

That is what the warden said when they came in. And he has done it.

In achieving his purpose he has resorted to no punishment. In fact, never has he raised his voice.

Whitman is regarded as one of the most influential authorities on penology in the country.

Whatever the future may hold for Loeb and Leopold rests in his hands.

The warden expects to make use of Loeb and Leopold as full-time teachers if they prove themselves worthy. But that will be only after the new $10,000,000 model penitentiary is completed.

The Walls Have Awakened Them

"If Loeb and Leopold can't adapt themselves as teachers there is plenty of office work into which they may fit. But to graduate from the manual labor into a job requiring brain work, they shall have to prove themselves worthy.

"So far both have been model prisoners. I think we have broken down their silly super-man complex."

Whitman is a believer in kindness and the prisoners call his wife an "angel."

Loeb and Leopold have come to idolize her.

The Whitmans sit with convicts when they attend chapel and they march to the communion rail with convicts.

Whitman is a gray-haired kindly faced man who neither mollycoddles nor brutalizes. Prisoners are free to come to him and explain their difficulties. He always tells them to get their grievances "off their chest".

He has had Loeb and Leopold in for one of the "family interviews".

Since then Bobbie Franks' murders have undergone a noticeable change in behavior.

"I caught Loeb blubbering in his cell the other night," a guard said. "Guess the walls have wakened 'em up. They always do sooner or later."

M.O.H. SET FREE.

Exonerated From All Blame of Death of Hamilton Girl.

HAMILTON, Dec. 10—(Canadian Press). — Dr. J. J. C. The jury, after fifteen minutes' deliberation, found that the girl's death was due to peritonitis, the cause of which was unknown.

HOUNDS WORKED WELL.

Head of Wolf Hunt Club Pleased With the Showing Made by Dogs.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The Master of the Hunt Club, Duncan Fremlin, is well pleased with the result of the showing made by the two hounds imported from Kentucky for the Algoma Wolf Hunt Club. The hounds followed a wolf through very rough country for almost four hours yesterday afternoon without being shaken off, only being called in when darkness made further chase impossible.

I regard the eventual success of our campaign as a certainty now that we have been able to get the dogs to keep the wolves on the move, said Fremlin. The first hunt was only to prove the dog. It had no other object.

Wolf tracks galore were seen by hunters on the fresh snow, but the bag was only one wolf wounded after a four-hour chase by the hounds.

The aged man was arraigned in the police court here and pleaded guilty to soliciting alms on the street.

"Judge, I have spent the last twenty Christmases in jail, and I pray God you won't make me do it again" he pleaded.

"I served time for burglary and highway robbery in Virginia, but I came to Atlanta to re-make my life. I was down and out——and here I am!"

Judge Murphy Holloway, moved by the prisoner's plea, sentenced him to the stockade until noon December 24th.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

St. Andrew's Young People Held a Meeting—Social Events in Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 10. — St. Andrew's young people held their weekly meeting on Monday night. Mr. Harry Anderson was chairman in the absence of the President, Mr. J. McEchern. After the devotional part, a solo was given by Miss Hazel Atkinson. This was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. During the business discussion which followed it was decided by the society that the meeting for the 22nd of December be withdrawn owing to the Sunday school entertainment on that evening.

Miss Dorothy Ackerman then gave an interesting discourse on the topic, "If God is good why is there sin and sorrow in the world?" Throughout her talk, Miss Ackerman dealt with the different aspects of suffering and pointed out how sorrow was God's greatest gift to man. The subject was further discussed by Rev. C. F. McIntosh. How suffering and sorrow lead to the further development of our own characters, was drawn to the attention of the young people. The next meeting is in charge of Miss Kathleen Connor. As it is to be the social evening of the month, all the young people are cordially invited to attend.

Temperance Union

The monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Bakes, Kent street. Mrs. Weston the president presided. Mrs. R. Moore had charge of the Devotional part. Devotional readings were given by Mrs. R. Moore and Mrs. E. Scarlett

On motion of Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Moore, an order was drawn on the Treasurer for thirteen copies of the "Canadian White Ribbon Tidings" for thirteen members whose papers come due in December.

Moved and seconded by Mrs. Bakes and Mrs. Shore that we hold a social at our regular meeting in February which will be February 10th., 1925. The president gave a reading "How to spend money for God", and Mrs. Shore another reading "God's Gift". The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Hore, Grand Road. At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Bakes served a lunch which was enjoyed by all and a social hour spent. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Bakes for her kind hospitality.

Rebekah Entertainment

A well filled hall at the Regent on Tuesday, greeted the comedy company of St. Andrew's Guild, Belleville, when they put on the comedy "Mr. Pim passes by". The company composed of four ladies and three gentlemen acted their parts exceedingly well, and some of them were difficult.

The three-act play which took place in the morning room at Marden house, Buckinghamshire, was filled with humour all the way through. Miss Jean McIntosh of Belleville the directress of the play (Alivia—Mrs. Marden) who was married and left her husband as he was a drunkard and convict. After he died in Australia. Mr. George Mardin, J.P. married the widow. They lived very happily together. A neice (Dinah) lived with her uncle, Mr. Marden who was her guardian. She and Brian Strange, an artist wished to get married but her uncle had some objections. M. Carraway Pim, an odd middle aged gentleman came to the home with a letter of introduction and asked a similar letter to a great man in England. While there he mentioned the fact that a Mr. Telworthy (the name of Alivia's first husband) had come over from Australia on the same boat. This caused great consternation in the household, and put the husband and wife into great difficulties, Lady Marden, George's Aunt, was spending the evening of the day the news was told them and her advise was asked for. The advice given, was good but it meant the separation of George and Alivia. But just at this time Mr. Prim came back and said he had made a mistake in the name of the man and it was Wheeler instead of Telworthy. This settled matters, and at last after his wife had brought him round to see her way about curtains and rugs and such things, in their home, she also changed his mind for him in reference to Dinah and Brian getting married. Anne the maid did her part well in each time she appeared. The play was full of fun but refined in all the parts and was very much enjoyed by everyone present as their applause showed one thing that made the play so enjoyable was, that one could hear every word that was said distinctly and the humorous parts as they came in each one's part were acted so naturally. The following are the characters and names of those taking part:—

George Marden, J.P.—Mr. Albert W. Armstrong.

Alivia (his wife)—Mrs. Jean McIntosh (Directress).

Dinah (his niece)—Miss Sylvia Ross.

Lady Marden (his aunt)—Miss Helen Cooper.

Brian Strange—Mr. Donald MacFarlane.

Carraway Pim—Mr. Wm. McIntyre.

Anne—Miss Marjorie Sherman.

Miss McIntosh, who has brought her Company to Campbellford last year for Loch Lomond Rebekah Lodge, is well known in Campbellford and the citizens were glad to hear her again.

Mr. George Lucy entertained the audience with instrumental music on the piano before the play began, and also between acts. The Rebekahs are to be gratulated on the success of their entertainment.

After the play was over the Company from Belleville were taken to the Lodge rooms and the ladies of the committee served a dainty lunch, and a social time spent before returning to Belleville. This same play was given in the City Hall at Belleville on Wednesday night of last week.

Mr. J. Jones, of Napanee, has leased the farm on the Town line, known as the late Charles Stephens homestead. He will take possession shortly.

The pair of blankets, which were given away at the Regent Theatre on Monday night to the one holding the lucky number, was given to Mrs. Labrashe's daughter, who lives on Front street.

"INHUMAN, CRUEL AND WICKED."

The suggestion reported to have been made by Professor Dean of the Ontario Agricultural College that condemned murderers should not be hanged but turned over as subjects for medical research merits, the characterization placed upon it by Dr. J. T. Fotheringham, President of the Academy of Medicine, who described it as "absolutely inhuman, cruel and wicked."

The possibilities of such a practice are so horrible as to shock the public.

No matter how heinous may have been the crime for which he was found guilty, the thought of using a human being for experiments as to the development of certain diseases and the effect of certain drugs and treatments is horrifying.

The suggestion barks back to the dark ages, and there is no place in modern civilization for a practice that is characterized by Dr. Fotheringham as "arousing nothing but horror, and if followed would lead to ruinous effects."

MUNICIPAL TAXATION.

The Citizens' Research Institute is continuing its efforts on behalf of the overburdened taxpayer, and in its latest bulletin just issued some interesting facts are given.

It will be somewhat surprising to learn that the municipalities of Canada raised in taxes in 1922 well over $175,000,000, and that this amount will be considerably increased by next year.

The thought that in municipal taxation alone Canada has to pay each year a sum equivalent to $17 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion suggests that the Institute is on the right track when it declares that what the taxpayers do of a practical nature to secure control of local taxation will react favourably on Provincial and national taxation.

Charity is not the only thing that should begin at home, and the municipality that is needlessly extravagant in its expenditures has little logical right to quarrel with either Provincial or Federal administrations over the question of economy.

It is interesting to note that the bulletin puts much emphasis upon the question of tax arrears.

Councils are urged to see that their civic budgets make allowances for uncollectable taxes, and the importance of reducing tax arrears is strongly pressed as a necessary contribution toward lower taxation.

The Research Institute has dug up a mass of convincing information, and its bulletins should be of great value to members of municipal spending bodies.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

There is much sound common sense in the suggestion made by Deputy-Minister Ballantyne in the fourth annual report of the Ontario Department of Labour that buyers of machinery should stipulate that the appliance purchased should be as fool-proof as possible.

There are still far too many accidents in the industrial concerns of the Province, and while a large measure of these may be due to the carelessness of the victim, it is evident that a considerable percentage of these mishaps could be avoided were Mr. Ballantyne's recommendation to be followed by manufacturers in general.

The records of the Workmen's Compensation Board show that industrial accidents are a costly factor in modern business, and in the general interest more attention should be paid to the question of using machinery that is so protected as to save even many of the negligent workmen from injury.

All the safety devices that have been invented, of course, could not eliminate accidents altogether, but it is possible by the use of such protection to greatly reduce the number of serious accidents in the industrial plants of Ontario.

Efficiency experts whose business it is to increase the output without increasing the overhead are missing a golden opportunity if they do not insist that so far as possible machinery must be made safe.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS.

There are a few features of the Christmas season that should not escape the attention of any citizen who has any thought for the welfare of others.

The Examiner has referred to some of them before; it will do no harm to recapitulate the seasonal suggestions.

In the first place, there is early shopping. The more this detail is considered the more important does it appear, and it is not necessary to do more than suggest that those who have not completed their Yuletide buying now should not postpone the task much longer.

And then there is the question of mailing Christmas parcels to friends out of town.

We are all perhaps a little careless about this matter, and because of our lack of thought the postal employees, both in the office and on the carriers' routes, are given much unnecessary work and worry.

Christmas parcels should be mailed as soon as possible; the practice of trying to time the sending so that the gifts will arrive on Christmas Eve is wrong.

People, too, should be careful about the wrapping; there are far too many parcels mailed that are so insecurely wrapped that the postal staff has the greatest difficulty in handling them.

Then there is the matter of the address. It should be prominently marked and plainly written so that the destination can be read at a glance.

Solving cross-word puzzles is an easy task compared with the trouble the postal authorities have in endeavouring to decipher some of the addresses on parcels and letters.

Other people are careless about postage, often through sheer laziness neglecting to find out how much is required, with the result that their parcels do not carry sufficient stamps.

General attention to these points will make the Christmas season more of a time of joy and happiness for many people who too often find it merely a season of extra work, worry and anxiety.

MORE PRIZE WINNERS FROM CANADA.

The fact that Canadian farmers living in the peninsula bounded by Lakes Huron and Erie won all the first prizes and several second premiums for flint corn at the current International Livestock Show at Chicago, supplanting Minnesota and the Dakotas, is making the agriculturalists of Canada plume themselves.

The region in which the prize corn was grown was covered with a dense growth of forest less than 100 years ago. It is a level plain, with a soil of the greatest richness, which, after it had been cleared of timber, needed only plowing and draining to bring it to a high degree of fertility. It has for many years produced bumper crops and the yield the first season was enormous.

As is usually the case, there is a fly in the ointment of the farmers in the favored region between Chatham and Windsor, due to the invasion of that pestiferous agent for crop destruction, the corn borer. Campaigns of the most widespread and intelligent character have been organized in an endeavor to cope with the newest troublemaker with which the tiller of the soil has to deal. Quarantines have been established at the American borders, in the hope that the area in which the borers have appeared can be segregated.

Taking a majority of the prizes for Clydesdale and Shire horses is nothing new for the farmers and stock breeders of the Canadian Northwest, nor is it an unusual occurrence for the sheep men of Ontario to gather in their share of the preiums for sheep. Now when you mention corn in the western part of Ontario the average farmer sticks out his chest, steps high and shows other signs of enthusiasm.—New York Tribune.

WAS HE REALLY WELL OFF?

Toronto police removed the body of a dead man from his house on Peter street. The only light in the place was from a tallow candle, and the officers had to make use of flashlights to find their way about.

At the morgue, where the body was sent, it was thought the man had been in want for some time—the clothing was very poor. Yet in the pockets $60 was found, nor was that all, for his belongings included three bank books showing accounts with $3,000, $8,000 and $30,000 to his credit, and tax papers proved his ownership of three houses.

As far as money goes, he was a wealthy man, bank accounts and property totaling perhaps $60,000. Was he a miser, or what? asks the London Advertiser. We have come to imagine that such people existed only between the covers of story books.

It may be that this man in Toronto found enjoyment in his sense of possession of wealth—he knew he was independently wealthy and all that—but what did it all amount to? The dead man had been in business in Toronto for some years, and at that time he must have had his circle of friends; he would have then an opportunity to know people and become aware of the needs of the community. It seems strange to find a man withdrawing almost entirely from the circle of friendship, content to see the days come and go without being in touch at all with the world outside.

He had within his grasp the power to do a great many kindly things; he might better have had a funeral where people would have come in sorrow than to have been taken away almost as an unknown by officials of the city to the morgue.

When a man comes to the end of his string a pile of money left for relatives to squabble over or for the courts to dictate ownership of is not apt to shine with the same lustre as when he was gripped by the desire for possession. The thought of a handful of mourners who may perhaps shed real tears is more pleasing than the jingle of a few more dollars thrown on top of an already large heap.

GERMAN ELECTIONS.

The Republic has won an overwhelming victory at the German elections. Whatever coalition is effected to carry on the Government, the black-white-red banner of Imperial Germany, significant of the old regime, will not flutter from the flagstaff of the Reichstag at least for some years to come. The Monarchists have received a severe setback, the Communists, in spite of the support of Moscow with men and money, have been rejected and Ludendorff and his Fascists have been obliterated.

The large number of political groups, each determine on self-expression, (although the difference between many of the fourteen groups is not discernible to any but the deepest studact of German politics), makes it difficult to draw conclusions or to measure exactly the significance of the voting. Added to the complexity of this multiplication of many groups is the fact that an intricate and most thoroughly German system of transferable voting further clouds the situation. Yet out of the obscurities emerges the significant fact that the Moderates have triumphed and the Extremists of both Right and Left have lost ground.

The Reichstag was dissolved on October 20, after all efforts of Chancellor Marx to reconstitute his Coalition Cabinet along lines which would ensure the support of a large group had failed. The thorn in the flesh of the Chancellor at that time was the Nationalist Party, who wanted representation in the Cabinet, but at the same time failed to consent to a proposal not to nominate as one of those representatives anyone who had voted against the Dawes plan and the London agreement. It would obviously have made the Cabinet a laughing-stock if one of its members had been opposed to the rest of his colleagues on the single issue that dominated all others in domestic and foreign affairs.

The situation was further complicated for Chancellor Marx by the ultimatum issued by the People's Party, of which Stresseman is the leader, that they would withdraw their support of the Coalition if the demands of the Nationalists were not accepted.

As a result of the polling yesterday the Government will probably go back to what is called the Wirth Coalition, consisting of Socialists, Centrists and Democrats, with Chancellor Marx, chief of the Centrists or Catholic party, as leader once more. Against them will be combined the Communists, the Nationalists and the Fascists, leaving the People's Party the choice of swallowing their pride and asking to be included as a fourth party in the Marx Coalition or of siding with the Nationalists, with whom they have strong sympathies, both being alike Monarchists.

Whichever way political events move, Germany is assured of a more stable and secure administration. The Cabinet will no longer find it necessary to bargain with opponents for support in order to ensure passage of their measures. The black-gold-red flag has triumphed over the black-white-red and the November spirit is once more revived. The da yof a restoration of the Monarchy in Germany is not yet.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 9. — For extra choice Xmas steers private sales are being made as high as $9.50 to $10.50 a cwt. Baby beeves of the choice kind, sold to-day at $11 and $11.50 a cwt. The top for choice handyweight butchers is around $7, and good butchers are $6.50 medium $5.50 up, and common butchers $4.50 a cwt. up. Most of today's cows were either choice or canners, and the price of these was steady. A few loads of stockers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, sold this morning at $4.50 to $4.75 a cwt. Trade is good in general, and the supply of good butchers' cattle is not too large.

The demand for good calves shows no relaxation and choice ones are still wanted at 12 cents, and good calves 10 to 11 cents a pound. The bulk of medium calves are going at 9 to 9½ cents a pound.

With a light first run of lambs this market was not disposed to any weakness this morning. One bunch of 80-lb. lambs sold at 13¾ cents, and other good ewes and wethers were 13¼ cents. Handyweight choice butchers' sheep are selling at $7 and $7.50 a cwt.

Some buyers are bemoaning the fact that hogs had strengthened again, but there is a sufficient demand to hold the prices at a further advance of 25 cents a cwt., making the f.o.b. quotations $9.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.71.

Sterling cables, $4.71 3-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press).—With intensified drought in Argentina and with polar gales and snow west of here, corn and wheat to-day for the second time in twenty four hours jumped beyond any high price record of either grain this season. The entire grain list finished strong. Corn 1¼ to 2 3-8 cents up, May 128 1-8 to 123¾; wheat showing 1 1-8 to 2 cents rise, May 165 3-8 to 165½, and July 146 1-8 to 146¾, with oats at half to 1 1-8 cents advance. In provisions the outcome was 12 to 37 cents gain.

Corn led the way in the ascent to new peak prices, every delivery of corn reaching a fresh top record almost as soon as trading began.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press).—There is some increase in egg production but the increase is largely on specialized poultry farms where pullets are hatched early. At consuming centres more fresh eggs are arriving and prices are easier.

Montreal market higher, jobbing extras 65 to 70, firsts 50 to 55; other grades unchanged.

Winnipeg dealers paying delivered fresh extras 60, firsts 55, seconds 36 to 38.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press).—The enquiry from English importers for grain here to-day was again fairly good, but no business of importance resulted.

There was some demand from local buyers for No. 1 Northern wheat and sales of a few odd loads were made at 11¾ cents per bushel over the Winnipeg December option c.i.f. bay ports. The demand for grain showed no improvement and the market was quiet with odd car lots of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.06, and No. 3 grade at $1.05 per bushel, ex-track; Ontario No. 2 white oats at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents and No. 4 grade at 59 cents per bushel, ex-store.

A strong feeling continues to prevail for eggs and the prospects are for higher prices in the near future owing to the small supplies coming forward and the steady decrease in stocks on spot.

The butter market remains very quiet owing to the absence of any important demand from outside sources, but prices were unchanged.

The improvement noted in the demand from English importers for cheese continues and with advance in prices bid and the increased strength in the foreign exchange situation exporters here have been in a position to accept most of the orders that have come forward and a good trade had resulted. On spot current receipts sold at 16 3-4 to 17 cents per pound.

Crop beans were still on good demand and prices were quoted at $2.65 and $2.75 per bushel.

A THOUGHT.

TRAILS.

When I have passed the last, far hill-blue turning
Of life's long trail against the sunset burning,
If some can say: "I saw his campfire's flame Gleam through the dark as up the trail I came,
Foot-weary and discouraged,—and found rest,
He never thought to ask me for my name,
But filled the coffee-pot, and swiftly spread
Fresh-gathered balsam branches for my bed.
We talked until the low moon notched the west.
He said not much. But somehow when he spoke
Within my weary heart new courage woke.
Forgotten was the aching muscle-strain
Of plodding feet and lagging paddle-stroke.
The sullen Future turned a comrade face,
The grim world seemed a kindly camping place,
The trail-end grew a gladder thing to gain!"
Then can I face the coming night with laughter
Till dawn-light gilds the trail of the Hereafter.

DREAMS EACH HAS ITS OWN MEANING.

Often the sweet strains of music can be plainly heard in dreams.

It heralds for the dreamer, peace of mind in wakened hours, and success in love and business. It is a good omen to seem to be singing alone, while good times are ahead if you are singing with a group.

Interpretations.

If you see yourself making a speech, be careful of what you say; if you are listening to a speech you will soon receive advice that will be profitable if heeded.

When you see yourself quitting things to keep in mind; if quitting peacefully you will be successful elsewhere, to be quitting in a huff beware of strained financial conditions.

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

WOMEN IN THE CHAIR

The Proper Style of Address for Them to Use.

There is one problem brought about by the entry of women into public life which is in need of solution. How should a speaker address the chair when it is occupied by a woman?

In the absence of any accepted standard, speakers either mumble something indistinctly or use one of the following methods:

"Madam Chair."
"Madam Chairman."
"Madam Chairwoman."
"Mrs. (or Miss) So and So."

Which is correct? The equivalent of "Mr. Chairman" is "Madame Chairwoman," but this appears to be the least popular of all forms of address.

Miss Florence Underwood, Secretary of the Women's Freedom League, insists that "Madame Chairman" is correct.

"Doesn't it seem a little inconsistent?" asked a newspaper representative. "If a man who takes the chair is a chairman, shouldn't a woman who takes it be a chairwoman?"

"Certainly not," protested Miss Underwood. "Sex should not come into the question at all. When a woman takes the chair she becomes a chairman just as when she writes a book she becomes an author—not an authoress. You don't speak of a 'doctoress.' Why should you speak of an authoress or a chairwoman. We object to such words."

DREAMS EACH HAS ITS OWN MEANING.

Insects, reptiles, fish, etc., which come crawling into your dreams, are usually favorable signs.

There are a few exceptions, which indicate small troubles. The appearance of ants forecast achievement through industry, while the buzzing of flies brings a message of profit increase.

The snake, always dreaded, may be a favorable sign to the dreamer, for it may awaken him to the fact that he has shown ingratitude and should retrace his steps. Oysters and salmon predict feasting and plenty, with good luck and pleasant occupations.

Appearance of whales, tortoises, sharks, etc., bring a warning of dangers that lurk in secret enemies.

And you can follow the path of the lowly snail to an honorable position of responsibility.

HOW FINGER PRINTS ARE FORGED

BY ROY J. GIBBONS

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Infallibility of fingerprints is challenged by Albert Wehde, nationally known designer and engraver, here.

Experts say that there is only one chance in several trillion of two fingerprints being exactly alike.

No Wehde claims such identifications can be forged and he convincingly demonstrates how the forgeries can be effected by means of a comparatively simple process.

What he has done threatens to smash the whole fabric of fingerprint theory and practice.

He was sent there for attempting the transport of arms to East Indian revolutionists before the United States entered the war. President Harding freed him after he had served six months.

At the prison he was assigned to laboratory work in the fingerprint section because of his expert knowledge in photography and engraving.

There he says he saw a visiting Oklahoma detective endeavor to "doctor" a set of fingerprints later offered as evidence in a sensational train robbery trial in which a $33,000 reward figured.

This started Wehde thinking.

From current gossip around the prison he learned that at least two men had been led to execution in America within recent years soley on the strength of circumstantial evidence built about the fable of the fingerprint infallibility.

Wehde made a few experiments. He was successful in tranferring or forging his own finger print to a watch cover.

Then he tried duplicating the same fingerprints so that they could, for example, be photographed from a glass goblet in New York and later placed on a bloody murder hatchet in San Francisco.

Persistent trial brought about the desired effect.

"I first obtained possession of a genuine fingerprint, which was easy, no smooth-surfaced article can be handled without leaving digital marks," he says. "These marks I then developed and brought into bold relief by dusting powder on them.

"I photographed this imprint, making a negative the exact size of the original. An etching is made from this negative, preferably on copper. This etching serves as a die.

"All anyone has to do to transfer a fingerprint thus made is to take a piece of any heavy correspondence paper. Moisten the ridge slightly and force it into the ridges of the etching by rubbing the back of the paper firmly with any hard smooth, instrument.

"When the paper is lifted off it will be found that the portion which bears the exact impression is now an exact replica of the skin-design on the finger involved. Mostening this paper transfer by touching it to any perspiring part of the human body, or slightly greasing it with any fatty or oily substance, then pressing it against any surface capable of holding a direct fingerprint, you transplant an exact copy of the original finger impression, including every detail and sweat-pore."

By much the same fashion, Wehde can put collodium into the copper matrix instead of the paper and thus manufacture an artificial finger surface which can be worn and used to give false identification in cashing checks by anyone dishonestly motivated.

Wehde says he is moved to give his secret to the world to preserve the lives and property of innocent parties who could be sentenced to death and jail under the adiminstration of the fingerprint law as now practiced in our courts.

RUM RUNNERS TRANSFER ACTIVITIES FROM NASSAU TO BASE AT HAMBURG

Only Those Who Established Warehouses and Facilities of a Permanent Nature While Rum Running Was at its Height Now Remain.

BY BOB DORMAN

Its revenue from the export of liquor to the United States is dropping by millions.

Not that the eastern coast of the United States is drying up; the smugglers of illicit liquor have hied themselves to other fields, to Bermuda, to Havana, to Hamburg, Germany.

In an extended survey of liquor dealing on the eastern coast of the United States I have lived with rum runners, played cards with them, shot pool with them, buddied with them generally.

But it is a sad bunch that remain in Nassau. They are only those who established warehouses and facilities of a permanent nature while rum-running was at its height.

The free traders have gone to Bermuda and Havana. The big dealers are shipping direct from Europe. They buy their whisky and other beverages where they are produced, ship them to Hamburg, Germany, a "free port," where they are transshipped in steamers bound for "Rum Row" off the American coast, without the payment of any export duties.

The mad, bad days are gone.

No more does the champagne flow in celebration of some bootlegging coup. Wild women do not dance on liquor-covered tables to the accompaniment of the shrieks of their companions and the shouts of hilarious rum-runners with pockets lined with gold as the result of successful defiance of the guardians of the law and hijackers alike.

No more are the bars lined four and five deep buying for the house and telling tales of hairbreadth escapes from wind and wave, from the fire-spitting guns of the revenue cutters of Uncle Sam.

Instead, the tables are mostly empty. A few patrons take their evening drinks stolidly. With gloomy shakes of the head they tell of the good times that are past.

Tales of bribery of the officers of the law I heard aplenty.

One half-drunken rum-runner said, "For 50 cents a case I could take a cargo of liquor into the city dock at Miami and unload it into freight cars for shipment to the north."

Norman Butler, supercargo on one of the boats of the Butlers, one of the largest wholesale and retail liquor dealers in Nassau, told me "that liquor running in small boats is not so good any more. It takes too much time waiting for the shore boats to come out, with all the expense and danger incurred in keeping a ship at sea for months. The best way is to see the right parties in the States and fix it so that you can bring your ship into port and discharge her cargo at a dock with a guarantee of freedom from interference."

The decreasing business of Nassau is not due to a slackening in the demand from the arid coast to the west, but to the greed of the New Providence government itself.

With the springing up of the vast re-export trade in liquor, a tax of 14 shillings ($3.50) per case was imposed. With the fabulous prices paid in the United States this was a mere trifle to the rum-runners. They paid without a murmur.

But the steady flow of liquor into the states brought prices to a lower level with a consequent stabilization of prices.

It was at this time that the assembly of New Providence took the step that has partially "killed the goose that laid the golden egg."

They raised the re-export tax of 24 shillings ($6) a case, one legislator remarking, "that we can charge what we please. The bootlegger has to buy his liquor here."

An American, one of the leading rum-runners whose purchases ran from 7000 to 10,000 case per week, heard the debate. He took the next boat from Nassau with the statement "that I have bought my last case of liquor in the Bahamas." So far he has kept his word.

Other big dealers followed his lead.

Frantic at the slumping liquor revenues, the New Providence assembly repealed the increased tax, but the daamge had been done.

Custom reports for the three months ending June 30, 1924, show the falling off, in that the re-exports for the period totaled $418,660 as against $2,184,775 for the same period in 1923, a drop of $1,766,115.

For the period ending Sept. 30, 1924, the re-exports were valued at $306,065 as against $1,639,425 for the same period in 1923, a drop of $1,333,360.

JOY.

Take Joy home,
And make a place in thy great heart for her,
And give her time to grow, and cherish her;
Then will she come and sing to thee,
When thou art working in thy furrow; ay,
It is a comely fashion to be glad;
Joy is the grace we say to God.

—John Ingelow.

NEWS OF STIRLING AND THE DISTRICT

Death of Wilbert Harlow in Florida—An Early Morning Fire.

STIRLING, Dec. 9.—Mr. Wilson Harlow received word on Friday of the death of his only brother, Mr. Wilbert Harlow, who died very suddenly in Florida where he had gone for the benefit of his health. The remains will be interred there.

The Women's Institute met on Friday afternoon, the attendance was not very large, but an interesting programme was rendered, one item being an account of the Provincial Convention held in Toronto recently.

House on Fire

Friday morning about five o'clock the ringing of the fire bell aroused the sleeping villagers.

Mr. Isaac McLaughlin who works in Mr. Thompson's bakery was going down Church street, on his way to work, discovered a blaze in Mr. C. B. McGuire's new house. He awoke Mr. Matthews who lives next door, also 'phoning in an alarm, but he and Mr. Matthews extinguished the fire before the firemen arrived In the short time, considerable damage was done amounting to several hundred dollars.

The Mission Band of St. Andrew's Church held a successful sale and tea Saturday afternoon in the Agricultural rooms, over $45.00 being realized.

Winning Prizes

Mr. H. Van Allen has been exhibiting poultry at the different Winter Fairs, At the Royal Fat Stock show in Toronto, he exhibited Ducks and Geese, twenty birds in all and carried off four seconds, three thirds, two fourths, and four fifth prizes. Competition was very keen, exhibits coming from all parts of Canada and some of the Northern United States. He sent 22 birds to the Ottawa Winter Fair and will also exhibit at other places.

Stirling Hockey team dropped out of the Trent Valley League for this season .

Word was received here on Saturday of the death of Miss Jessie Fralick, in the Toronto General Hospital, on Friday, and to-day the word came of the death of her sister in Belleville Hospital. They were daughters of Judge E. B. Fralick and Mrs. Fralick, of Belleville, and nieces of the Misses Judd, of Stirling. The sympathy of the public is extended to them in their double bereavement.

A double funeral will take place on Wednesday from their late home, Moira Street, Belleville.

Mrs. Catherine Reynolds has gone to Marmora to spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Fred. Wells.

Mr. Stewart Elliott has secured a position with the Quaker Oats Co., Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindenfield, having returned from their honeymoon trip, are comfortably settled in Mrs. Chas. Kingston's house on Front Street West. At a meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church last week they were presented with a beautiful floor lamp by members of the League.

Mr. R. P. Coulter is confined to his home, seriously ill from pneumonia and heart weakness, and is not improving as well as his friends would like.

Sunday's services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were taken by Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Toronto, a missionary from Rutlam, India, who is home on furlough. He gave two very instructive discourses on the different conditions of life in India. Having spent 23 years as a missionary, he knew his subject well, and gave facts to show the progress that has been made towards Christianizing the millions of that country.

Mr. Peter E. Rupert, of Rawdon, who spent all his life near where he died, at Sine P. O., last week, was buried at Bethel Cemetery.

He leaves two daughters and three sons, also one brother and a sister, to mourn. Mr. Rupert had been ill for some time, so his death was not unexpected.

The members of Stirling Lodge, No. 239, I.O.O.F., are planning for a visit to Havelock Lodge on Thursday, Dec. 10th.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McGee, of Belleville, have moved in with Mr. Dan. McGee, the former's father, and will remain for the winter.

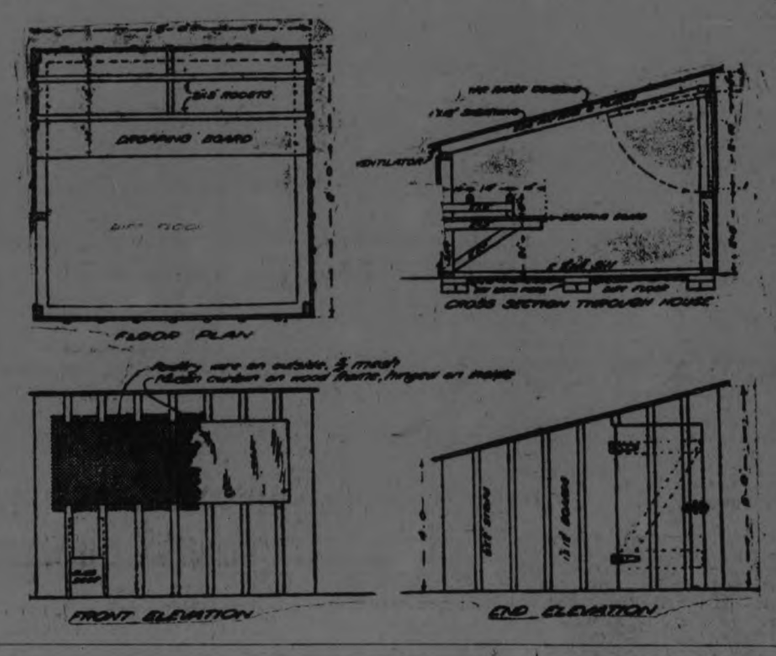
FARM-PROBLEMS

POULTRY HOUSE FOR A SMALL FLOCK OF CHICKENS IS BUILT TO SUIT COUNTRY OR CITY AT VERY LOW COST FOR MATERIAL AND WITH LITTLE LABOR BY FOLLOWING SIMPLE DIRECTIONS

Winter is Time to Prepare For Start in Poultry Raising Next Spring.

EASILY PUT UP.

Ventilation is Important in Any Poultry House—Construction Details.



The city dweller as well as the small farmer may make a good start in poultry-raising next season by starting with a brood of 20 or 25 chicks.

For their benefit has been designed just the poultry house for such a small flock, or even smaller. This article goes into detailed explanation on the construction of this kind of home.

The backyard or small farm poultry flock will rarely consist of over 20 or 25 hens, and in many cases of not more than 8 or 10.

For a flock of 20 to 25 hens a space of not less than 25 by 30 feet should be available for a yard. Where less space is available, the size of the flock should be reduced, allowing on the average 20 to 30 square feet per bird.

In the house, about three or four feet per bird should be provided Houses must be day and free from draft, but must allow ventilation.

Easy to Put Up.

The front of the poultry house should face to the south, if possible, so that the sun will shine into it.

A cheap house, 8 by 8 feet square, can be made of 2 by 4's and wide boards. The 2 by 4's are used for sills, plates, corner posts, and three rafters. No studding is required except that the boards are run up and down and add sufficient stiffness to the house. They are used also for the roof and covered with roofing paper.

The back and sides of the house also can be covered with roofing paper, or the cracks can be covered with wooden battens or strips 1½ to 3 inches wide.

Slope Roof.

In the front of the house should be left a window or opening that can be closed, when desired by a muslin screen or curtain, which serves as a protection against bad weather but allows ventilation In the side a door should be provided which will allow entrance.

A shed or single-slope roof is most practical because easiest to build. A height of 6 feet in front and 4 feet in the rear is ample. If desired, the house may be built higher, so that it is more convenient to work in; the increase in cost will be slight.

The ventilator in the rear is not needed in the northern part of the country, but it is desirable in the south.

A board floor is the most practical type of floor for most small poultry houses, as it is absolutely dry and is easy to keep clean.

A house with a board floor should be set on posts or blocks so that it is from 5 to 12 inches above the ground. When this space is left the floor will not rot so quickly and rats are not so likely to take refuge under the house.

Dropping Boards.

To keep the flock in a clean and sanitary condition, dropping boards should be provided under the roosts. This makes it easy to remove the droppings each morning and helps greatly to keep the house free from objectionable odors.

The dropping boards and roosts should be placed against the back wall. Here they are out of the way and are least likely to be reached by drafts.

The dropping boards should be about 20 to 30 inches from the floor, depending on the height of the building. This gives space enough under them so that the hens have room to exercise and is not too high for the heavier hens to fly up to.

Roosts.

The roosts should be 3 or 4 inches than a single roost is used, they should be on the same level; otherwise all the hens will try to crowd upon the highest roost.

If the roost is of light material and fairly long, it should be supported in the centre, as well as at the ends, to prevent it from sagging. An allowance of 7 to 10 inches of roost space per fowl, according to the size of the birds, should be made. If more than one roost is used, they should be placed about 15 inches apart.

Nests, which must be provided in every hen house, may be made of an ordinary orange box. The partition affords two nests.

The top is removed, the box laid on its side, and a strip about 3 inches wide laid across the lower front.

Nests may be fastened against the wall of the house, or laid on the floor. It is preferable to fasten them to the wall, or they will take up too much floor space. There should be one nest for every four or five hens.

MUTTON CHOPS.

Ventilation without drafts is the big need in a sheep barn. A sheep barn must be dry and airy. Let the sheep run out on dry nights in winter.

Part of the rough feed—alfalfa, clover, fodder—should be fed outside the sheep barn.

Keep ewes on sodground as late as possible in fall, if the ground is dry.

Wethers and cull ewes may run with the good ewes during early winter, but must be separated later.

WAR ON LOCUSTS STARTS AT HOME

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Dec. 10.—An expedition into the Kalahari desert has been organized by the South African Government to discover the breeding-places of the locusts that come forth in the summer and swarm over the farms of South Africa, destroying everything in their wake. It is hoped eventually to send a small army into this desert armed with sprayers and all the necessary equipment for killing the pest.

Some members of the expedition visited the kraal of the Barokene tribe, 200 miles within the desert, and were received by the native chief and his wife, both dressed in the European fashion and speaking English

Among these natives they found a group of some 50 white men and women serving in menial capacities. They are the descendants of nomadic forbears who trekked adventurously from the Cape, only to settle among the Barokene natives, whose workmen, to all intents and purposes, they have become.

Being white, by the laws of the country they are denied pastoral and agricultural privileges, and now they seem to have lost all initiative to move out and re-establish themselves in a white community.

FEATHER BALLS

Small round balls of feathers are used to trim the newt hats, often being perched on the top of the rounded crown.

CABBAGE GOOD MILK PRODUCER

December Is Trying Month Usually Unless Roots or Silage Are Provided.

DRUM HEAD BEST.

December is apt to be a very trying month for Milk Production, unless one is well provided with a good supply of roots or silage.

Not many small farmers or the man with one or two cows has a silo and has not perhaps enough roots to see him through the winter.

While this year Cabbages are somewhat a drug on the market for commercial purposes, they may be used to great advantage in helping along milk production.

In respect to variety there is nothing that gives such big bulk as the drum head Pickling Cabbage and nothing flushes more milk.

It cost no more to grow them than the ordinary Drumhead variety, but it is of far higher feeding value.

It is of course a good feature of cabbages that they remain in a sound feeding condition for a long while.

The writer is feeding cabbages to to his one cow and finds very good results in an increased milk flow.

SUCCESS AFTER FORTY

Achieved by Many at This Early Age.

Has a man a chance to succeed in business after he is forty years of age? This question was asked of 120 heads of various organizations in this city at a luncheon of the Rotary Club, says the New York correspondent, and the answer was overwhelmingly in the affirmative.

The gathering represented employers of over 75,000 workers in New York, and in filling out a questionaire which was given each guest several interesting figures were obtained.

That the position of office boy is usually the initial rung of the ladder of business success was indicated when 82 per cent. said that they had started in that position. Thirty-two per cent. admitted that they had not started to become a success until after they had reached the age of forty. Ninety-nine per cent. answered "Yes" to the question—Has a man a chance to succeed after he has reached the two-score mark?

Advice to Youth.

To the question—"What is your advice to youth?" the answers of the speakers included:

"Choose your job and proceed to fill it."

"Study hard with an idea of going into a profession or business for yourself."

"Keep good company and do a little more than is required of you."

"Love your mother's memory, keep clean in heart and body, and stick to truth."

ANIMALS.

Elephants are the most intelligent of all animals, monkeys next, dogs third, says Lorenz Hagenbank of the noted German family of wild beast dealers.

Why argue about it? There never was an elephant, monkey or dog that had a tenth the intelligence of the average three year old boy or girl. Patient training is frequently mistaken for intelligence. But that is as true of people as of animals.

Farm Woman Caught Owl That Was Killing Fowl

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 10.—A great owl that had been long killing poultry and wild game near South Bend, Wash., recently was caught and slain as a result of the pluck of Mrs. W. A. Wilson.

The woman, who lives on a ranch, heard a hen making a great commotion, and she saw a great horned owl attacking it. She ran out, grasped the owl and held on to it despite wounds from its talons and beak. She called her husband, who killed the marauder. It measured four feet five inches across the wings.

WEMBLEY BLAMED FOR BAD WEATHER SUNNY DAYS FEW

Probably the Long, Wet Period and Fair's Dates Only a Coincidence.

EUROPEAN LETTER.

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—England has had an unprecedented bunch of rainy, cold weather, beginning in April and lasting through October.

All during the alleged summer light overcoats were not amiss; raincoats, umbrellas and rubber shoes were in fashion; and in the evening, fires were comfortable.

And now the Jonah has been officially discovered. It is the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. And here is the proof adduced by the superstitious:

The Exposition opened on April 23 and closed on Nov. 1. During all that period the clear, sunshiny days could be counted on the fingers of one's hands.

And the day after it closed an unprecedented thing happened—the sun shone, and five days in succession there were blue skies without a semblance of rain.

But there is another dark cloud on the horizon of the sun worshippers—Wembley may be opened again next spring.

During the recent harvesting season in the French farming country the farmers were assisted by French soldiers released from duty temporarily for that purpose.

The French Government decided to do this because of the shortage of labor in agricultural districts. And expert farm hands were easily found in the army because 45 per cent of the private soldiers are recruited from the peasant class.

A similar step was taken by the government immediately after the war when large numbers of soldiers were given permission to return home on special leave to help with sowing and harvesting crops on the family farms.

But this very shortage of farmhands makes all the more remarkable the recent enactment of vexatious regulations which have to be observed by foreigners coming into France to live and work there.

These new rules will probably scare off the very people France needs—peasant farmhands from Italy and the Basque provinces of Spain.

Speaking of the French Army, somebody has just resurrected a funny yarn about President Doumergue. He comes from Southern France, from Aix in Provence, and it is there that he served his time in the French Army when a lad. The testy old colonel placed the smallest men in the company, and there were a number of them, in a section which was called "Bouts de cigares"—"Cigar butts." Little Doumergue was assigned to this bunch, but didn't let it worry him because he went swaggering around Aix:

"It's all right. I am the biggest of the cigar butts!"

This can't be vouched for, but it's a thumping weird yarn which is going the rounds in the clubs of the cities on the shores of the Mediterranean.

It seems that some of our naval vessels have been cruising around stopping at various ports. Many social attentions have been paid to the young officers, and they have reciprocated by giving dances on their vessels.

But Europeans are wet and our naval vessels, as part of U. S. territory are dry. The situation has been solved by anchoring a barge next to the ship on which the dance is being held.

And a gangplank is fixed, so that it end is only about three inches from the barge. Thus the barge is not really connected with the ship.

And when the guests of the Americans get thirsty for something stronger than lemonade they are invited "to go to Europe"—alias the booze-laden barge.

GREASING THE TROLLEY WIRE

A number of substantial advantages have been derived from greasing the trolley wire. In the first place it prevents sparking, which is severe on the eyes of those who happen to be in the vicinity, and it also prevents much wear and tear on the wire. The idea of greasing the wire is particularly valuable when applied to electric mine haulage. One greasing of the wire serves for five or six months.

THE TYRANT

Young Brother— "What in the world makes the baby cry so?"

Ditto Father (wearily)—"I suppose he overheard me say that I managed to get a little sleep last night."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS BY GARDEN LOVERS

Gifts that recall the joy and glory of summer in the garden will be greatly enjoyed by the garden lovers. Plants, seeds, bulbs, small and unusual tools, even this short list presents fascinating possibilities to the person who delights in the appropriate in giving. One of the chief things to be considered, perhaps, is whether the friend's garden is an old one or whether it is in its infancy. Of one thing, one may always rest assured, no garden is ever complete, no gardener is ever satisfied; always there is a tree, a shrub, a flower needed to complete the collection; always there is a new or novel tool desired to make gardening a greater delight. The friend who supplies the smallest of these needs is sure of a harvest of gratitude.

Announcing Delayed Gift.

A pleasant way to announce the future arrival of something for the garden is to send a small fore-runner on Christmas morning. If you wish to tell your friend that you have paid for a rare evergreen that the nurseryman will send at the right time send a note to that effect with a box of tiny Christmas trees and bright berries with which to fill the window box.

Such a box will be both a present joy and a promise of a permanent joy to come. If instead of an evergreen a collection of rosebushes has been ordered, a single rose may be sent with the note of greeting that announces the fact.

Perhaps the recipient of the Christmas gift only rents her house, yet finds the garden necessary to her happiness. To such an one, send a collection of the seeds of the less commonly used annuals. Grandmother's garden knew some of these as Painted Tongue, Mourning Bride, Butterfly Flower, Seedsmen sell them as Salpiglosis, Schizanthus, Scabiosa. To these, add single annual chrysanthemums, sweet sultan, bush morning glories, varieties of the glorified Phlox Drummondi and the splendid improved petunias. Even if these are not entirely new to her, the garden lady will be pleased.

A Present of Vines.

Perhaps the garden which is to have a Christmas present needs some climbers. A pleasant gift would be a collection of seeds of annual vines, such as the balloon vine, the cypresses, including the new cardinal climber, the Brazilian morning glory, and the graceful Murandia vine in its many colors.

A garden new or old needs a collection of such summer bulbs as the Zephyr lillies and Hyacinthus candicanes, and always there is room for such old-time sweet smelling things as lavender, bergamont and the "musk" of our grandmothers, which the growers call mimulus mochatus.

Do you prefer to send something besides seeds or plants? Then why not a collection of clear, slender glass vases of different heights? Or one or two of the books on amateur gardening that are both practical and pleasing? Or if your gardener friend is an expert, why not a specially bound copy of Bacon's Essay on Gardens, which has charmed the heart of every gardener since the time of the great Elizabeth?

Lending a Personal Touch.

If the intense personal touch is desired, home designed gifts may be made. A wide flat basket, painted or dyed at home, together with a stout pair of gardener's shears, and a pair of garden gloves will be appropriate. There are no handier small tools for the garden than a steel-tined kitchen fork, and long tin spoon. Two such forks, one spoon, and a small watering pot, the sprinkler and the fork and the spoon handles to be painted a gay favorite color, would make a set both useful and acceptable.

Another home made gift might be a dozen round stakes a foot long, and a dozen flat ones, four inches long, all painted a pleasant gay green. The first would be used to tie up budding plants, while the others could have pasted on them, the names of seeds sown and would be used as markers.

A still different type of gift might consist of colored prints of old gardens designed for framing, or, what would also please a zealous gardener, a scrap book for garden snap-shots and treasured newspaper clippings on such gardening information as most appeals to the recipient's heart.

THE WESTERN "HIP-HOLD"

If you have occasion to pull hard on a rope, here is a simple method that will help you hold better: Loop one end of the rope over your right hand and put it behind your hip, pressing down to hold it there. Use your left hand as in ordinary pulling. This is generally called the western "Hip Hold" because in roping horses and cattle the cow-boys often use it.—Hubert A. Stump.

OUR GORGEOUS MOVIE PALACES.

A distinguished Englishman visiting this country was surprised at the gorgeousness of our movie houses and their size. He says London has nothing to compare with them. The English houses are small and insignificant. English investors, he said, would not consider for a moment the investing of so much money in a venture of this character.

BRAZIL WANTS OUR BOOKS.

A recent report of one of our consular agents in Brazil says that here is a great opening in that country for American books. A round of the book stores of Rio de Janeiro shows that all the books in the English language on sale were of London origin and were not exactly of the character wanted generally. There is a strong demand for books of a scientific nature.

KEEP HANDS COOL.

When making popcorn balls keep pan of cold water near and dip the hands in it frequently while molding. You can handle the balls while they are very hot and they will not stick.

FOR SUBSTITUTES.

Rice, spaghetti or macaroni should frequently be substituted for potatoes. Both are not necessary at the same meal since they are such starchy foods.

ADD ROSE WATER.

Add a few drops of rosewater to the alcohol you use for external application and the odor in the present days preparations will not be objectionable.

END OF A PERFECT YEAR.

"When the frost is on the pumpkin
And the fodder's in the shock,
Then unto the country bumpkin
All the politicians flock.
Then it's 'honest hand of labor,'
And it's 'pillar of the state,'
With a 'don't forget me neighbor,
And it's 'bless the farming people,'
And it's 'put it there, old sock!'—
When the frost is on the pumpkin
And the fodder's in the shock."

EDUCATION KEEPS NATION ADVANCING

Campbellford Girl Tells Why She Intends to be High School Teacher.

BY VELMA RUNNELLS.

In this world there are all different classes of people. Each one has his or her own talent. If they but use it in the right manner, their aim in life is accomplished.

My aim in life is to be a High School teacher. Why is it that I wish to devote my time and energy to education? Because education is, to-day, the great power of the world. An uneducated nation is an ignorant nation; an ignorant nation crumbles away as the dust under your feet. That is the reason why I desire my life to be devoted to education.

How am I going to achieve it? I am going to accomplish that which I am aiming at by studying, brain-thinking, and leaving high pleasures behind. A certain amount of pleasure always helps you to smile. So do not leave all pleasure out.

In the end, I hope to be a High School teacher and give pupils a certain amount of education, so that when they stand on the threshold of the problems of life they will not drag down their Empire, but build and reconstruct it.

PRIZE AWAITS OWNER.

4. An adequate playground.
5. Playground apparatus; basket-ball courts, a baseball diamond.

THRESHING MEANS WORK FOR MOTHER

Interesting Story of Harvest's End Tells of Hard Household Work.

BY NELLIE DOUGLASS.

Father came in and told us the threshers were coming for supper. He then went and telephoned our neighbours, with whom we exchanged work, to come over the following morning. Mother and I knew there was work ahead of us. She baked and fried meat, while I peeled apple for pies, made apple sauce, and peeled potatoes.

When we had supper nearly ready, we heard the whistle and knew they were here. They set the machine and then we heard them coming in My! how hungry they were!

The hard work all day and the slow drive to our place in the fresh air had given them a wonderful appetite that city people might envy.

The morning dawned bright and cold, and the men were out early, oiling the machine and fixing everything in readiness. We had breakfast fast ready by 6.30, and the threshers soon came in—and they did enjoy their meal. We were glad to see them leave the kitchen as we had some work to do. There were going to be ten men more than the night before, so we pulled the table to the full length.

After dinner, two neighbour girls came to watch the threshing, and we had a great time. We watched the straw stack getting bigger and bigger and knew we would have lots of straw for the winter. The wind was blowing the straw here and there and nearly blinding the men.

Beside the carrier, the men got the full benefit of the dirt from the machine and we could hardly tell who they were, because their faces were so dirty. Then we went round to the front of the barn and saw the men carrying away boxful after boxful of the plump, yellow wheat. What a good time they did have, though working so hard!

AND THEN HE WOKE UP.

"What would you do," asked Uncle Bill, "if you stood at the root of a tree with your foot on the head of a live rattlesnake, a panther was crouching on a branch above ready to spring, and you saw a wild Indian running at you with uplifted tomahawk?"

REFERENCE BY BRODEUR, LIBEL, SAYS WINNIPEG

BRODEUR'S REMARK.

Montreal Alderman Says Toronto and Winnipeg Just as Bad.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—"There is no commercialized vice in Winnipeg. The statement of Alderman Brodeur before the Montreal police investigation yesterday might well be termed a libel on the city," declared Police Chief Chris. H. Newton last evening.

According to the Montreal despatch, Alderman Brodeur cited Winnipeg as an example of failure to clean up "red-light" districts.

Mayor J. S. Farmer, commenting on the despatch, stated the police commission was always active in suppressing such traffic when information concerning it was received, and that the police had shown no negligence in this regard.

BRODEUR TESTIFIES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—Continuing his testimony at the police probe Tuesday, Ald. Brodeur, chairman of the city's executive committee, said he had never heard that Tony Frank had owned five 'houses' on Cadieux Street, or that Anna Herscovitch was still running them in partnership with another person. It had been heard that a constable was living with a woman in a disorderly house and attempts had been made to raid it. These, however, had never been successful.

Mike Gambino had run a house, Mr. Lanctot claimed, and Mr. Brodeur stated that on his more recent return to this country an attempt had been made to deport him as an undesirable, but it had failed on account of his Canadian citizenship.

Mr. Lanctot put it to the witness that 90 per cent. of the raids were made by consent, as the cases could be defeated if defended, owing to the lax manner in which they were made. Mr. Brodeur hotly denied this.

Asked if he could not close the disorderly houses of the city, Mr. Brodeur replied that the co-operation of the law, the police and the courts would be necessary. He cited Winnipeg as an example of failure to accomplish such a purpose. He had discussed the matter with Recorder Geoffrion and following the meeting of the executive and the committee of sixteen on January 18, 1923, had arranged a meeting between Dr. A. K. Haywood and Recorder Geoffrion.

It was understood that Recorder Geoffrion and Dr. Haywood would go to Europe and visit principal countries in order to find out what remedy could be applied to Montreal with a view to stamping out commercialized vice in Montreal. He said that through an indiscretion committed by a Toronto newspaper the committee of sixteen changed its mind and refused to pay the expenses of Dr. Haywood for the trip. The city was willing at that time to pay the expenses of Recorder Geoffrion. It is still of the same opinion, he said.

Are Raided Often.

"Can you not close the houses?"—"We are doing our best. They are raided often."

"You closed or the police closed the 'Flora Harris house'?"—"I cannot say. I think it was before the executive committee's time. We closed Rose David's house, however. That was done with great difficulty, for we had to send police officers in there to make a case."

Upon the Judge inquiring about Flora Harris's case, Captain Sauve intervened to state that the only time they could close her house was when she was condemned to jail. "The moment she comes out," he said, "she opens her house again." (Laughter).

Mr. Lanctot to Mr. Brodeur: "Did you directly or indirectly protect any persons in Montreal, particularly some of your friends?"—"A specific question would be more loyal, but waving this courtesy, which you do not give me, I say no."

"Did you not intervene in the cases of coal merchants who sold coal short weighed?"—"No."

"Have you ever told anyone heard here as witness not to tell all they knew?" asked Mr. Lanctot.

Ald. Brodeur (laughing)—"There is no danger."

"Did you ask anyone to omit a name?"—"No, never."

Ald. Brodeur was then asked about gaming houses and fortune tellers. He said he knew they existed, but figures might be better given by the Chief.

"You did not know these things," said Mr. Lanctot, "and yet there is no director of safety."

"We do not need one," replied Ald. Brodeur. "There is a Chief of Police and a Fire Chief. I do not see why we should pay $8,000 or $9,000 a year, when it is not necessary."

No Worse Than Toronto.

Urged by the court to express his own opinion as to the means of getting rid of commercialized vice, Ald. Brodeur said a house of refuge, where prisoners condemned for being inmates of houses could go after serving their sentence, would help a great deal. Such accused when released do not know where to go, and return to their old haunts. One time, there was a proposal to take matters in hand, and with that in view, Recorder Geoffrion drew up a project which was submitted to the council of the bar. It was immediately rejected by that body.

Ald. Brodeur said Montreal was not any worse than Toronto or Winnipeg. He said he knew what conditions prevailed in these cities where raids are practically confined to swell apartment houses.

At this juncture, Ald. Brodeur started to read a clipping from a newspaper, telling of a raid made in London, Ont., upon the house of a man who had come to Montreal some time previously and had lectured on this city's morality or rather immorality. This man was arrested in a raid upon his own house and in this place three women were found. "That is the kind of saints," said Ald. Brodeur, "who come here and find Montreal a den of iniquity."

Mr. Lanctot objected strongly to the reading of the clipping and asked Ald. Brodeur to file it in the record instead.

"I will file it," said Ald. Brodeur, "but I wish to record in my testimony that Montreal is often libelled and maligned by people who should behave themselves well instead of finding the beam in their neighbor's eye."

CHRISTMAS GIVING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Children, Teachers and Parents Organized the System.

A pleasant aspect of present-day Christmas activities is that presented by the gift giving by children through the public schools. This activity seems to have started spontaneously in many places so that no one city or community can claim to be its originator. Wherever it originated, this gift giving is fast becoming an admirable part of public school life. Methods of managing this activity are so similar that a description of the plans of a single school practically describe those of all schools.

Preparations for this holiday giving, commonly begin two or three weeks before Christmas. Notice of this beginning is made by teachers. Committees consisting of children, teachers and parents are appointed. Sometimes a group of the mothers of children in one room are given charge of the plans and activities of that room. Again teachers and children make and carry out their own plans.

The names of needy children or of whole families are sometimes obtained through personal knowledge, but in the larger cities these generally come from the lists of welfare organizations and public-spirited newspapers.

Actual conditions in each case are ascertained through personal visits made by members of the Christmas committees. Preparations to suit the needs of these individuals are then carefully made. Does the committee find that a certain little girl most earnestly desires a woolly dog? The committee secures that dog. Does an undernourished little boy need special food? The committee provides that food. So on through the lists. That which is really wanted by the poor children is provided whenever possible. Very generally now clothing is not given at Christmas. Thanksgiving time and later usually see such needs supplied. Christmas gifts, save in special cases, consists of food and toys.

How the gifts pour in as the time for giving comes nearer! Tables in the corners of the school rooms are piled high with packages, teachers are besieged with questions and advice; money comes in for last-minute needs, and finally, a few days before the schools close for the holidays, gifts and names are carefully checked up, cash counted, and all contributions, information and much earnest advice are put into the hands of those who do the actual distributing.

This last is really the hardest task of all. Members of the committees, whether children or grown-ups, would naturally prefer to be about their own plans and enjoyments, but the spirit of the time prevails. Baskets of good food, toys obtainable in no other way, and more than all, something of brotherly kindness are put into the lives of parents and children living in homes to which otherwise little of Christmas would come.

GIANT SAMSON'S PUTTING STONE

Legend Attached to Boulder Is Very Interesting.

By C. N.

In different parts of Scotland there are mammoth stones which the giant Samson is credited with having thrown from varying distances. But the one I know best stands on an eminence known as Tarn Duan, near Callander. Perched on the very crest of the hill, from certain viewpoints it seems as if a puff of wind were all that is necessary to set the stone arolling into the plain below, but it has, in reality, quite a solid foundation.

The legend attached to the boulder is interesting, although its veracity is open to question. Samson was no early riser, but one morning, waking before his time, and feeling a trifle hungry, he decided to get up and see if Mrs. Samson had got the porridge ready.

Unfortunately that lady had run out of oatmeal, so her lord and master had to content himself with ham and eggs (a good substitute, methinks).

After breakfast the giant felt so fit that he needs must rid himself of his superfluous energy, so made up his mind to climb Ben Ledi.

Kissing his wife "good morning," soon he was wending his way up Corriechrombie Glen.

As he scaled the mountain side the wind blew crisp against his ruddy cheeks.

From out the heather, close at hand, a ptarmigan took wing. And at his approach the wild sheep scurried off in haste, quivering with terror.

Pausing a moment in his ascent to view the scenery around, a fine sight met his eye. Loch Lubnaig lay ensconced below. Silver bright in the morning sunshine, the River Leny rushed and roared through corrie and ravine. Small wonder then, if Samson felt the world at his feet.

The giant soon reached the top of the Ben, not a whit exhausted with his stiff climb, and, Alexander-like, looking around for more worlds to conquer, a stone of huge dimensions caught his eye.

"Hurrah," said he. "The very thing I require. I'll try how far I can fling it."

So, inserting his pinkie in a small hole in its side, he lifted the stone high above his head, and, taking a hop, a step and a leap, launched it into space.

To one so full of joie de vivre it was a pretty sight, as, hurtling through the air, on, on it went, until at last on Tarn Duan's crest it landed with resounding thud and slowly came to rest.

The legend hath it that the giant frequently thereafter expressed his keen disappointment that the stone did not travel farther, as he had fully expected it to go at least the length of Stirling.

Nor did he hesitate to ascribe his comparative failure to the fact that his better-half had negligently omitted to replenish her meal chest, thus depriving him of his morning porridge.

As already suggested, some may feel inclined to doubt the truth of this little tale, but to those I cannot do better than recommend that they pay a visit to Samson's Stone, on one side of which may still be seen the finger prints of giant hands engraved indelibly.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Most people are content to use their eyes to the utmost capacity without thought of strain or future.

Mr. Mann of Anytown was that way until his oculist brought him to a sudden halt.

Most parts of the body can be repaired to some extent, in one way or another. But if the delicate optic nerve is out of commission there is real trouble ahead.

The four fundamental troubles which generally affect eyesight are eye defects, eye strains, eye accidents or eye diseases.

Of these, eye defects are quite common and are frequently due to near-sightedness, far-sightedness or astigmatism — words that may sound familiar to those who have gone to eye specialists. These are generally corrected through the prescription of glasses.

Eye diseases, such as pinkeye and trachoma, can be acquired by using towels, face cloths or handkerchiefs of a person thus bothered.

Eye strain arises generally from wrong usage; bad light or overuse; getting light from the wrong direction with constant glare in the eyes and from similar causes. This should be a chief source of care. Eye accidents are not easily prevented and are most frequently caused by dirt particles and sand. Where the particle is ingrained a physician should be consulted.

HOUSE DAMAGED BELMONT OWNER CLAIMS IN SUIT

CLAIM FOR $500.

Plaintiff Sues for Alleged Unlawful Seizure of Chattels in Belmont.

A scene from Belmont was enacted in the Court House yesterday. Not the Belmont scene that Shakespeare wrote, in "The Merchant of Venice," with its Portia and Nerissa, and the suitors, with their trio of caskets, but a comedy or tragedy, just as one looked at it, whose musical refrain might have been "the pig was in the dooryard and the cow was in the kitchen."

The dramatic outburst of an enraged housewife enlivened the General Sessions of the Peace yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Ross Hart described with tense fervor the state of the house that she and her husband "had worked so hard for," after Grant Riley Hart and his wife and their five children had vacated the premises. Linoleum with holes burned in it "the size of the bottom of a pail," walls greased and smudged and scribbled on by the children, paper in the upper rooms torn off the walls, windows broken, the pump and the punt alike smashed, the furniture marred and spoiled, refuse thrown on to the front dooryard, these were only some of the things named in the indictment made by the nervous little woman in the box, looking over between times at the lady whose housewifely character she was taking away.

Suit for $500.

The case was the jury action brought by Grant Riley Hart of Belmont township, against Ross Hart of Havelock, for $500 damages arising out of alleged unlawful seizure.

The plaintiff, Grant Riley Hart, last year rented a house at Round Lake and the land surrounding it from the defendant, Ross Hart of Havelock, who reserved three rooms and an ice house for his own use, agreeing to pay for it the sum of $60 a year and taxes, as contended by the former, and $6 a month and taxes, as declared in the counter-evidence by the latter and his wife. Grant Hart also purchased in the spring of the year, from Ross Hart, two cows, giving him a note for $60. This note was not paid on maturity, and adding this amount to a grocery and a butcher bill owing him of $26-odd, Ross Hart served a writ on the debtor, which in his absence at Cobourg, was delivered to his wife.

Mrs. Grant Hart claimed that she had allowed the cattle and the wagon which, at that time, September 8th, were seized in payment of the account by the plaintiff, acting under Ross Hart's orders, to be taken away on condition that her husband's permission be sought over the telephone. Counter evidence by the defendant claimed that she had made no objection to the seizure and had verbally approved it as a settlement of the debt owing to Ross Hart, who runs a grocery and butcher establishment in Havelock. Grant Hart at the present time is making a claim for $500 for alleged unlawful seizure of goods and chattels in his absence, and Ross Hart's counter claim consists of a bill for damage done his property during the plaintiff's tenancy of the same. The domestic surroundings of the Grant Harts and the management of their abode were aired in court during the evidence given by Mrs. Ross Hart as to the deficiency in the housekeeping methods of Mrs. Grant Hart.

During the giving of evidence, it transpired that the Grant Harts had purchased an automobile from a brother in Cobourg, and had arranged to give him a chattel mortgage covering the balance owing on it, thus enraging the Ross Harts and their unpaid bill the more.

Opposing Witnesses.

Witnesses called by the opposing sides included Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Riley Hart, Edward W. Fennell, Clerk of the Division Court at Havelock, Bailiff McAdams of Havelock, who, in the course of the projection of his official duties was quoted as saying that "he hoped no afterclaps would result from the affair," and who denied "in toto" the previous evidence given by Mrs. Grant Hart as to the insertion of a proviso in the seizure proceedings that her husband should be first consulted; Mrs. Grace McQuaid, a neighor of the Grant Harts, and a lady with a loud, determined voice, who gave expert testimony as to the quality and age of a cow that she had purchased from the Grant Harts, and George A. Pollock, another neighbor, who was called by Mr. Gordon, and confirmed the report of the dilapidated condition of the Grant Hart domicile after their tenancy of it, but qualified his statement with the admission that "it is hard for a man to set a standard for cleanliness," and bashfully admitted also that he was not a housekeeping man himself.

From the claim made by Grant Hart for the cows seized by the defendant, Mr. Gordon pointed out that the two animals, purchased in spring of this year for $30 apiece by Grant Hart were now valued by the plaintiff in his claim at $75 each.

After hearing evidence from both sides, His Honour Judge Huycke postponed the arguments of counsel and address to the jury until this morning at ten o'clock, warning the petit jury in the meanwhile to refrain from any discussion of the matter.

The Grand Jury yesterday brought in true bills in both criminal cases set down for a hearing at this Session, in that of the King vs. Mrs. Annie McIntosh and the King vs. Jas Newell, in which both the acusations are of subornation of perjury.

RETURNS VERDICT FOR PLAINTIFF

Criminal Case Now Under Way in County Court—Grand Jury's Report.

In the case of Grant Riley Hart vs. Ross Hart, of Belmont township and Havelock respectively, on a claim for $500 damages arising out of alleged unlawful seizure the jury this afternoon returned a verdict of $100 damages for the plantiff, Grant Riley Hart, and $34.01 counter claim for the defendant, Ross Hart.

At this morning's general Sessions of the Peace, the adjourned hearing of this case of Grant Riley Hart vs. Ross Hart was resumed, with addresses to the jury made by G. N. Gordon, K.C., acting for the defendant, Wilfrid F. Huycke, for the plaintiff, and the address by His Honour Judge Huycke.

His Honor pointed out that the defendant, Ross Hart, had no legal right to seize the goods in the manner in which same was done, and that the bailiff's support of his action was also very improper in the manner of the carrying out of the service of the summons. The bailiff was characterized by His Honor as one of the "chief causes of all the trouble." As against a claim for damages for unlawful seizure, the amount of which was left to the discretion of the jury, His Honor directed that a counter claim should include the amount of $6.25 paid by Ross Hart on an insurance of the plaintiff's goods, also a McWilliams account for flour, etc., of $14.50. The alleged damages to the property during the tenancy of Grant Hart and his wife were enumerated. A certain amount should be allowed, although the Judge pointed out that, according to the old law which was still in use, a tenant, unless bound by a written lease, was not liable for such things as broken windows, it being sufficient for him, if he so desired, to replace these with boards. Mr. Gordon, acting for the defendant, took objection to this, among other things, saying that the law required that a tenant take reasonable care of the owner's property, laying himself open otherwise to a charge of negligent treatment.

Although Mr. Gordon's objections were not allowed by His Honor, the Judge called the jury back to instruct them that a unanimous verdict of ten of their number would be sufficient in such a case.

Grand Jury's Report.

The report of the Grand Jury, presented by the foreman, W. R. Morris, joined primarily with the Judge in his expressions of regret at the demise of the late Court Crier Walter Wood. They reported a visit to the jail as showing it to be in a cleanly and sanitary condition. Complaints of the heating system were registered, and the jury reported that in a section of the jail where there were no prisoners, the atmosphere was "unecessarily warm," while in a section where prisoners were housed, it was "decidedly cool." A recommendation was made that the heating system be placed under control of the jailer, also that improvement to the interior of the jail might be made by the addition of a coat of paint. It was also recommended that the elderly man housed in the jail as a vagrant be placed in either the Protestant Home or the House of Providence, and that a young woman of sub-normal mentality be sent to a more suitable institution.

Visits made to the House of Providence and the Protestant Home showed them to be in excellent condition, clean and sanitary, "and real homes for the elderly inmates. The efficient managament of both reflects great credit on those in charge." The Jury, however, expressed surprise that neither institution afforded elevator accommodation for the inmates.

For the second time in the history of a Grand Jury's visits of inspection, the Isolation Hospital was included in their itinerary, and was reported to be in excellent condition "and a real asset to the city. The superintendent of this institution is congratulated on its apparent efficient management."

The other public institutions were not visited, the Grand Jury feeling that very recent visits had been sufficient guarantee of their satisfactory management.

His Honor congratulated the Grand Jury on the prompt and efficient discharge of its duties, expressed great pleasure in its reference to "my dear old friend, Walter Wood," and to its visit to the Isolation Hospital, promised that the various recommendations made would be placed before the proper authorities, and made a suggestion that, if the Grand Jury were willing, they should visit the House of Refuge in Lakefield, for inspection purposes, in view of the fact that a fire had recently taken place there.

"In case you do not return, however, I am pleased to congratulate you on the efficient discharge of your functions."

Criminal Case.

The hearing of the criminal case of the King vs. James Newell, in an action in which the accusation is of subornation of perjury, opened this morning, with A. B. Cunningham, K.C., of Kingston, acting as Crown prosecutor and Gordon and O'Brien appearing for the accused. This is the first of two actions on the same charge, for which yesterday the Grand Jury returned true bills, the second being that of the King vs. Mrs. Annie McIntosh.

Prior to opening of the hearing, objection was raised by Mr. Gordon to the practice of introducing evidence in such cases without a rigid specification of the exact time and date and locale of such quoted conversations. The contention by opposing counsel was to the effect that such rigid specification of cumulative evidence covering a long period of time was impossible.

His Honor decided that the particulars asked for by Mr. Gordon were named in the depositions as set forth, and that he did not find it necessary to order that further particulars be specified.

The jury empanelled this afternoon in the case of Rex vs. James Newell, consisted of the following called by the Clerk of the Court: G. J. Sherry, Alex. Lang, Monaghan; Edwin Dunsford, Douro; Geo. Thorn, Driscoll Terrace; Stanley Johnson, Otonabee; Thos. Junkin, Lakefield; Geo. Hanbidge, Otonabee; Michael Fitzpatrick, Asphodel; H. D. Coons, Smith; Webster Blewett, Monaghan; Frank Fowler, Smith; Garnet Winterbottom, Charlotte Street; and C. A. Howson, Otonabee.

The charge against James Newell, to which to-day he pleaded not guilty, is that on or about the months of November or December, 1923, in the Township of Asphodel, he procured and counselled Albert Hynes to commit perjury, such perjury being afterwards committed by Hynes at the trial, on December 11, 1923, of James Newell, on a charge of seduction, under promise of marriage, of Clarice McCall.

JUDGE SNYDER TO REPORT

Will Make His Report to the Cabinet This Afternoon.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The report of Judge Colin Snyder, who conducted the investigation into the charges laid by E. C. OSHAWA CURLERS MET LAST NIGHT

Opening Ceremonies Will Consist of a Moccasin Dance—Officers Elected.

OSHAWA, Dec. 9. — The local curling fraternity turned out over 100 strong last evening at a combined meeting of the members of the Oshawa Curling Club and the Oshawa Curlers' Limited, the latter being the holding company of the new club house and property on Bond street east, which was officially opened on the visit of the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Byng, last month.

With President W. E. Clarke, of the curling club, occupying the chair, C. E. Hare, chairman of the new membership committee, announced that this season's sport would get under way with over two hundred members, an increase of over one hundred over last year, which was received with great enthusiasm by those present. In complimenting the committee on their successful campaign, Col. R. S. McLaughlin, through F. J. Bailes, asked that the management committee of the club see that the 30 pair of club stones be put in first class condition for the use of the new members, the cost of same to be a donation from him, as a mark of appreciation of the work done by membership committee.

Secretary J. A. Thompson read a communication from Mrs. A. J. Sykes, in which she expressed a desire to donate a trophy in honor of her late husband (who was one of the original members of the Oshawa Curling Club) to be competed for at the annual bonspiel. The secretary was instructed to write the donor accepting same, which will be known as the A. J. Sykes Memorial Trophy.

In the election of skips for the coming season, the members decided to choose fifty-five from those eligible, by ballot and the following were elected: W. E. Clarke, A. J. Lambert, C. M. Anderson, F. J. Bailes, P. Dobney, F. E. Hare, W. A. Coad, C. E. Hare, Dr. F. L. Henry, A. M. Germond, F. E. Ellis, C. R. Bailes, Geo. Southwell, T. H. McMurty, R. S. McLaughlin, Geo. Miller, L. O. Clifford, Geo. W. McLaughlin, R. Henderson, D. F. Johnston, W. J. Holland, C. H. Peacock, A. J. Stalter, E. C. Hodgins, J. H. Cooper, E. W. Drew, Dr. T. E. Kaiser, L. R. Luke, H. A. Porter, J. A. Thompson, F. E. Carswell, F. Hatch, L. R. Stevenson, Geo. Evans, W. J. Armour, W. A. Hare, J. Fowlds, W. P. Hogg, F. Hobbs, Geo. W. Hezzlewood, E. Moore, D. Campbell, J. L. Whattam, J. H. Beaton, W. Daniels, A. N. Ellis, W. H. Ross, J. Stacey, C. E. Stenhouse, H. E. Smith, W. Christian and F. Storie.

A rink from Whitby and one from Pickering ask for membership in the club, the individual members of said rinks to be chosen from each place.

During the work of the scrutineers in counting the ballots a meeting of the Oshawa Curlers' Limited was held at which the by-laws and constitution of same were read clause by clause and passed and the following baord of directors chosen: President, Dr. T. E. Kaiser; Secretary-Treasurer, H. H. McMurtry; Directors, R. S. McLaughlin, J. L. Whattam, C. M. Anderson, E. W. Drew.

It was announced at the close of the meeting that as soon as ice was attained the opening ceremonies would consist of a moccasin dance.

Is the product of your factory

A Shelf-Warmer or Best Seller?

DOES it rest upon the dealer's shelf, collecting dust and earning black looks from the storekeeper?

Or does it move quickly and make the dealer smile?

The dealer has no use for shelf-warmers. He can't afford to lock up capital in lines that don't sell or borrow money at high interest to carry them in stock.

What The Dealer Wants

He wants lines he can turn into cash—that will earn quick profits for him—so that he can pay his bills and keep his business alive.

Therefore, he is buying cautiously to-day.

Naturally he is showing his preference for nationally advertised lines.

Learned By Experience

He knows, by years of selling to the consumer, that products which are nationally advertised by manufacturers, in newspapers, magazines and farm publications, are the lines that move off his shelves most readily.

He knows that nationally advertised lines have a prestige with the consumer which unadvertised lines lack.

Reduces Selling Expense

He knows that strong, vigorous national advertising makes the consumer desire the product before he or she goes to the store and, therefore, reduces the dealer's selling effort and expense, increases his turnover and speeds up profits.

If you were a dealer, which would you buy to-day—shelf-warmers or best sellers?

Which would your travellers rather sell?

Which would best keep the factory wheels turning?

Make Yours A Best Seller

If you want more business, make the product of your factory a best seller.

Our experienced advertising organization is qualified to help you do it. A conference with us will not place you under any obligation. We will be glad to talk business with you either in your office or in ours.

CHAPTER XI.

As the wind blew the tiny yellow seeds about, wherever they struck the ground other Moslem warriors popped out of the nowhere with a little puff of smoke as the only warning that they were coming. They were mostly on horseback. But some were on foot, and there was a splendid troop of desertmen riding upon dromedaries, nodding in their lofty, peaked, crimson saddles to the deep gait of their animals, with a cold glisten of iron and black song of war.

"Allah akbar!" they cried. "Allah akbar! Din! Din! Fateh Mohammed!"

They came like the whirlwind; hacking at the gate with their battle-axes and splintering it; horses and camels prancing and rearing, weapons glistening in the sun, burnooses of all colors floating in the breeze.

"On!" they cried. "Ride on for the Faith! Allah is most great! Kill—kill—in the name of the Prophet!"

Crusaders they. Warriors for Islam. Men of great courage. Noble souls.

Noble souls?

Here is a disputable point.

For the ancient Arab chronicle from which we derive the tale of the Thief of Bagdad interrupts the narrative here to make the following rather interesting comment:

"To this day the descendants of these warriors live in Bagdad, Damascus, and throughout Arabistan. Many of them use the family names of Ibn Kubbut and Ibn Zura, which means 'Son of the Seed,' in proof of their extraordinary paternal ancestry. Those who entered Bagdad with Ahmed filled the places of the men killed by the Mongol horde. But while they made good soldiers, and later on good husbands and fathers, the Moslem priests and theologians have never been quite sure if they or their descendants can lay claim to having a soul.

"For consider how Allah, so as to prepare for the future mission of Mohammed, created Adam!

"Adam was created out of God's will. Some traditions say that the head of Adam, when first shaped, reached the sky, and they also say that Adam was so named because his color was red, like wheat; for wheat is called 'adameh' in the classic Arabic, the which is the language of the One God. The creation of Adam occurred on Friday, the tenth of the month Mohurrun, at the eleventh hour, at the rising of the first degree of Aries, Saturn being in the same constellation, and Mars in Capricorn. God then asked the Angels to kneel before Adam, and all obeyed except Iblis, who thus became Shaitan, the Devil, the Fallen Angel. Then God created Eve. But Iblis, seeing that, for one crime, he had forfeited all the merit of his former obedience, determined to do Adam any injury in his power. Now Adam was in Paradise, where Iblis could not enter. At length, however, as is detailed in history and tradition, by art and the assistance of a peacock stationed on the walls of Paradise as a guardian, and a serpent who was the sentinel at the northern gate, Iblis entered. It is furthermore related how Iblis tempted Adam and Eve—as all the world knows—and how Adam, driven out of the garden of Eden, exclaimed: 'O Allah! Why didst Thou endow me with a soul? For had I been without a soul, Thou couldst have neither blamed nor punished me for giving way to temptation!' And then Adam wept—this happened on a mountain in Hindustan, where Adam and Eve, after the Fall, were driven from Paradise, on Friday, the fifth of the month Nisan—and from the tears he shed sprang up pepper, cardamums and cinnamon, while from the grief in his soul sprang the clouds, the weeds, the desert jackals and the scavenger crows.

"Not on all these points do the wise theologians agree. But there is no argument about God having given a soul to Adam, nor that, for the sake of the salvation of his soul, He later on sent Mohammed amongst the mortals as His Messenger.

"But the warriors who rode with Ahmed into Bagdad were not the descendants of Adam, but the descendants of seeds. Thus riseth the question—had they souls, or were they merely realized segments, materialized fractions of Ahmed's imagination? Here is the moot point in the controversy; and we repeat that to this day many respectable Moslem theologians refuse to admit that the descendants of these seeds, the members of the families of Ibn Kubbut and Ibn Zura, are endowed with Allah's excellent and blessed spirit. . . ."

So the ancient Arabic chronicle goes on for a number of pages. Not that the Mongol captain cared about their souls either way, as, open-mouthed, frightened, he watched the terrible miracle of their appearance from the battlements.

He jumped down; ran away as fast as he could, spreading the alarm throughout Bagdad, shouting loudly:

"Fly for your lives, O Mongols! A great magician has come! He summons armies, invincible fighting-men, from the very bowels of the earth!"

"Fly for your lives! Fly for your lives!" came echoing shouts as the Moslem warriors—Ahmed at their head—rode through the gates.

They darted on like winged phantoms; old and young; Arabs and Turks, Egyptians and Moors and Turkomans; men of colossal proportions, strange and terrible figures erect in their square silver stirrups, with heads thrown back, hair streaming loose in the wind, sabres waved aloft, lances at the carry; and small, beardless youngsters, perched like monkeys on their high saddles, but using their weapons with the same swish and sweep and surge as their elders. Over their shining silver armor their burnooses, red and purple and green and yellow and blue, mingled into a gorgeous rainbow as the cavalcade crossed the Square of the One-Eyed Jew; then dissolved to form fresh, audacious color combinations as the riders split into smaller groups, galloping down side streets and alleys in the pursuit of the flying, panic-stricken Mongols, cutting down stragglers, rounding up whole companies of the yellow-skinned iron-capped horde, putting them to the sword for the Faith.

"Kill! Kill—in the name of the Prophet!"

The savage war cry was everywhere. Enormously peaking, bloating, spreading, it reverberated from streets to Mosques, from Mosques to houses, from houses to cellars and cisterns where the citizens of Bagdad were hiding in fear and trembling before the Scourge of God. They heard; wondered; came cautiously out of their hiding-places; looked. Then, beholding the triumphant advance of the liberators, they picked up weapons at random and rushed out.

Here and there they killed a lonely Mongol. Ten minutes later they were convinced, every last one of them, that it was their own bravery which was bringing victory, and they flatly discounted the fact that, without Ahmed's splendid miracle, they would have continued to submit to the Mongol yoke as sheepishly as the night before.

The chronicle goes on to say how the citizens of Bagdad scurried in the wake of the liberators, killing wounded Mongols, nor risking their precious lives overmuch.

Loudly they shouted:

"Kill! Kill the Mongols! Reduce them to ashes! Cut them in two! Hash them to pulp! Drive them away! Drink their blood! Destroy them root and branch! Annihilate them utterly!"

And it is interesting to observe that those who gave the loudest and most blood-curdling shouts were the men who, on the night before, when the Mongols had attacked, had left their very women and children to the invaders' mercy in their haste to bore like rats into subterranean hiding-places.

Ahmed rode at the head of his army.

"Allah akbar!" he cried. "God is great"

and as he galloped up the broad avenue that led to the palace of the Caliph again and again he dipped his hand into the silver box, sprinkling the little yellow seeds on the ground; again and again warriors rose, until their numbers were like stars in the Milky Way, and there was no hope for the Mongols, though here and there they rallied and gave battle with all their ferocious Mongol courage.

A few escaped the carnage. Quickly they ran to the palace and brought the news. It spread like powder under spark.

Down in the Dungeon where the Caliph of the Faithful and the Princes of Persia and Hindustan were kept prisoners, was rejoicing.

"I always knew," said the Prince of India, "that my divine ancestors would not let me perish! When I return to Hindustan I shall sacrifice seventeen thousand youths of excellent family to Doorga, the Great Mother!"

"And I," said the Persian, "as soon as I leave this cell, shall dine on a roasted peacock, stuffed with white grapes, and three bottles of foreign wine. Incidentally"—turning to the Caliph—"now that the Mongol is out of the way, I wish to reaffirm my claim to your daughter's hand . . ."

"Not at all!" interrupted the Prince of India. "Not at all! It is I who . . ."

"Do shut up, both of you!" exclaimed the Caliph, for once in his life forgetting what he owed to his kingly breeding. "I would not have either one of you as son-in-law. My daughter shall marry the man who has reconquered Bagdad, and I care not if he be Moslem or Jew, Christian of Buddhist, nor if he be white or green, thief or emperor!"

Thus spoke the voices of Asia's mighty potentates down in the cellar, while up in the tower of the palace, not far from Zobeid's apartment, Wong K'ai asked his master to escape while there still was a chance. But the Mongol Prince shook his head stubbornly. He pointed at his ancestral tablets:

"My race is eternal, invincible!" he pronounced with sombre, grim dignity. "I flee from neither gods nor devils."

PRISONERS GET A FLOGGING A DAY

"Ma" Ferguson May Save Texas Prisoners From Brutality.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 10.—A prisoner lying face down on the ground with one convict sitting on his head, another on his feet.

Over him stands a burly man applying lashes to the back with a leather strap attached to a wooden handle. The prison doctor and legal witnesses look on.

The prisoner moans—he can scarcely move. He forces his voice in an appeal for mercy—

This is the law in Texas.

Wholesale floggings of prisoners have been going on in the penitentiary in Huntsville and different prison camps scattered through the southern and eastern parts of the state, with official sanction. The statutes permit them.

Ma May Stop It.

Mrs. Miriam (Ma) Ferguson is expected to order its abolishment when she is inaugurated governor in January.

And the state legislature probably will go further by enacting a law eliminating forever this practice of disciplining refractory prisoners.

Little was known about these wholesale floggings until word of the beatings administered three men on the Blakely convict farm began to get abroad.

And the revelations were more shocking than even those familiar with the system's operations ever had conceived.

During the past six months, nearly 200 convicts have undergone the tortures of the "flogging chamber."

Sometimes all the prisoners are forced to witness them. Sometimes only the witnesses required by law are present. But there was little difference in brutality.

The convict sprawled on the ground, held by fellow prisoners, is beaten until the prison doctor saves him from death.

Backs Cut by Blow.

A strap, four inches wide and a quarter of an inch thick, attached to a wooden handle, is used by the "flogger." If a strong blow is struck, the skin on the prisoner's back cuts with each lash.

If the victim calls for mercy and promises never to disobey the rules again, the beatings are halted.

A few years ago an inquiry at the boys' reformatory in Gatesville disclosed 900 inmates had been subjected to almost every sort of torture imaginable. The superintendent was dismissed and the commandant given a 10-year sentence when convicted of killing a 14-year-old boy.

Investigation also showed that prisoners at one time were made to straddle "a horse," a four-inch plank high enough to keep toes off the ground. They were made to remain on this horse for hours at a time.

Now, if they are not flogged, they are required to spend hours standing on top of a barrel.

Boys at the Gateville reformatory were forced to march with their chins elevated at an angle of 45 degrees even when the sun struck their faces.

When unruly, they have been forced to toe a mark, bend over and touch their toes, remaining in that position 45 minutes, a punishment only the strongest could undergo without collapsing.

Arms Traffic Conference.

League Will Meet on May 4 Next—U. S. to Participate.

ROME, Dec. 10. —(Canadian Press).—League of nations council yesterday decided upon convocation on May 4, next for international conference for the control of traffic in arms, munitions and implements of war. This decision was taken after receipt of U.S. acceptance of league invitation to participate.

Council also directed that commission of co-ordination which has taken place of old disarmament commission of league, should hold first meeting in Geneva, February 16th.

Commission will then decide whether time is propitious for conference for control of private arms manufacture.

SHOULD FIND METHOD OF MAKING WAR IMPOSSIBLE

Every European Power Would Be Glad to Reduce Expenditures on Armaments.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Great Britain may have to go further than the United States in co-operation with other European nations to produce a state of confidence leading up to disarmament and peace, Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, told members of the English-speaking Union of the United States last night.

This must not be construed, he asserted, as implying the possibility of a clash between the United States and Great Britain, "which other nations of the world must really learn to consider—as we already do consider—as one thing we will neither admit nor endure."

Every European power, Sir Esme said, would be glad to reduce expenditures on armaments if only the sense of security could be established. This could be done, he believed, by the adoption of the Geneva protocol which he described as "just an honest attempt of perfectly honest men to find a method of making war impossible so far as that can be humanly done."

Compulsory arbitration was the only way to establish the sense of security.

AUTO SENSE — You Can Prevent a Fire

Carelessness is responsible for a vast majority of fires in automobiles. If you care anything for your car you should heed Do the accompanying strip. There are times when it is necessary to get under the hood to correct some trouble and when you are usually wipe the oil from your hands on an old rag and, in many cases, tuck the rag away in a side pocket for another such time When the sun beats down on the side of your car the temperature in the side pocket becomes very high and is likely to cause catch fire. An oily rag laid on a tire after it has been run for several miles on a hot day will often catch fire, which proves that heat is not required to cause spontaneous combustion.

While discussing fires in automobiles, it might be well to remind you to look at the cables between the battery and the starter. The battery is usually held in a metal box and the cables often rub against the side of this or against the drive shaft, braking causing the insulation to be eaten away and exposing the bare cable to the metal. A spark at one of these points on a hot day is enough to ignite gasoline vapors and cause a serious fire.

A NEW WAY WITH TAX GRUMBLERS.

As Seen in "Old Bill Through the Ages."

It seems—judging from one of the hilarious scenes in the film burlesque, "Old Bill Through the Ages" —that William the Conqueror had a very summary and effective manner of dealing with tax-grumblers. He didn't argue with them, or summon them, or imprison them. He just had a look at the culprits, gave his axe a little extra stropping, and then laid about him with a gusto that soon stretched the tax-payers (or non-payers) a bunch at his feet His only comment on this condign punishment was in the form of an advertisement, which ran as follows: "Several castles to let. Vacant possession. Moat, dungeons and all modern conveniences. Owners gone west."

We are afraid the country is hardly yet ripe for these methods of "frightfulness" in tax collecting, but the incident—one of many excruciatingly comical ones in the film—keeps the audience laughing heartily.

BELMONTS WIN CLUB SECTION

Eliminated Kiwanis in Loose Game and Qualified to Play Off With the Quakers.

FLOCKS OF RUNS.

Belmont won the championship of the Club Section and the right to meet the Quakers in the finals for the City Softball Championship last night at the arena when they defeated the Kiwanis in a loose game by the score of 23 to 11.

Kiwanis were far off colour and put up a poor exhibition of ball while the Belmonts on the other hand also turned in their share of boots. The game was a ragged affair throughout and, although there were a few spectacular plays made, neither team played the brand of ball that was expected of them.

Belmonts led off in the first innings with four runs and added to this nest egg in every inning but the sixth, eighth and ninth and in the last two innings they did not strain themselves in an effort to register. The Kiwanis chased two across in the first and four in the third, but for the rest of the game they were always a flock of runs behind.

Two games in succession proved to be too much for McLean, for he was far off colour last night and every time he did manage to get one across the plate it was sent for a merry ride by the Haskill clean up men. By the wa ythey waded into McLean last night they all apparently were clean up men. McLean was touched for 13 hits and besides loosing the game he also had the thrill of being yanked. This was the first game this season that McLean has not finished. Jack Green relieved him in the fourth and finished the game in good style, holding the opponents to four runs and four hits. Green pitched a nice game for his first appearance on the mound and managed to get by with but one pass.

Harrison was manager Hopkins' choice to do the heaving for the Belmonts. His team mates were alway behind him and after they had gathered in a flock of runs, Tommy Holyman took his position and finished the game.

Harison pitched a nice game but he was rather wild at times, passing three men in the third inning and forcing in a run. Outside of this inning he pitched a very steady game and fielded his position well. "Spot" Stuart pulled the feature catches of the evening when he speared two nice ones back of second. Charlie Cummer also reaped in a nice one in right field in the third inning when he pulled down one that was labelled a homer.

OPENING ROUND WON BY LANDIS

Baseball Commissioner's Administration Endorsed by the National League.

HIT AT JOHNSON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. — The opening skirmish of the baseball conflict in which Commissioner Landis and President Johnson of the American League are central figures was won yesterday by the commissioner when National League club owners at the opening session of their annual meeting, unanimously adopted resolutions giving a sweeping endorsement to the four-year administration of the veteran jurist.

PETES UNWELCOME ALONG LAKE SHORE

Suggestion That They Play With Oshawa and Belleville.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Dec. 9.—The vexed question of where Peterboro is going to find a place in which they can play this winter is causing a great deal of speculation. There have been all kinds of rumors that they would be included in the Lake Shore group, which comprises Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton but as soon as this rumor was heard the Lake Shore clubs immediately came out with protests. This was followed by a letter from the Peterboro club asking the Lake Shore clubs to consider things before they objected, pointing out that Peterboro would be a big drawing card, and that the enhanced ... gates the club would receive would more than make up for the extra ex... ense the Lake Shore clubs would be ... to in having to top over-night ...en they visited the Liftlock ... city.

A New Suggestion

... his did not make any impression ... the representatives from the Lake ...re clubs, and their representativ... talked things over last Saturday ... the meeting of the O.H.A. and ...ongly protested against the inclu... sion in their group. Of course the question did not come up officially but last night Secretary Peter Brown ,of the Port Hope club, wrote Secretary Hewitt suggesting a way out of the difficulty. It is that a new group be formed with Peterboro, Oshawa and Belleville as the contesting teams. This would keep all the city teams together, and would leave the smaller towns in the one group. It is pointed out that this would be a good thing for hockey in these parts as it would offset the big advantage the cities have over the maller towns in the way positions which the cities can provide. The suggestion will certainly with the approval of the Lake Shore teams and would solve the difficulty.

SEASON'S CHIEF RECORD HOLDERS

Three of the outstanding athletic notable of the past season were Sybil Bauer, back-stroke swimmer of Chicago; Jackson Scholz, New York sprint er, and Harold Osborne, high-jump star of the Illinois A.C.

Recently the A.A.U. officials, in annual con ference, accepted as official marks by this trio of performers during the 1924 season.

Miss Bauer was the pre-eminent swimming star of the year, with a total of 18 new A.A.U. records to her credit. She was actually credited with 24 records but the officials accepted only 18.

Scholz ran the 200 meters in 20 9-10 seconds in the final Olympic tryouts last summer. This mark has been accepted both as an A.A.U. and a world record.

The same is true of Osborne's mark in the high jump. Osborne leaped 6 feet 8 1-4 inches at Urbana, Ill., last May. The A.A.U. lords thought well enough of the evidence presented to accept the record.

FATE OF OUR EARTH MAY FALL INTO THE SUN

Hoerbiger's Glacial Cosmogony in One Big Volume.

Glacial cosmogony, is the name given to a new theory of the origin of the universe developed by the Viennese scientist, Dr. Hans Hoerbiger.

Hoerbiger's glacial cosmogony has been set forth in a stout scientific volume.

Where do the hydrogen and oxygen come from? Water cannot be present in the sun; it cannot come from the hot, glowing kernel. The new theory suggests that hydrogen and oxygen come from the outside.

The ice theory maintains that there is an enormous exchange going on constantly in the universe. In a continuous circle, oxygen and hydrogen grow dense and become water, which, on account of the low temperature of the universal ether, must take on the form of ice.

The ether is filled with ice. From the ether the ice returns in innumerable forms to the sun. It melts slowly, diffusing. The resulting steam production may be of such an immense power that it tears a piece off the sun, flings it into the ether, and thus causes the rise of new sun systems.

In this way the origin of new sun systems is explained by glacial cosmogony. How not only mere ice, but entire ice-crusted planets may, and necessarily must, fall into a sun, is set forth in several chapters of the book. Our earth, too, will some time fall as an ice globe into our sun.

The Milky Way is nothing but an enormous mass of floating ice, according to the glacial cosmogony. The bulk of ice floats in the ether, and is made visible to us only by the reflection of the sunlight.

The same holds true of star nebulae which the sunlight also makes visible for us. Even the moon fits into the theory; it is covered with a thin layer of ice.

According to the theory, Mars, too, would be covered with ice, and its famous canals would be nothing but big cracks in the ice. Falling stars would be pieces of ice just fugitively shown by the sunlight.

Our hail would be, according to this glacial theory, broken ice that found its way from the cosmos through the atmosphere of our earth, and was there transformed into hail.

Cosmic waters, the new theory supposes, contribute to rainy seasons on our earth; cosmic powers cause typhoons, cyclones, tornadoes, siroccos, and other such storm winds; comets must be classed as falling stars of very fine construction, while ordinary falling stars are nothing but broken pieces of ice.

CARING FOR CAR IN WINTER TIME

This is the time of year when the uppermost question with regard to your automobile is "How is she on the chills?"

Motor cars have been improved in nearly every detail in the last few years but they still have open plumbing openly arrived at. And the minute a car begins to manufacture its own ice there is trouble.

There are various ways to avoid freezing. The surest way is to remove the water every night during a cold spell. This is done by opening the petcock under the radiator.

To find the petcock, crawl under your car and feel for it with your forehead from left to right. Most men locate it after the fourth gash over the right eye, although it has been done in less.

Having located the said petcock, grasp the handle and turn it. Then swim out. The car will have been saved from freezing and you will have been saved from anything worse than double pneumonia.

It is necessary to do this every night during a cold spell. This becomes rather monotonous, especially if the owner is difficult to amuse. After about a week of this the usual custom is for the owner to sell the auto and buy himself a sled.

Another method is to put alcohol in the radiator. Synthetic gin, rye or Scotch may be used if the car is a particularly rugged one, but should not be tried in the frail types. A half pint of modern rye in the radiator of a car has been known to eat away everything but the rear bumper.

Another safeguard is to heat the garage. This generally is done by installing an oil heater and sending a telegram to the fire department.

Still another is to place hot water bags on the radiator just before retiring. A set of Scott Fitzgerald's works placed immediately beneath the radiator will serve even better.

Practical security may be assured also by keeping a cow. A cow, kept in a garage with an auto, will throw off enough heat to prevent freezing. If you have no cow write your dealer.

HOT WATER AND CALOMEL

Cleans and Tones Up the Whole System.

You need not fear any bad after-effects, no salts or Seidlits are needed when you take the new tanol calomel. It is the best medicine in the world for headaches, indigestion, gas on the stomach, constipation, high blood pressure, bad taste in mouth, rheumatism, poisoned system, etc. One tanol calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime and a cup or two of hot water first thing in the morning will wash all the previous day's wastes, gases and toxins from the system making you feel better, and better, work better, digest beter, and be 100 per cent. better in every way. Get a few of these simple tablets from Webber's Drug Store, and you will be surprised how effective they are.

LITTLE OF EVERYTING.

MARVEL

"What will they be doing next?"

A "vest-pocket larynx" is invented by Western Electric Co. research men and Dr. John Edmund MacKenty, noted throat surgeon. It's claimed that this small mechanism, which is carried in the pocket when not in use will enable many to talk who have lost power of speech by operations for throat cancer.

The body is a "clay" machine. It's like an auto, driven by the soul. The car wears out, dies. The driver lives on.

METHUSELAH

Methuselah lived only 80 years, not 969, says Professor C. S. Longacre. He thinks the ancients measured time by the moon and called a month a year.

Professor Russell T. Crawford, California astronomer,counters with this: If Longacre is right, Methuselah's father was only five years old when his son was born.

The average reader passes on, indifferent to ancients, concerned mainly with his own allotted number of years. "How does it affect me?" is the final question of man.

BREATHING

Do you breathe deeply to better your health? The best way is to inhale by two sniffs rather than by a long, deep breath says Thomas R. Gaines. He is an expert on the subject; trains New York policemen in breathing.

Inhale with two sniffs exhale with one movement of the lungs. This is the Gaines method.

More important is to breathe deeply whenever you think of it regardless of way. Get fresh air into and stagnant air out of the deep recesses of the lungs.

WARNED

Autos are increasingly polluting the air with poison gas from exhaust. Flu is just nature's warning against this poison according to Gaines, the breathing expert.

That may be. Carbon monoxide certainly does weaken our resistance to colds. Nature finally will safeguard the race. She always does—develops powers of resistance as we need them. When she's through with man if ever man will go the way of the extinct dodo and dinosaur.

St. Paul Fighter Battered Negro Into Submission and Won on Technical Knockout.

NEW YORK, December 10. Canadian Press. — Tommy Gibbons, the pride of the Middle West, and the leading contender for Jack Dempsey's crown battered "Kid" Norfolk, the rugged negro light heavy weight, into submission last night in the Madison Square garden.

Gibbons scored a technical knockout over his dusky opponent when the referee stopped the fight in the sixth round of their 15 round match to save Norfolk from further punishment.

Flashing a dazzling exhibition of footwork and punching skill, the St. Paul fighter outclassed Norfolk before a crowd of 13,00 that filled the Garden to capacity, and paid a total of $107,599 to make up a gate for a Christmas fund raised by a New York newspaper.

Gibbons cut the negro to pieces with a relentless driving attack that beat down Norfolk's rugged defence in short order.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

Mary Pickford will be seen in her latest release, the lovely historical romance of the heroine of Haddon Hall, at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Mrs. W. McKee Bingham will sing during each performance. The story of the picture is one of the most interesting that the beautiful star has yet appeared in and forms one of her most charming adult roles.

Dorothy Vernon, daughter of Sir George Vernon, is betrothed when a child to Sir John Manners son of the Earl of Rutland. In later years a feud establishes enemity between the two families, and Sir George then betroths his daughter, much against her will, to her cousin, Sir Malcolm Vernon, whom she has never seen.

Shortly before the wedding ceremony is to take place, Dorothy meets and falls in love with Sir John. He has just returned from school in France and as Dorothy has not seen him since childhood, she does not recognize him as the son of their enemy, the Earl of Rutland. When his real identity is made known and Dorothy discovers that she has been deceived, she tells John she never wants to see him again.

Sir Malcolm and the Duke of Norfolk are plotting to place the beautiful Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, on the throne of England. Sir John's father is tricked into this conspiracy and unwittingly involves his son by sending him to Lochleven Castle for Mary. In the meantime, Dorothy's father has, at Malcolm's suggestion, invited Queen Elizabeth to attend the wedding.

Dorothy, assisted by her maid, Jennie Faxton, resists the scheme to marry her to Sir Malcolm. Her father, realizing she is in love with young Sir John, tells her the son of Rutland is held prisoner and will be tortured and hanged until she consents to carry Sir Malcolm. To save John she signs the marriage agreement and then learns that John is not a prisoner but is at Rutland suffering from wounds received while en route to meet her.

Jennie is sent to Rutland with a message, and discovers John in the arms of Mary Stuart. She believes this to be a liaison between the two, when in fact, the Queen had merely saved John from falling as, weakened by his wound, he tried to go from his sick bed to Haddon Hall. Jennie rushes back to tell Dorothy. Furiously jealous, Dorothy goes to Queen Elizabeth with the story that the Rutlands are trying to put Mary on the throne of England. Elizabeth immediately orders the capture of Mary, Sir John and his father.

After Dorothy has told the Queen of the plot, she realizes the danger to her lover. Bent on saving him, she rushes to Rutland, but misses John, who is on the way to Haddon Hall.

Queen Mary is told of the approach of Elizabeth's soldiers and in order to aid her escape, Dorothy accepts the Queen's clothes in exchange for her own. Sir Malcolm and his soldiers enter and take the disguised Dorothy a prisoner. Malcolm, who believes Dorothy is really Mart Stuart, discloses the plot, telling her not to fear, that Queen Elizabeth will die that night.

Arriving at Haddon Hall, Dorothy is brought before Elizabeth. When her identity is disclosed (much to the surprise of all) Dorothy tells Elizabeth of the plot against her life. The Queen refuses to believe that Sir Malcolm is disloyal, and Dorothy is made a prisoner of the Crown. She is released by Sir John, who overcomes the Haddon guards.

Dorothy dashes to the Queen's room to warn her again before it is too late. While the two are talking, Malcolm, sword in hand, steals into the darkened room to slay Elizabeth. At that moment Sir John, his blade gleaming menacingly, crashes in through a window.

WATSON REFUSED TO JOIN ST. PATS

Reg. Noble to be Sold to Montreal Club—Happy Day to Sign With St. Pats.

TORONTO, Dec. 10. — (Canadian Press).—Following a good offer for their interests in the St. Patrick's club of the National Hockey League Fred and Percy Hambly, president and secretary of the club yesterday decided to withdraw from active interest in the club and final details will be completed to-day when they will sign over their shares to J. D. Bickell and N. L. Nathanson and the new owners, with whom Paul Ciceri and Charley Querrie will be interested will take over the active management of the club.

The first move on the part of the new St. Patrick officers after the price had been agreed upon was to sell Reg. Noble to the Montreal Club and then sign "Happy" Day, Hamilton defence player now attending pharmacy. Manager Querrie announced last night that "Happy" Day would be in uniform here on Saturday night for St. Pats against Montreal.

The passing of Reg. Noble will be regretted for no player did more to keep St. Pats in the running since he joined them in 1917 than the former Collingwood boy.

It was learned late last night that St. Pats had another conference with Harry Watson and made him the biggest offer that he has yet received to play professional hockey, but were unable to sign the Olympic star.

RESERVED SEATS ARE GOING FAST

Fans Are Making Sure of Seeing Big Hockey Games This Season.

With the prospects bright for a successful hockey season, the limited reserved seat accommodation at Brock Street Rink promises to be more in demand than ever, and the fortunate fans are those who have made sure of their seats for the first three games and of an option on them for the balance of the season. There are only a few left of the block placed on sale under these conditions, and they will be assigned to the first applicants. It should be understood that tickets cannot be held simply on a 'phone order, and those who want to be certain of seeing the big games later on should act quickly.

At the Grand, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"SEA HAWK" SILLS GETS A NEW ROLE.

Noted Screen Actor Has Strong Part in "Madonna of the Streets."

The first appearance of Milton Sills, noted screen star, since his triumph in "The Sea Hawk," is as a minister of the gospel. The picture is Edwin Carewe's "Madonna of the Streets," in which Sills is co-featured with the famous Russian actress Nazimova.

"Truly," says Sills, "the present day movie actor leads a versatile life. Eight or ten years ago an actor was classified either as a society leading man or a rough Western type and never allowed to step out into a different role. The demand for varied entertainment has changed all this. In 'The Sea Hawk' I was an English nobleman exiled in disgrace who became the terror of the sea in the sixteenth century. I appeared as a galley slave, bronzed by the sun to the waist.

"In 'Madonna of the Streets' I am a refined and polished mission worker catering to present-day British society. And in my next picture I am liable to appear as a hard-working American business man or even, who knows, as a cowboy of the West.

"Life to a screen player is filled with interest. He is made versatile by the ever changing demands of the American public, and the old saying that variety is the spice of life holds true here."

"Madonna of the Streets" is an adaptation of one of the most popular books of the English novelist W. B. Maxwell. It was published under the titl. of "The Ragged Messenger." The photoplay marks the first screen appearance of Nazimova in two years.

This picture will be the attraction at the Capitol Theatre to-day and Thursday.

AT THE ROYAL.

"THE CLEAN HEART," BY A. S. M. HUTCHISON, CLOSES ROYAL ENGAGEMENT TO-NIGHT.

A picture that can be called an event, Hutchinson's "The Clean Heart," with Percy Marmont and Marguerite De La Motte, closes its local engagement at the Royal tonight. It is seldom we get an opportunity to see such a shining example of modern photoplay art. The story is a faithful adaption of a famous novel and the Royal has received many compliments in securing this particular production.

"COME ON LOVING CUP" REALISTIC RACING DRAMA AT ROYAL THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY.

The British racing classic, "Come On Loving Cup," is the big attraction at the Royal, commencing tomorrow. Fresh from England and produced by the makers of the "Sporting Earl:," Squibs series, etc., this should make fine entertainment.

Buddy Messenger has also been secured to entertain the kiddies.

AT THE REGENT.

PICTURE TOUCHES HEART WITH STORY OF NE'ER-DO-WELL.

Fog Screen Version of "The Man Who Came Back" is Powerful Drama of Human Emotion.

Cruel as the cynics say the world actually is, there occurs every now and then some incident to reverse the opinion. But then it's an accident—says the cynics—or a movie.

But when a movie comes along with a story so natural and easy going that you live it as the film unreels, you are more likely to fall in with its idea and to rejoice in the perfection of the picture.

The world was never more cruel to man than it was to young Henry Potter, 'The Man Who Came Back,' in the picture of that name which William Fox has produced from the novel by John Fleming Wilson. But the same world was as kind as it was hard when he played the game right, and an eager audience attested to it last night at the Regent Theatre, where the picture opened a 3-day run.

This picture is one of the greatest emotional masterpieces of the year. George O'Brien in the title role, is the equal of Henry Hull who created the part in the William A. Brady stage play in 1916. Dorothy Mackaill, as the dance hall girl of the Barbary Coast and later of Shanghai, performs with a dramatic intensity as great as that which made Mary Nash famous along Broadway when she played the role opposite Hull.

A NEW WAY WITH TAX GRUMBLERS.

It seems—judging from one of the hilarious scenes in the film burlesque, "Old Bill Through the Ages" —that William the Conqueror had a very summary and effective manner of dealing with tax-grumblers. He didn't argue with them, or summon them, or imprison them. He just had a look at the culprits, gave his axe a little extra stropping, and then laid about him with a gusto that soon stretched the tax-payers (or non-payers) a bunch at his feet His only comment on this condign punishment was in the form of an advertisement, which ran as follows: "Several castles to let. Vacant possession. Moat, dungeons and all modern conveniences. Owners gone west."

We are afraid the country is hardly yet ripe for these methods of "frightfulness" in tax collecting, but the incident—one of many excruciatingly comical ones in the film—keeps the audience laughing heartily.

ANNUAL MEETING CHILDREN'S AID

To Ask County Council For Grant of $1,000—One Case of Mumps.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, with a large number of members present.

President B. F. Ackerman occupied the chair and it was decided that a committee with the Mayor at its head would interview the members of the county council at their general meeting and would endeavour to obtain a grant of $1,000 from them. There is no reason why the counties should not help pay for the upkeep of this institution.

The property committee will remain the same as last year, with the addition of R. W. Cormack and the Finance Committee will be unchanged.

There are at present twenty children at the shelter and it was the wish of those present that new toys will be in abundance this Christmas as the children are tired of the ones they have at present.

At present there is one case of mumps.

Mr. G. W. Powell has again been appointed local superintendent of the institute and in his report for last month it showed that during the month there had been 29 children at the shelter and at present there were 20.

9 Children brought into the Shelter.

LETTER WAS AUTHENTIC.

Sub Committee of Cabinet Came to That Conclusion To-day.

LONDON, Dec. 10. — (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister Baldwin stated in the House of Commons today that the sub-committee of the Cabinet, after examining all the evidence put before it, had come to the unanimous conclusion that there was no doubt the Zinovieff propaganda letter was authentic. The Zinovieff letter addressed to "Red" agents in England came into the possession of the MacDonald Government and leaders of the Conservative party just before the last general election, and is credited with having been a factor in the defeat of the Labor administration. It outlined the campaign for overthrow of the constitutional government in Great Britain.

WANT TO SERVE BEER AT TABLES

Hotel men Request Right to Serve Two and a Half Per Cent Beer With Meals.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Requesting the exemption from the business tax for ten years, or until such a time as their business could be placed on a substantial foundation, and the right to sell beer not exceeding 2½ per cent. alcohol by weight and native wines from Ontario grapes with meals, the Hotel Association of the Province of Ontario waited on Premier Ferguson and members of his Cabinet at the Parliament Buildings today. Headed by J. J. Agar, K.C., and George H. O'Neil, of Toronto, who is president of the association, the deputation was over 200 strong, representative of hotel men from all cities and country points in the province.

In replying, Premier Ferguson made no direct reference to the beer and wine demand. He suggested, however, that hotel men confer with the Commercial Travellers' Association, a delegation from which had already waited on the Government with requests along similar lines, and drafted a bill for presentation to the House at the coming session. He stated that the Government would give the bill every consideration. O'Neil stated that the hotelmen would be glad to accept a suggestion.

Condemn Waterway Plan.

Toronto Board of Control Declined to Adopt Suggestion.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The Toronto Board of Control to-day declined to adopt the suggestion of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association to condemn the plan of the Canadian Deep Waterways Association for the development of power on the St. Lawrence. The difference between the two bodies lies in the question whether power from the St. Lawrence is to be sold at cost or at a profit to help pay for deepening the river to make it navigable. The Ontario Municipal Association favors sale at cost.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

FOOD COSTS 70 PER CENT. MORE THAN BEFORE WAR

Investigation Into Cause of High Cost of Food to be Made.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Royal Commission on food prices composed of sixteen members under the chairmanship of Sir Auckland Geddes former ambassador at Washington held first sitting at the Board of Trade this morning. Sir Auckland said question why foods in shops cost seventy per cent. more than in July 1914, demanded answer which must be found, it was a big business and could not be rushed, he explained, and some time must elapse before the commission would be in a position to make its report. Therefore the public must bear patiently with it.

The first two days will be devoted to taking evidence from statistical experts dealing with food prices. Later the ministry of Agriculture will furnish a committee with evidence. Next week information will be gathered from the wheat, flour and bread trade.

Society

Invitation are out for the marriage of Miss Chassey Revell to Mr. Robert S. Rose. The wedding will take place on Friday December 19th, at the residence of the Misses Calcutt, 73 Robinson street, Ashburnham.

Mr. Henry T. Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott, of the town of Havelock, Ont., who has been attending the Toronto College of Chiropratic, has been successful with his examinations, and has graduated with first class honors.

The Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League held a very pretty and successful afternoon tea yesterday at the Tiffin Tea-Room, Mrs. James McDonald's tea-rooms, which were kindly loaned for the occasion. The bright, newly re-modelled interior made a dainty setting for the tea, which was well attended, between the hours of four and seven o'clock. The tea-table was artistically arranged with silver vases holding red carnations, and a cheerful little Christmas tree made a central decoraton, hung with red berries and banked with a mound of crystal-flaked imitation snow. Guests were received by Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. R. H. Parsons. Mrs. G. L. Hay ushered the ladies into the tea-room, where Mrs. T. H. Glover and Mrs. J. E. Munro were in charge. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. Butcher and Miss M. Calcutt, assisted by Mrs. Nickle and the Misses Lillian Rogers, Grace Morgan and Lahring Parsons. During the afternoon, a very enjoyable musical programme, in charge of Miss Elizabeth Scott, was rendered, and included vocal solos by Mrs. A. A. Perrin and Miss Elma Coon, pianoforte selections by Miss Jean Bryce, and violin numbers by Stewart Widdess, with accompaniment by Miss Margaret Widdess. The ladies expressed themselves as very appreciative of the kindness of Mrs. McDonald in offering her pretty tea-rooms for the occasion.

SNIDER REPORT SAYS MAJORITY CHARGES FALSE

Nineteen of the Eighty-five Charges Made by Settell True or Partly True.

OTHERS ARE UNTRUE.

Commissioner Finds That Legal Department of Hydro Commission is Overstaffed.

TORONTO, December 11. — Nineteen of the eigthy five charges and statements contained in the letter of E. C. Settell, the former secretary to Sir Adam Beck, now serving a three year prison term in the penitentiary for the attempted theft of $29,000, Commissioner Colin G. Snider, in a report to the Government finds to be true, or partly true. The remaining sixty-six, the commisioner finds to be false.

The charges against I. B. Lucas, K. C., Hydro Solicitor, Commissioner Snider finds all true, or partly true, with the exception of Settell's charge as to the stealing of furniture, and the charge that the Hydro young man, Lee Statham, had been asked to use his car on Mr. Lucas's behalf.

Outstanding in the Commissioner's findings, which cover 94 typewritten pages, are those dealing with the Lucas family, and the Municipal Underwriters' Association, in which one of I. B. Lucas's sons was the principal. Commissioner Snider reviews amounts of $3600, $1800 and $2400 received by F. C. S. Evans and G. K. and Brock Lucas from Hydro sources, and comments in one case at least, that the amount seems "very excessive." He proceeds:

"Your Commissioner is of the opinion that this charge by Settell is justified and true, and that it presents a case of censurable nepotism, and that the legal department of the Hydro Electric Power Commission is over-staffed."

What seemed to be the most important charge against Chief Engineer Gaby, that he had utilized thousands of dollars worth of hydro time and material in the construction of his new house, Commissoiner Snider finds to be "substantially false" and apparently mistaken. In connection, however with Mr Gaby's sale to the hydro of the machine shovel, from a plant of which he was the owner, for $4400, Commissioner Snider says: "The machine was bought apparently without disclosing to the commission that he was recommending to them the purchase of his own machine. Impropriety of thus dealing with the commission is manifest. It was reprehensible and improper."

All the major charges against Sir Adam Beck are found to be untrue. All the important charges, such as that involving the Wolseley automobile in England, the forced purchase of an automobile for Sir Adam by the Hydro Electric Union, the wrongful expenditure of large sums of money for rental and furinshings of Sir Adam and Lady Beck's apartments, the Hydro's payment for the London sanitarium photographs, the violet ray for Sir Adam, Sir Adam's "arrangement" for the refunding of $1500 spent on meals, the forcing of certain contracts, the Christmas "smuggling," the wrongful use of a car, the alteration of the commission minutes and the disbursement of the hydro funds for London sanitarium purposes, all these Commissioner Snider finds to be not true.

The comment of Premier Ferguson in issuing the bulky finding was:

There is nothing in report to reflect upon integrity of Sir Adam Beck or upon his Conduct of his duties as chairman of the Commission. Judge Snider does make some comment upon Mr. Gabys action in selling a piece of plant to Hydro comission and upon legal and the

CANADA'S POTATO CROP SHOWS HEAVY INCREASE

Yield is 2,590,000 Cwt. More Than Last Year's.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—(By Canadian Press).—Canada's total potato yield for this year is 2,590,000 cwt. in excess of that for 1923, acording to an estimate by the department of agriculture. The yield estimated for 1924 is 58,069,000 as compared with 55,497,000 cwt., for last year.

The acreage planted to potatoes in Canada in 1924 was slightly in excess of that planted in 1923, or as provisionally estimated 563,899 acres as compared with 560,942 acres last year.

The growing conditions throughout the Dominion, as a whole, have been satisfactory for the production of potatoes; and the average yield per acre was estimated on November 1st., to be 103 cwt., as compared with 99 cwt. last year, and with a ten year average, 1914 to 1923, of 88.-7 cwt.

STEEL ORDERS TONNAGE HIGH

U. S. Steel Corporation Reports Big Increase in Unfilled Tonnage.

GARY'S EVIDENCE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The United States Steel Corporation yesterday reported an increase of 506,699 tons in unfilled tonnage last month, the largest increase since September 1922, when a gain of more than 600,000 tons was reported over the preceding month. Unfilled orders on the books of the company on November 30 last amounted to 4,031,-694 tons compared with 3,525,270 on October 31 last, and 4,468,584 on November 30 last year.

This increase, the fourth successive one reported by the corporation, largely exceeded the preliminary estimate of trade, which were conservatively placed at 300,000 tons.

"The published figures of unfilled orders, showing an increase of 506,-099, tons are gratifying but should cause no surprise," said E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the corporation. "Business generally is good and is growing better.

"The fact is that since the election of November 4, there has been such a decided change in general sentiment concerning prospects. When business is depressed we are too apt to become despondent and discouraged. We consider the present, and fail to remember the past, or to look forward to the future.

"Business is so good at the present time that if I were to venture words of advice I would say:—'Let us proceed steadily, naturally, with a view of preventing the inevitable result of recklessness, extravagance or greed'."

The new find is just about two miles out of Stewart. There has been a rush from Stewart and Hydor, and the sides of the road are now all staked.

NEWELL DENIES PROMISING $500 TO A PERJUROR

PLOT DISCLOSED

Sweeping Denial by Newell and His Witnesses in Case Before Judge Huycke.

The criminal case of the King vs. Jawes Newell, on a charge of subornation of perjury, in which the accused is charged with procuring and counselling Albert Hynes to commit perjury at the trial of the accused on December 11th, 1923, on a charge of seducing Clarice McColl of Norwood under promise of marriage, a charge, which, after two hearings by Judge Ward, was later dismissed, proceeded during yesterday afternoon's sessions of the County Court before His Honour Judge Huycke, A. B. Cunningham, K.C., of Kingston, acting as Crown Prosecutor, and Gordon and O'Brien appearing for the accused.

A battery of witnesses was called by both counsel who rested their cases just prior to adjournment of Court until ten o'clock this morning. The gist of the evidence consisted mainly of assertions by witnesses for the Crown substantiating the charge, and by witnesses for the defence unanimously denying any knowledge of the affair. The case was enlivened by tilts between the opposing counsel, Mr. Gordon objecting strenuously and constantly to the introduction of what he termed irrelevant testimony from Crown witnesses examined by Mr. Cunningham.

Two From Reformatory.

Albert Hynes of Asphodel and William Millar, whose home is at 247 Wetcott street, both of whom are serving two-year sentences at the present time at the Ontario Reformatory, on conviction given a year ago when they were tried and found guilty of perjury in connection with the same case, were in the box as Crown witnesses. Hynes was examined and cross-examined at some length. He testified as to conversations with James Newell at the latter's home in Asphodel, when he first offered to help Newell financially in his difficulties and was later offered $500 by the latter if he would swear, as he afterwards did, that he had carnal relations with Clarice McColl of Norwood prior to the time at which she had accused Newell of seduction under promise of marriage. Hynes hesitated at first, on account of not being acquainted with Miss McColl at the time, but said that in conversation later with Newell in his home, when the Newell family, including Newell's sister, Mrs. Annie McIntosh, and William Millar, were present, he had decided to go through with the affair. Arrangements were then made to see a lawyer about the case, and about the first of December last, he, with William Millar, George Newell, a brother of the accused, Mrs. McIntosh and James Newell, went to consult Mr. Gordon at his office. He made the statement in the solicitors' office that he had had such relations with Miss McColl, fixing the date at the last of August or first of September.

Approached Geo. Peake.

James Newell and Millar and Hynes then went down to Campbellford on December 6th to see George Peake, an employee of the Hydro-Electric there, who it had been suggested by Hynes to the accused would be perhaps persuaded to swear that he had loaned his automobile to Hynes to drive Clarice McColl out of Norwood. The witness said that, in conversation with Peake, Newell had offered the latter $25 or $50 or enough to make it worth his while to swear to this effect at the coming trial. Peake, GRANTED IMMUNITY.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press). — William and Ethel Slauenwhite, charged with being concerned in burglaries with Lewis Bevis, who is under sentence of death for having shot Police Officer Fulton, were dismissed from custody in the Supreme Court yesterday morning, immunity having been granted, according to Attorney-General O'Hearn, because the Slauenwhites had been considered as Crown witnesses.

WARDEN'S TORBEARANCE BORN OF DISMAY WHEN REPORT TAKEN AS READ

WARDEN W. M. FOWLDS

COBOURG, Dec. 11...—An illuminating story is told of popular Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

When he first entered public life, it is said, he prepared, with great expenditure of time and energy, a lengthy report on conditions he had investigated.

On presenting it to council one councillor, seeing the bulky pages of the manuscript, moved that the report be taken as read. The motion was quickly seconded and carried and Mr. Fowlds' heart was almost broken as he saw his work of artistry taken from him and buried with the other mouldy and unread reports on file.

That is why, it is said, he is so tolerant toward his councillors who now present lengthy reports on even uninteresting subjects.

ALDERMEN WILL LIKELY REMAIN

Five Members of City Council End Terms—Ready for Re-Nomination.

OTHER RUMORS

That all five retiring members of the City Council will be willing to accept the nomination for 1925 seems to be the opinion of their fellows on the Aldermanic board although they themselves are reticient. In conversation with The Examiner the men whose terms expire this year declare it too soon yet to make statements.

One alderman said he is willing to do what he considers at the time is best for the city, while others await the heralding of other prospective entrants for civic honors.

Those whose terms expire, and the length of time they have given in the council are: Joseph Crowe, the dean of the board, seven years; Robert Morrison, six year; J. W. Meyers, two years; J. O. Fife, two years and M. J. Maher, two years.

In 1924 Alderman Morrison served as chairman of the Board of Works; Alderman Meyers was chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee; Alderman Fife headed the Property Committee and Alderman Crowe was chairman of the Legal Committee Alderman Maher gave up a chair in a re-shuffling of positions in January.

There are the usual rumors of individuals and parties that will run for office on one ticket or another, but these have not seriously entered the field as yet.

WARDEN FOWLDS PRAISES GREER FOR ROAD WORK

UNITED COUNTIES

Suggestion by Warden That Permanent Roads be Paid for by Debentures.

(By Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, Dec. 11.— Discussion of the county road system and proposed changes in it occupied the attention of the council of the United Counties yesterday afternoon, the announcements made by the Warden of improvements being received with general expressions of satisfaction.

Mayor Smith of Port Hope, last year's Warden, sat with Warden W. M. Fowlds in the afternoon.

General business is being expedited and reports of committees are well under way in the expectation of ending the session on Friday.

Road Report.

G. Greer, road superintendent, presented his report, showing a great deal of work done on the counties roads up to October, and was complimented by the Warden on his splendid achievements. The money had been distributed as far as it would go to the best advantage.

"We have had very efficient service," he said, "in spite of having too little money and too much road."

Some discussion took place on side entrances from county roads and the superintendent explained that one entrance to each property is constructed with the road free of charge. Second entrances, where required, are built if the owner supplies the material.

Thomas Patterson (Clarke), said more work has been done in the lower assessed municipalities than in the higher. He had no complaint, except at one point near Orono, where he had promised the ratepayers relief.

Road Dammed.

J. McCamus (Cavan) asked what right a man had to dam up water alongside the road. The superintendent said the matter is under consideration by solicitors. At one place the road is actually flooded. To build the road out of the water would necessitate building a new bridge.

H. H. Holdaway (Port Hope), suggested looking up the extent of the water rights set out in the deeds of the adjoining land.

The Warden congratulated Superintendent Greer on his forbearance in unusual cases where he could easily lose his temper and lose money for the Council.

S. A. Clarke (Cramahe) drew a badly dilapidated bridge to Mr. Greer's attention, and complained of the amount expended for maintenance in his township, demanding where the money was spent.

The superintendent said he was not to blame for faulty pieces of road and bad bridges. If the Council will give him money he will do the work. Shovelling of snow, dragging and patching accounts for the expenditure mentioned by Mr. Clarke.

W. E. Elliott (Murray) said all equalization in expenditures on roads between townships should be forgotten and the roads maintained under a county system.

W. R. Courtice (Darlington) said then the equalization clause should me expunged from the minutes.

Praise Superintendent.

M. J. Elliott (Bowmanville) admitted that Durham county is ahead of Northumberland in quality of roads, conditions being more adverse in the latter. Some of the Durham raods should be looked after now before they lose their advantage, and Mr. Elliott did not think the most had been done by council in this way. The $90,000

BOOK BY IBANEZ WAS DISCUSSED

British Home Secretary is Asked Whether He Will Prevent Sale.

ATTACKS ALPHONSO

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The question of Vincente Blasco Ibanez's book acclaims King Alfonso and the military directorate in Spain, was raised in the House of Commons yesterday by Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Labor member for Newcastle-on-Tyne, who asked Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary whether steps had been taken to prevent the book's sale and whether any communication had been received from the foreign office on the subject.

The home secretary replied that in view of newspaper paragraphs referring to the book inquiries had been made some weeks ago through London book sellers, but they had no information on the subject. He had no knowledge of any advice or instructions being given to anyone with regard to its publication and he had received no communication regarding it from the foreign office.

Asked by Former Premier MacDonald whether he proposed to take action in connection with the book, which he had never seen, on the strength of newpaper paragraphs, Sir William replied he had never suggested taking any action; he wanted to see the book first. If he obtained the book, which he had not yet, he did not know what action he could, or might, have taken.

C.N.R. BOND CLAIMS.

Margin From Net Revenue For Stockholders Committee Reports.

LONDON, Dec. 10. — (Canadian Press Cable). — The Grand Trunk stockholders' committee states that it appears certain that a net revenue of $17,674,582 was made by the Canadian National Railways in the past year and that this would leave a margin of $7,976,028 beyond the requirements of the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture holders, which margin the committee hopes will go towards satisfying the claims of the Canadian National Railway bondholders which heretofore have been met from the Canadian treasury.

The committee states that it believes the above is a conservative statement of the position and it assures its supporters of their future interest payment. The committee claims that the present position of the matter justifies it in repeating its advice to the stockholders to hold on to their stock.

VERSAILLES TREATY SILENT ON PENALTIES IF GERMANY ARMING

Possible Result of Armament Investigation Considered by League of Nations.

SECRET SESSION

Discussion of Delicate Point Deferred Until March Meeting.

ROME, Dec. 16.—A grave discussion arose in a secret meeting of the council of the League of Nations last night concerning what action, if any, the council can take in case a future investigation of the armament situation in Germany, or other former enemy states, discloses flagrant violations of the conditions laid down in the treaty of Versailles. The council was confronted by the fact that the Versailles treaty, though authorizing investigations, is silent regarding resultant steps.

M. Briand particularly and also Austen Chamberlain and Dr Benes, admitted that the omission left a disturbing situation. The council ruled that a majority vote was sufficient when the council is deciding on the composition of commissions of investigation.

The next question was whether the majority or unanimity rule should be observed in taking any action on the reports of investigators.

Alluding to Germany's prospective admission to the League, with a place on the council, Mr. Chamberlain remarked that it was quite conceivable that the council of the League would eventualy be enlarged, and it was reasonable to suppose that any state affected by future reports would refuse to agree to any drastic action.

Serious Question.

M. Briand declared that the question of the council's power to act was a serious one, because states affected could go on ceaselessly building up war armaments unless a way was found effectually to check this.

M. Unden, of Sweden, suggested as a solution that in case former enemy countries were declared to be preparing for war the problem could come before the League in the regular channel under the terms of the covenant as a condition threatening peace. But this suggestion did not seem to satisfy the other members.

Eventually it was decided to adjourn the entire discussion until the March meeting of the council. In the meantime the official minutes of last night's debate will be forwarded to all the governments having seats on the council, so that they may have an opportunity to send in detailed views.

CHANGE SPEED LAW.

British Columbia Demands Safety For Public.

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 11. — Drastic changes in the motor vehicles act have been adopted by the provincial legislature with a view to bringing about a condition of greater safety on the streets and highways of the province. The house has decided to eliminate all reference to speed limits from the act and to require motorists to drive their cars in such a manner as to avoid menace to public safety.

On three convictions for offences under the act a driver will lose his or her license either by suspension or cancellation.

SOVIET LETTER BEFORE HOUSE

John R. Clynes Demands View of Evidence Proving Authenticity.

ALLIED DEBTS UP.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Resumption of debate on the King's address to parliament last night brought out in the House of Commons a revival of the recent election campaign conflict over the famous Zinovieff letter, which urged revolutionary activity in England.

Prime Minister Baldwin previously had said that the cabinet sub-committee which examined the evidence placed before it in connection with the letter had concluded unanimously that the document was authentic.

J. R. Clynes who was lord privy seal in the late MacDonald cabinet in the course of a general attack on the programme of the government of Stanley Baldwin, demanded that the House should be afforded a view of the evidence on which the sub-committee arrived at its decision regarding the authenticity of the letter He said the Zinovief document did so much to secure Mr. Baldwin his huge majority in the recent election that the premier ought not to object to an independent investigation.

Sir John Simon, one of the leading Liberals in the house, lifted the debate out of the rut of party polemics by raising the question of the Franco-American debt conversations. Sir John said it would be intolerable if Great Britain was to have no say in any readjustment of the debt question between the United States and France. He wanted to know how far Premier Baldwin regarded these allied debts as assets.

LLOYD GEORGE'S ABILITY STIRS BRITISH HOUSE

His Power May Have Waned in Country, But Not Among Commoners.

BALDWIN'S LIMIT

Repartee and Hurly-Burly of Debate Will be Left to Ministers.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Those who heard the debate in the House of Commons Tuesday night on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, though differing in political complexion are practically agreed that in holding the attention of the house Lloyd George has lost little if any of his power, whether his popularity in the country is overclouded or not.

When Lloyd George followed the former premier, Ramsay MacDonald, in the debate last night there was a visible awakening of interest in the house which previously had betokened a rather bored appearance.

Mr. MacDonald, on the other hand, in addition to his customary tincture of oratorical acidity, showed that he was still suffering from the nervous strain which threatened to result in a breakdown before he resigned the premiership.

Premier in Good Humor.

Premier Baldwin listened to the criticisms of these opposition leader imperturbably and in his reply manifested complete good humor. Probably though his host of supporters left the house after the debate with the impression confirmed that the Conservative leader, respected as he undoubtedly is for his lofty principles and for his ability as a platform speaker—as he has frequently proved himself to be—is really no adept at rough-and-tumble debating in the House of Commons. Reupartee or pungent retort obviously is not in his line, and the feeling is that when controversial matters come under discussion in the New Year the work of upholding the Government's side will fall mainly on Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary; Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, and the redoubtable Winston Churchill, chancellor of the excequer.

Messrs. John Guiry, Thos. Murtha, Patrick Perdue and Peter Perdue attended the sale at Mr. Allan Cairns' in North Ops, Thursday and report the prices high. Cows sold from $90 to $105, pigs at $25 and $27 each, with young pigs at $6.00 per pair. Machinery sold high, but the horses was draggy and sold low.

TIM HEALY AND PARNELL

Irish Leader Helped Out of a Hole.

Writing in reminiscent mood in The Sunday Times, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., says: Tim Healy has all his life been a splendid shorthand writer; he conducts all his private and family correspondence, I believe still in shorthand. He was also a brilliant writer, and while he was still a secretary he used to write a weekly letter to an Irish paper; it was this letter that helped Parnell very seriously in his first beginnings—which were very difficult, and met with enormous opposition from very powerful influences in Irish life. Parnell went to America at the end of 1879 to raise money to meet a threatened famine, and also to help his movement.

The tide of suscriptions flowed in at a fearful rate, and Parnell, who was the most disorderly of men, found himself overwhelmed and helpless; he thought of that brilliant young fellow in London, and cabled for him. Healy was on his way to America the night of the day when he received the cable; brought order out of chaos with his astounding and inexhaustible energy—especially with his pen. I don't know why, but he and Parnell had some difference of opinion in America, and Parnell never employed Mr. Healy as his secretary again—an incident that led to mighty consequences to Parnell to Mr. Healy, and to Ireland.

Serious Accident Near Trent River—Automobile Did Not Stop.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 11. — While out driving yesterday near Trent River, a buggy containing Mrs. Oliver Garneau and her daughter was struck by a large sedan automobile. Mrs. Garneau was thrown out and sustained a fracture of the skull, also other injuries. The daughter escaped without any serious injury. The horse's leg was broken and the animal had to be shot. It is claimed that the horse became frightened and jumped out in front of the car.

This morning Mrs. Garneau's condition showed some improvement.

W. E. Rankin Dead

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Runnels, Sebastapol street, received word on Tuesday that Mr. W. E. Rankin of Edmonton, died last Saturday and that Mrs. Rankin will arrive with the body at Smithfield, near Brighton ,on Wednesday night, and the funeral will take place there Thursday afternoon, service being held in the church and interment at Smithfield Cemetery. The late Mr. Rankin with Mrs. Rankin lived near Norham until about thirty years ago when they moved to Campbellford and purchased a home on Grand Road, where Mr. S. J. Moore now resides. Later they moved further up the street into the house now occupied by Mr. Thos. McCook. After living in Campbellford for some time they went to the West. About eleven years ago they returned and built a beautiful home near Smithfield. Mr. Wm. Runnels of town, built this home for Mr. Rankin a little over a year ago. Mr. and Mrs. Rankin sold this home and returned to the West.

Mrs. Rankin has been in Toronto and Trenton for a couple of months this fall, returning to Edmonton, about two weeks ago. No particulars have been heard about Mr. Rankin's death and the news came as a shock to the community as no one knew of his illness. The late Mr. Rankin was a member of the Methodist church while in Campbellford and while living here both he and Mrs. Rankin made many warm friends.

Later, word was received that Mrs. Rankin had not arrived at Smithfield, and a telephone message was sent from there to a sister of the late Mr. Rankin, in Toronto, who in turn telegraphed to Edmonton. An answer came saying Mrs. Rankin was very low in Edmonton, and that Mr. Rankin had to be buried in Edmonton. The late Mr. Rankin took ill a week ago last Saturday, and was taken to the hospital, and Mrs. Rankin, who was in Toronto, sent for. She arrived in Edmonton three days later, but her husband only lived until last Saturday.

The attitude of Sir Adam Beck upon report was later given in statement which he issued, absolving Mr. Gaby from blame which Judge Snider had attached to him and pointing out with respect to Mr. Lucas that legal department of Hydro effected saving of thousands of dollars yearly in hydro legal costs.

Sir Adam Beck stated that there would be no dismissals from Hydro service as result of Judge Snider's findings. One concrete result which he intimated as destined to ensue from inquiry was undertaking by Hydro of its own insurance his plan being to increase contingency reserve by perhaps $200,000 per year and thus have commission create its own insurance fund.

Needless to say, Mr. Moore made a 100-yard sprint in record time.

Social Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Francis entertained about a hundred young people at their farm residence on Tuesday evening. A good time was spent in dancing and card-playing. Messrs. Jas. Graham, Ivan Fletcher, Roy Francis and Mrs. McFarlane supplied the music.

Quite a number of people are making preparations for the wiring of their places of business, etc., previous to having the electric lights.

Mr. Ivan Fletcher was appointed caretaker of the Skating and Curling Rink for the coming season. The young people and curlers are eagerly waiting for the ice. Work commenced this week in the rink, and with good snappy weather we should have good ice by Christmas.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 1175½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

PATRIOTIC KIEL SHIPWORKERS ALARMED.

A ship's painter at Kiel was painting the name "Wilhelm Hemstand" on a ship's bows. He had finished "Wilhelm" and the two horizontal lines of the "H" when the meal-time bell rang, and he dashed for the nearest gate.

Some of his companions passed by, and were horrified to see on the vessel "Wilhelm II" They went in a body to the managers office and declared that if the boat went into the water with that name on her bows they would strike.

The painter was sent for, and the shipyard workers frowns were changed into smiles.

EXPECT INCREASE IN ESTIMATES TO FIGHT SMUGGLERS

Appropriations at Present Are Inadequate to Meet Situation.

LOSS A HUGE ONE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—The department of customs and inland revenue is fully aware of the seriousness of the present situation with respect to smuggling and is as much disturbed because of the loss of revenue involved, as Canadian manufacturers are by reason of the destructive competition occasioned through the wholesale bringing in of commodities in which duties have not been paid. But the department as at present constituted appears to be practically helpless to cope with the situation.

The total appropriation for inspection of ports, appraisal of goods and preventive service is about $350,000 per year. Included in the preventive service is the upkeep of half a dozen cruisers and it is estimated that not more than $100,000 is available for land service, a sum entirely inadequate to cope with the present situation, on a boundary of 3,000 miles.

In the past, smuggling was carried on in a comparitively small way. Today it has become a wholesale traffic and it is estimated that to cope with a sum of no less than a million dollars will be required for preventive services. Inasmuch as the estimated loss in revenue today is in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 there is little doubt that the estimates at the coming session will be heavily increased.

In the meantime the Dominion Smuggling Preventive Association, formed by the manufacturers for the purpose of co-operating with the department is preparing for a conference with minister of customs this week.

LOSSES BY MANITOBA IN ITS RURAL CREDITS

May Have to Write Off From $400,000 to $500,000 This Year.

SOME SALES MADE.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 11. — Further writing off of losses sustained by the province under the Manitoba Rural Credit System, which is expected to amount to at least $400,000, and a possibility of it reaching the half million dollar mark, at the forthcoming session of the Legislature, seems assured.

At the last session, Hon. F. M. Black, Provincial Treasurer, recommended to the House in its dying hours that the sum of $250,000 be deducted from the assets in the capital section of the balance sheet, this amount now being carried under the heading of "capital assets to be amortized." The resolution, which was carried by a good majority, dealing with this writing off, stated that until the appointment of administrators for certain societies was made, it was "not possible to estimate with exactness what losses would be incurred."

Had a Bad Year in 1923.

In his budget speech, delivered February 8, the treasurer stated that many farmers had been able to make reductions in amounts owing and the total amount in principal, and interest outstanding at the close of the provincial fiscal year, August 31, 1923, was $2,726,936 and $146,275 respectively, or $270,037 and $32,593 less, respectively, than at the same date in 1922. Agricultural conditions throughout the province had been such that it could not be expected that the loans made through the societies could be established on a more satisfactory basis than a year before. It was a regrettable fact, he said, that many borrowers had found themselves less able to meet their obligations than at that time and that the percentage of loss likely to be made had been materially increased.

Amendments were made to the Act during the 1923 session, restricting the ability of societies that had over-extended themselves to lend and automatically limited loans in some districts.

At the end of the financial year of the rural credit societies branch of the Provincial Government, which closed December 31, 1923, it was estimated that the arrears of interest were in excess of $320,000.

Heavy Loss Certain.

Without question, the province will have to take a very considerable further loss over these loans. The rural credit societies act came into being in 1919, when the Norris Government borrowed money from the banks, to finance the undertaking. In 1920 the present system was inaugurated, Hon. Edward Brown, who was then Provincial Treasurer, being unable to arrange with banks to lend the money, for this financing, at six per cent.

There were 74 societies in operation, with a recorded membership of 4,998 at August 31, 1923. Of these 32 have been taken over by the Government, the directors having been automatically dismissed with the appointment of an administrator. The total liabilities are in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. Several foreclosures have been made, and sales conducted, the results of which have been unsatisfactory, with low prices being paid for horses, cattle, and implements. One team of horses sold for $32, and a horse for $4.

insurance departments of the Hydro. These are internal matters in Hydro commission over which hydro commission has control although of course, Government is in indirect authority, Hydro commissioners be- responsible to government."

The attitude of Sir Adam Beck upon report was later given in statement which he issued, absolving Mr. Gaby from blame which Judge Snider had attached to him and pointing out with respect to Mr. Lucas that legal department of Hydro effected saving of thousands of dollars yearly in hydro legal costs.

Sir Adam Beck stated that there would be no dismissals from Hydro service as result of Judge Snider's findings. One concrete result which he intimated as destined to ensue from inquiry was undertaking by Hydro of its own insurance his plan being to increase contingency reserve by perhaps $200,000 per year and thus have commission create its own insurance fund.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 1175½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

PATRIOTIC KIEL SHIPWORKERS ALARMED.

A ship's painter at Kiel was painting the name "Wilhelm Hemstand" on a ship's bows. He had finished "Wilhelm" and the two horizontal lines of the "H" when the meal-time bell rang, and he dashed for the nearest gate.

Some of his companions passed by, and were horrified to see on the vessel "Wilhelm II" They went in a body to the managers' office and declared that if the boat went into the water with that name on her bows they would strike.

The painter was sent for, and the shipyard workers frowns were changed into smiles.

EXPECT INCREASE IN ESTIMATES TO FIGHT SMUGGLERS

Appropriations at Present Are Inadequate to Meet Situation.

LOSS A HUGE ONE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—The department of customs and inland revenue is fully aware of the seriousness of the present situation with respect to smuggling and is as much disturbed because of the loss of revenue involved, as Canadian manufacturers are by reason of the destructive competition occasioned through the wholesale bringing in of commodities in which duties have not been paid. But the department as at present constituted appears to be practically helpless to cope with the situation.

The total appropriation for inspection of ports, appraisal of goods and preventive service is about $350,000 per year. Included in the preventive service is the upkeep of half a dozen cruisers and it is estimated that not more than $100,000 is available for land service, a sum entirely inadequate to cope with the present situation, on a boundary of 3,000 miles.

In the past, smuggling was carried on in a comparitively small way. Today it has become a wholesale traffic and it is estimated that to cope with a sum of no less than a million dollars will be required for preventive services. Inasmuch as the estimated loss in revenue today is in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 there is little doubt that the estimates at the coming session will be heavily increased.

In the meantime the Dominion Smuggling Preventive Association, formed by the manufacturers for the purpose of co-operating with the department is preparing for a conference with minister of customs this week.

LOSSES BY MANITOBA IN ITS RURAL CREDITS

May Have to Write Off From $400,000 to $500,000 This Year.

SOME SALES MADE.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 11. — Further writing off of losses sustained by the province under the Manitoba Rural Credit System, which is expected to amount to at least $400,000, and a possibility of it reaching the half million dollar mark, at the forthcoming session of the Legislature, seems assured.

At the last session, Hon. F. M. Black, Provincial Treasurer, recommended to the House in its dying hours that the sum of $250,000 be deducted from the assets in the capital section of the balance sheet, this amount now being carried under the heading of "capital assets to be amortized." The resolution, which was carried by a good majority, dealing with this writing off, stated that until the appointment of administrators for certain societies was made, it was "not possible to estimate with exactness what losses would be incurred."

Had a Bad Year in 1923.

In his budget speech, delivered February 8, the treasurer stated that many farmers had been able to make reductions in amounts owing and the total amount in principal, and interest outstanding at the close of the provincial fiscal year, August 31, 1923, was $2,723,936 and $146,275 respectively, or $270,037 and $32,593 less, respectively, than at the same date in 1922. Agricultural conditions throughout the province had been such that it could not be expected that the loans made through the societies could be established on a more satisfactory basis than a year before. It was a regrettable fact, he said, that many borrowers had found themselves less able to meet their obligations than at that time and that the percentage of loss likely to be made had been materially increased.

Amendments were made to the Act during the 1922 session, restricting the ability of societies that had over-extended themselves to lend and automatically limited loans in some districts.

At the end of the financial year of the rural credit societies branch of the Provincial Government, which closed December 31, 1923, it was estimated that the arrears of interest were in excess of $320,000.

Heavy Loss Certain.

Without question, the province will have to take a very considerable further loss over these loans. The rural credit societies act came into being in 1919, when the Norris Government borrowed money from the banks, to finance the undertaking. In 1920 the present system was inaugurated, Hon. Edward Brown, who was then Provincial Treasurer, being unable to arrange with banks to lend the money, for this financing, at six per cent.

There were 74 societies in operation, with a recorded membership of 4,998 at August 31, 1923. Of these 32 have been taken over by the Government, the directors having been automatically dismissed with the appointment of an administrator. The total liabilities are in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. Several foreclosures have been made, and sales conducted, the results of which have been unsatisfactory, with low prices being paid for horses, cattle, and implements. One team of horses sold for $32, and a horse for $4.

ADVERTISING CANADA.

The Federal Department of the Interior has just issued a number of publications dealing with the beauty spots of Canada and emphasizing the importance of this country as a playground for the vacationist and tourist.

One of the volumes is the annual report of the Commissioner of Canadian National Parks, explaining what has been done towards popularizing the national playgrounds.

It is full of interest to every Canadian, because it gives some information in regard to these parks that is too little known by the average citizen.

The other publications will arouse new interest in Canada's scenic beauties, for they cover most of the districts noted for their scenic appeal, and contain many photographs that will be an eye-opener to most of us in this country, to say nothing of the people who live in other lands.

Such volumes as these should not only do much to attract tourists from outside of Canada, but also to keep at home many Canadians who will realize that they have not seen half the wonders of their own great country.

They should be widely circulated.

THE ALIEN QUESTION.

Without attempting to usur the function of the courts and judge in advance the Hamilton foreigners under custody on a charge of having most deliberately and cold-bloodedly murdered one of their fellow-countrymen, the circumstances surrounding the case are such as make it necessary to point out the desirability of a closer inspection of certain types of immigrants.

Peterborough, fortunately, has had no trouble of this nature.

There is no foreign section here—no herding of aliens such as has given rise to such tragedies as the recent murders in Hamilton.

But Toronto, Hamilton and to some extent Brantford, Niagara Falls, Welland and other cities know what a foreign settlement on a large scale means.

As the Hamilton Spectator points out, most of the murders of the last decade have been perpetrated in the wards where aliens dwell.

Certainly it is such sections that give the police the most trouble.

Selective immigration, properly carried out, would prevent the entry into Canada of many of the immigrants who swell our crime records.

And back of that, a system of deportation of the offending aliens would have a very beneficial effect.

Once a foreigner understands that a failure to live up to the laws of the country that he has chosen as his home means banishment, he will begin to wonder if the criminal game is worth the candle.

Dumping them into penitentiaries only means that in a few years they will be free again ready to plunge right back into a life of crime.

THE POUND IS BACK.

The rapid return to par of the pound sterling, which has climbed to $4.71 and is only sixteen cents away from its face value, is gratifying to every citizen of the British Empire because of what lies behind this return to normal.

Only four years ago the exchange rate of the pound was $3.71, and it was prophesied that at the worst it would go much lower and at the best would never regain its old standing.

Britain's post-war financing has aroused the admiration of the world.

When the war was over Britain was carrying a burden of debt that might be described as overwhelming.

She had strained every resource not only to meet her own needs but to finance the operations of her allies, and as a result the end of the conflict found the British people face to face with a stupendous task.

None of her debtors came to her rescue. From them she has received neither interest nor principal.

But Britain settled down to fight this financial battle as she has doggedly and persistently fought all her battles—and she is winning all along the line.

Expenditures have been cut down, the debt owing to the United States is being paid, conditions in Europe are improving, and Great Britain is beginning to find the task easier, as a just reward for her readiness to meet her moral and legal obligations.

The British pound will always be fought fighting, so long as the British spirit remains what it is and has been.

BY ACCLAMATION.

A suggestion that the whole Oshawa Council should be returned by acclamation finds the Reformer in a mood that, to say the least, is not kindly toward the idea.

"The Reformer believes," says the Oshawa paper, "that at least half of the old Council should be left at home and their places taken by wide-awake, efficient, progressive business men. This business of allowing second-rate men to get into Council by acclamation is little short of criminal. We have a huge investment here and it requires good men to see that we get a hundred cents on the dollar value for the money expended."

Those are harsh words, Brier Ross, but the Examiner is in thorough accord with you in the opinion that the worst folly any community can commit is to let inefficient, unqualified men step into office by acclamation.

The sugar coating on the pill, that it is good business to save the trouble and expense of an election, should not deceive anybody.

What profit is there in a temporary saving if the administration of the business of the municipality is to be left in the hands of men whose records have proven them unfit for such a trust?

Criticism of the Oshawa Council will have to be left to the Reformer, of course, but there is no question about the logic of the article.

Business ability and experience are necessary assets of a worth-while Alderman, and there is little sense in allowing men without such qualities a berth without even the formality of an election.

Not only Oshawa, but every other municipality in Ontario, needs a business administration in 1925.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

(Kingston Standard.)

Some of the newspapers, discussing the change in the date of the holding of the municipal elections from New Year's Day to the first Monday in December, give it as their opinion that the change has not worked satisfactorily and that fewer electors than ever have exercised their franchise. For instance, according to figures compiled by the Peterborough Examiner, only about 50 per cent. of the voters turned out in Ottawa on election day; in Windsor actually less than 15 per cent. voted, the highest vote being 3,604 for Hydro out of a total possible vote of 25,493; while in Hamilton but one-third of the vote was cast.

So far as Kingston is concerned, the Standard can only say that the change seems to have worked decidedly for the better, in that not only have more votes been cast than previously, but there has been no disarrangement or dislocation of business preceding Christmas as ordinarily there was in the days when held on New Year's Day and when many of the candidates were busy canvassing both before and after Christmas.

When the change was first made to December in 1922 there was, admittedly, a falling off in the vote, since the total vote polled for Mayor was but 3,461, but since then there has been a progressive and most satisfactory increase, until in the municipal election just concluded, the largest vote ever cast in such a contest was polled. Thus we see in 1923 an increase in the mayoralty vote from 3,461 to 4,912, while at the same time, with four candidates in the field for the Utilities Commission, the total commission vote was 7,126. This year the mayoralty vote was 5,282—an increase of 370 over the preceding year and a gain of more than 1,800 over 1922; while with only three Utilities Commissioners in the field this year the total vote cast for the commission was 7,365, as compared with 7,126—an increase of 239. When we consider that in the last Dominion election the total vote cast was approximately 11,900, we can readily see that a substantially large vote was cast in this municipal election—easily the largest ever recorded in such a contest in Kingston.

CHICAGO'S WATER AND THE COURTS.

"The interests of all the people imperatively require that the power and authority of the United States should now be vindicated so clearly and emphatically that the Chicago sanitary district may have no further excuse for persisting in the unlawful diversion of Lake waters. The time has come when the laws of the country of which it is a part must be obeyed."

These words, which might have come from the mouth of a Canadian statesman protesting against the unlawful withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan for flushing the sewers of the great city of Chicago to which it has no right either in law or equity, are in reality the closing sentences of the brief of the United States Attorney-General in the Supreme Court of that country.

Canada has looked upon this diversion of water, which has lowered the level of the Great Lakes and as a result diverted the head-waters of the St. Lawrence River, with enormous economic loss to international commerce, with alarm, irritation and finally with exasperation. It has not mollified this feeling of annoyance that the protests of the Dominion were treated with contumely by the offending purloiner of water in which we had an equity, neither has it made us hopeful that the aggravating condition would be removed, to note the truculent defiance which the Chicago drainage district meted out to its own Government. Washington has frequently declared that the action of the Chicago drainage engineers in diverting two and a half times as much water as they were allowed to take under the permissive order of March 3, 1903, was a contemptuous flouting of their authority, but for reasons regarding which it ill becomes another nation to offer any criticism or suggestion Chicago has continued to laugh at the official protests made and to treat the letters of the War Office couched in most strongly remonstrant terms with contumely.

The lengthy report of the United States Attorney-General reprinted elsewhere in a special despatch from Washington to the Star will bring comfort to Canada on two counts. In the first place it will absolve the Dominion authorities of any lukewarmness in the pressing of their complaint, for what hope could Canada have of obtaining even the smallest measure of redress when Chicago defied the sovereign authority of its own country. Secondly, the reading of the opening brief of Mr. Stone will reveal that a champion has at last entered the lists in the United States who does not mince words in his scathing attack on the law-breakers.

The case which has just come before the Supreme Court of the United States has been for no less than fifteen years in the lower courts, during which time the defendant in the action has been diverting an increasingly large volume of water from Lake Michigan. That a case so vital to the commerce of the country, and one which affected her national defense as the reports of the United States War Office show, should be subjected to such an astounding delay reads like a page from the history of the Circumlocution Office.

Montreal is vitally concerned with this persisting record of grand larceny perpetrated by Chicago. The hopes of the Dominion that this source of irritation, which is a cancer sore in our relations with our neighbor, are strengthened by Mr. Stone's strong words and his fighting manner. It seems incredible to us that the law's delays will permit a poulticing of the sore until a danger point is reached.—Montreal Star.

CAVAN FARMERS HOLDING WHEAT LITTLE LONGER

Most of Them Have Already Sold, But Some Are Only Storing.

PRICE IS $1.40

Number of Farmers Have Not Yet Received Money for Cattle They Sold.

CAVAN, Dec. 11.— Mr. John Douglas had Mr. T. A. Kelly's wheat drawn by truck to Frazerville last week It is a speedy way of delivering it. One dollar and forty cents a bushel is being paid if drawn by the farmer, somewhat less if drawn away by truck .

Many of the farmers are just storing their wheat in the elevators, not lifting the money, but waiting for a rise in price.

Of course a great deal of the wheat is already out of the farmers hands, but some of those who have some left feel like holding it a little longer.

Mr. C. Brackenridge threshed alfalfa for Mr. R. Matchett at the beginning of the week, while just across the road Mr. Wm. Hooton threshed clover for Mr. H. Lang.

The alfalfa yielded fairly well. Mr. Lang's clover and alsike are yielding pretty well.

No Funds For Cheques.

A short time ago two men purchased three car loads of cattle; one at Cavan, one at Peterboro and one at Indian River.

The cattle were delivered, paid for with cheques, dated in such a way that they could not be cashed for a few days, then shipped.

When the cheques were presented at the bank it was found there was no money with which to pay them. The cattle were gone and so far all the owners of the cattle have are the cheques. Cattle are bringing such small prices that it takes several to bring any decent sum of money. One farmer is said to have more than one hundred and sixty dollars due him.

Cattle take just the same feed and labor to tend them as when they brought a high price, and farmers cannot afford such losses.

COBOURG COURT BRIEF

Cases Settled or Referred to the Next Sitting.

COBOURG, Dec. 11.—What looked like a big docket for the fall session of the county court, fizzled out, when all five cases were settled out of court or set over until the next sitting. His Honor Judge Cameron presided at the half hour session to hear the requests.

Among the cases to go over is the interesting law suit to determine the ownership of a piece of land in Harwood, claimed to have been bought by N. Enoch Merriam from the C.N.R. The land is part of the old right of way of the Cobourg and Peterboro railway, and defendants, the corporation of the township of Hamilton, claim it is part of the public highway. Robert E. Drope, a township councillor, the pleadings say, was a trespasser on the land.

Wise and Otherwise.

Indications are that this year's resolutions have had accidents and we will need now ones soon.

Whales are said to be plentiful along the Oregon coast. We would like to hear them telling about getting away from fishermen.

In London a man smoked cigars 48 hours without stopping, so now he is all trained for Christmas.

Only former soldiers are allowed to beg in Paris. We might extend our war vets this great privilege.

The world, we often think, is a crossword puzzle. And those who can't work it say it is all wrong.

A woman may have trouble with her heart, but the greatest trouble she has with her head is washing her hair.

A THOUGHT.

A DIFFERENT THING.

Every time you slack a little, you back a lot. Each day demands that you be a day ahead.

And when you retire to your room to-night answer this question. "Did I put in a day of work or was the day just a day at work?"

If you are only holding your job until the wedding day it's a different song.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press). — In the face of immense selling to realize profits, wheat, corn and oats to-day all established new high price records for the season. It was the third successive day of record breaking advances in wheat and corn. A new upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool and a decrease of 6,011,000 bushels in the world's available supply of wheat were among the stimulating factors. Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1 1-8 cents higher; May 1.66 1-8 to 166 3-8 and July 1.46 1-8 to 146¼; corn ¼ to 3-8 cent up; oats unchanged to ¼ cent off, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 25 cents gain.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10. — (Canadian Press). — The general tone of the egg market is unchanged. The poultry market continues firm. Dressed turkeys are now costing 30 to 35 cents delivered Toronto and receipts are reported moderate. United States markets for turkeys are also firm.

Toronto fresh specials 73, extras 70.

Montreal extras 65 to 70, firsts 53 to 55, storage extras 47 to 48, firsts 43 to 44.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Foreign buyers made some demand for Canadian grain here to-day, but the volume of business was not large, there being only sales of odd loads of wheat, oats and barley for January shipment.

The demand from local buyers for grain in the domestic market showed a slight improvement and a little business was done in wheat and oats on c.i.f. basis, bay ports. The tone of the market was firm, Ontario No. 3 extra barley being quoted at $1.06, No. 3 grade at $1.05 per bushel, ex track; Ontario No. 2 wheat oats at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents, and No. 4 grade at 59 cents per bushel, ex-store.

The undertone to the market for spring wheat grades of flour was strong and millers generally marked up prices another 10 cents per barrel, making a net rise for the week of 20 cents per barrel. There was no improvement in the foreign trading, owing to the higher prices there was no new development in the winter wheat flour situation.

A very firm feeling prevails in cheese owing to the continued steady demand for supplies from foreign buyers, with the improvement of late in sterling exchange rates and a fair trade was done.

There was also some demand for current receipts of cheese on spot and sales were made at 16 3-4 cents per pound, to 17 cents per pound.

The demand for crop beans was not very good but prices remained unchanged at $2.65 and $2.75 per bushel.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.71⅛.

VICTIM NEAR DEATH.

Sorel Butcher Unconscious Since Attack By Thugs on Nov. 22.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11—(Canadian Press).—Doctors at the Hotel Dieu Hospital here have few hopes for the recovery of Emile Pelletier, master butcher of Sorel, and father of eleven children, who was cruelly beaten and robbed by two men on the highway near Sorel on November 22 last, and who was brought to Montreal last Friday, when his condition was found to be grave. He has been unconscious ever since his admittance to the local institution, and was unable Tuesday to identify Henri Messier, 20, and Herminsgilde Dufault, 23 who are under arrest, charged with attacking him. The two suspects were arraigned at Sorel before Dr. Cheballier, who is a justice of the peace, after which they were brought here and are now lodged in Bordeaux Jail, pending further appearance at Sorel.

The victim of the hold-up is suffering from a fractured skull, sustained when he was struck by a heavy iron bar.

EDISON MAZDA LAMPS are Tipless

This Feature Increases their Ruggedness by Over 25 per cent

THE familiar and bothersome little tip on the end of an electric lamp is no longer necessary. Our engineers have developed some remarkable new equipment which exhausts the air from the neck of the lamp, eliminating the necessity of the tip. This feature increases the ruggedness of Edison Mazda Lamps by over twenty-five per cent.

Edison Mazda Lamps are the product of a Canadian factory associated with the oldest organization in the field of incandescent lighting. By always insisting upon Edison Mazda Lamps, you are purchasing a product that is not only the most efficient, but the most recent development of the lamp industry.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartons. There you will obtain real information about good lighting.

FOUR FOXES DIED.

Emily Township Fox Ranch Depleted—Dunsford News.

DUNSFORD, December 11. — The White Bros., of Grimsby, who purchased a fox farm on the 14th concession of Emily, just three miles from here, met with a serious loss recently when four of their eight foxes died with a mange disease. They paid five thousand dollars for the eight foxes and will doubtless find a heavy loss.

The Dunsford Hockey Club is busy collecting money for new uniforms and at only one point of the collecting they got over forty dollars which is a wonderful encouragement.

Had Ankle broken.

Mrs. William White had a very serious accident on Monday evening, when she was coming out of her own home about five o'clock. After coming out of the door she turned to lock it and slipped on the wet step (which was slanted badly) and broke her ankle in two places. The pain was intense until it was set.

She is a woman of about seventy, and it will be a long steady pull for her to regain the same use of her ankle. Mrs. White is progressing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Mrs. William Kennedy had a somewhat similar accident as Mrs. White. When she was coming in from the stable she slipped and fell, giving her ankle a very bad twist. As yet it has not proved to be serious.

A Presentation.

Friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Middleton gathered at the home of Mr. Marshall Middleton on Wednesday evening last to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Middleton and family before their departure for Omemee.

The following address was read by Mr. Robert Graham:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Middleton and family: We, your neighbors and friends have assembled here this evening prior to the eve of your departure from our midst. We feel that we shall have lost good neighbors and kind friends but hope that those with whom you shall have future relationships may too benefit by your presence and efforts.

As a slight token of our appreciation of your past service among us, and wishes for your future happiness and success, allow us to take this opportunity of presenting you with this small gift:

Two arm chairs, table, jardiniere, stand, which we trust shall be a remembrance of the good will and respect of this community.

(Signed) Thomas Kennedy, W. Jas. McGahey, Robert Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Middleton responded in a few well chosen words. The remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing.

Miss J. M. Laidley visited friends in Lindsay over the week end.

Rev. Mr. Carmichael exchanged pulpits with the Fenelon Falls Methodist church on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Northey of Peterboro spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Morrow.

Mr. P. H. Skitch has installed a new radio which is proving itself splendidly.

On Friday afternoon the Ladies' Missionary meeting was held at the home of T. O. Thurston. The afternoon was pleasantly spent and a dainty luncheon was served which all enjoyed.

WHERE IT REALLY RAINS.

Malabar Wettest Region in the World.

In the Southern Indian province of Malabar the land is drenched with tropical rain all through the Monsoon, and it shares with parts of Assam and Brazil the unenviable distinction of being the wettest region in the world.

A correspondent says that when he was soldiering in Malabar, all operation were virtually at a standstill during the nonsoon period. The rain thundered down, flooding the red roads, swamping the paddy-fields, driving the very cattle into one's bungalow for shelter, and the snakes into one's bathroom through the outlet-hole in the wall. Floors and walls were steaming with damp for weeks on end, and it was necessary to keep over special charcoal appliances such clothes as one did not happen to be wearing.

NEWELL DENIES PROMISING $500

after hearing the proposition, said he would let either Hynes or Newell know later on by telephone. He did not let them know.

At the trial on December 11th, Hynes made the statement with regard to Miss McColl which he later declared and re-asserted yesterday to be false.

On cross-examination by Mr. Gordon, the witness said that he had not admitted in Mr. Gordon's office at the conference held there that the statement he would make at the trial was untrue. He said that the fact that he was keeping company with Newell's sister at the time had nothing to do with his desire to help the accused out of his trouble, and that he would be quite willing to lend money to anyone who was in similar case.

Corroborates Hynes.

George Peake, a youthful citizen who, through fortuitous circumstance, escaped the net into which the other two lads had been drawn, according to their own statements, in an effort to help James Newell, was then called, and substantially corroborated the evidence of Hynes as to the nature of the proposition outlined to him on the occasion of the visit of the three young men to Campbellford. He naively stated that he thought at the time it would not be a good thing to swear such a thing about a lady whom he did not know and so did not telephone the others that he would fall in line with their plans.

Denial By Defence.

Clarice McColl was examined briefly, and Mrs. Annie McIntosh, who is named as defendant in a similar action to come up for consideration later, and who is just recovering from illness, was also put in the box. Mrs. McIntosh is a sister of James Newell. She denied that her brother was present in Mr. Gordons office when the conference took place, denied that a conversation on the Court House steps in her presence took place as reported by Hynes, in which he had said that he might not be able to go through with his evidence and was assured by Newell that he would be all right, denied that Hynes was at her fathers' home in Asphodel on the night of the 20th of November, as asserted by him and also denied that any discussion of the case and the evidence to be presented by Millar and Hynes had ever taken place in her hearing at her father's house.

This denial of any discussion of the case or any angles of it on the night in question was also repeated by John Newell of Asphodel, father of the accused, by Albert Batten of Dummer, a young man who drove the party into Peterboro to the conference at the lawyer's office, by neighbors, in Andrew Batten of Douro, and by Joseph Moore of Dummer, all of whom appeared to have been present on the occasion at the homestead. Mr. Newell, Senior, also denied having at any time discussed the affair in his own home with anyone.

Didn't Offer Money.

James Newell, the accused, blacksmith apprentice at Norwood, denied having been offered financial assistance by Hynes, and having offered him money to swear falsely, said that he had nothing to do with the proposition made to Peake in Campbellford, and was merely made acquainted with the young man on that occasion, and also denied ever having discussed his affair with Clarice McColl or the consequences of it with any member of his family or with Millar and Hynes on the occasion specifically referred to when the party returned from the conference in Peterboro.

Cross-examiantion of these witnesses by Mr. Cunningham and their asservations of lack of discussion of a subject which he pointed out must have been of considerable importance in their lives at the time drew some rather sarcastic comments from the learned counsel for the Crown.

At the conclusion of examination of witnesses by both counsel, when Court was adjourned until ten o'clock this morning, bail was renewed for James Newell, who has been awaiting trial on this charge for about a year, on his own recognizance of $500 and surety of his father and Albert Batten in $2500 apiece.

WARDEN FOWLDS PRAISES GREER

appropriated was not sufficient.

Superintendent Greer has done splendid work this year in improving the counties road and has brought many of them to a higher standard than the provincial highway.

N. Hartt (Murray) eulogized the present system as administered by Mr. Greer. There is no comparison between the old isolated improvements and the present co-ordinated system. Compared with other counties, the united counties have done much more with the money.

Warden Fowlds added his thanks to Superintendent Greer for his desirable work.

A mistake was made last year in not increasing the grant for county road purposes. Up to the present the system has been paid for by direct taxation, but the Warden feels that, to take care of this and of the provincial permanent roads, debentures should be used. It is not right that this generation should build all of the permanent roads through direct taxation, which should still be used for maintenance costs.

Change in System.

The classification of roads will be changed in the near future, county provincial and county roads being joined, the Warden predicted. Then, instead of 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. the flat rate of 50 per cent. will be granted, it is expected. More discretion will be given the superintendents in building roads.

The grant will also be increased on township roads from 20 to 30 per cent. if they abolish statute labor and appoint a qualified superintendent approved by the government. The townships will then take over roads formerly designated as county roads.

Referring to bridges linking county road systems on which the county pays all expenses, the Warden said these should be adopted so that the government grant will be received.

School Committee.

The school committee report presented by Chairman H. H. Holdaway, was adopted without amendment.

Assume a Bridge.

G. S. Vanvolkenburg (Seymour) secured first reading of a by-law to assume a bridge over the Trent river at Campbellford as a county bridge.

Children's Aid Society.

Dr. Daley, Children's Aid inspector, said that in the 2 1-2 years since the Unmarried Parents Act came into force he has collected $14,000 or $15,000 from delinquent fathers and this has relieved the Counties Council considerably. He will ask the next Council in January for an increase of $50 a month in the grant.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feel sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

NEW YORK GLIMPSES

First Chinese Restaurant To Go Into Bankruptcy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—For the first time in this country a Chinese restaurant, that is, one for which Chinese are wholly responsible, has gone into bankruptcy.

It is the Bamboo Gardens, a basement chop suey cafe in the Broadway bright light district.

This Chinese venture might not have gone on the rocks if its celestial backers hadn't aped American methods. The restaurant accommodates 1,000 diners, and $88,000 was spent on decorating it when it opened recently.

The first move made by the receiver was to greatly reduce the number of employes, although many of the Chinese waiters were investors in the venture.

As a cub reporter I used to daydream of the time when I should be eye-witness to a murder or a bank robbery and run to a telephone to give my paper an eight-column scoop on the opposition. Well, last night as I was walking down Eighth avenue, two West Indians started a fight a few feet in front of me. One was pushed through a plate glass window and the falling glass cut his jugular vein and he bled to death. In New York that story was hardly worth telephoning to a paper. And yet I believe I could write a fairly interesting column about the fight.

The head waiter in a midnight club asked his guests to keep their bottles off the tables the other night, as he had been tipped that a prohibition raid would be made that night. One guest pulled out a white opaque nursing bottle and toasts were drunk from the nipple.

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS?

If It Does You Should Take Burdock Blood Bitters

Mr. M. P. Eldrige, Beaver Harbor, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for some time, and everything I ate seemed to distress me I tried many different medicines, but without any results. Finally I was advised to try B.B.B., and after having taken several bottles I was completely relieved of my trouble. I can now eat anything I wish, thanks to B.B.B."

Burdock Blood Bitters puts the stomach into perfect shape by promoting proper digestion; and during the past 46 years it has been on the market has made a reputation, second to none, for relieving all stomach troubles.

BUTTER IN JELLY.

Jelly is not so apt to boil over if you put butter around the edge of the kettle in which it is cooked.

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

"But even you, O Great Dragon," implored Wong K'ai, "cannot fight against miracles! Look!"—pointing from the window—"ever more warriors arise from the ground! Come! There is still time to . . ."

"No!"

"Please, please, O Great Dragon!"

And when at last the Prince decided to take Wong K'ai's advice it was too late. Already the Moslems had overrun the palace grounds, cleaving their way through the serried ranks of the Manchu shock troops who resisted bravely. But there was no hope for the latter. Most of the Mongol and Tartar guards stationed in the palace—only a few, really the Prince's body servants, remained behind—reinforced the Manchus. But foot by foot, second by second, the forest of spears fell before the forest of Moslem swords, Ahmed always in the van, spurring his horse into the thick of the fight, his sabre whirling like a flail.

The Mongol Prince watched from the window. He shrugged his shoulders. He turned to his ancestral tablets. He kowtowed deeply:

"Accept, O spirit of my ancestors," he said solemnly, "mine own spirit. To-day I leap the Dragon Gate. I accept defeat. Yet"—and his voice rose proudly—"I know that others of my race will come after me, that again and again the world will quail and fall before the Mongol scourge!"

Calmly, unhurriedly, he bared his neck and knelt on the ground.

"Wong K'ai," he went on, "it is now your elegant and respectable duty to cut off my head!"

"No, no, O Great Dragon!"

"I command it!"

Wong K'ai sighed.

"Listen is obey!" he murmured.

Already he had unsheathed his curved sword and was about to bring it down with a full swing, when the door opened and, followed by half a dozen guards, Fount-in-th-Forest rushed in, shouting excitedly:

"Oh—listen—listen! There is a way! You can escape— The magic flying carpet!"

"By the Buddha!" exclaimed Cham Sheng. "You are right!" He rose. He turned to the guards. "Bring me the magic rug!" And to Wong K'ai: "I shall take Zobeid with me. Together she and I will fly away to the far North, to Mongolia, my own country, where not even these miraculous warriors will dare follow!"

What was ultimately destined to save Zobeid was the fact that this was a palace of the Orient, a Moslem house where there is no privacy for laughter nor for grief, not even for despair, where there is a peep-hole in every wall and door and curtain and ceiling, where in every room there are invisible, watching eyes and invisible listening ears. So, had not the steely clank of the battle outside drowned all other sounds, the Prince might have heard a rustle of silken garments and the noise of bare feet pattering away as Zemzem, who had overheard the plot from an adjoining alcove, ran to her mistress and told her.

The latter was alone in her apartment. For a few seconds earlier, looking from the window and seeing their comrades go down before the Moslem scimitars, the soldiers detailed to watch her had joined their countrymen in their last stand.

"Come!" cried Zemzem. "Down the staircase and through the back door into the garden—I know the way—follow me, Heaven-Born!"

She was out of the room and down the stairs. Zobeid was a few feet behind her. Zemzem had already reached the corner of the lower staircase when from the opposite direction came Cham Sheng with Wong K'ai and the Mongols who carried the magic carpet. They stepped directly between Zobeid and Zemzem. The latter was on the point of retracing her steps, of helping her mistress with whatever strength she had—and there was more than one young srab soldier and servant about the palace who, romantically inclined, could tell tales about Zemzem's scratching, clawing finger-nails—when Zobeid motioned to her to continue on her way to the garden.

Zemzem understood the silent message. A battle-axe whizzed past her head, missed her by less than an inch, buried itself in a wall, the heavy palmwood handle jerking crazily from side to side like an ill-regulated pendulum. By this time she had ducked, had run down the remaining flight of stairs and through the back door into the garden.

She made straight for the crimson, clanking turmoil that was coiling everywhere, straight for the thick of the fight where the Mongols were desperately trying to stem the Arab attack, with the wicked whine of spears cutting through the air, with dagger points nosing for the chinks in body armor, and shield crashing against shield in charge and parry. She raised her voice high above the savage, gutteral war cries and the shrieks of the dying as swords and lances struck home:

"Ahmed! O Ahmed! Thief of Bagdad!"

She saw him, fighting on foot now. She tried to slip through the forest of forged iron, to reach his side.

Upstairs, Zobeid was cornered. She stood erect and proud. The Prince of the Mongols bowed ironically, spoke ironically:

"It is—alas!—necessary that you accompany me without the proper marriage ceremonies. They shall be performed as soon as we arrive in my country." He stepped on the rug and extended a slim, yellow hand: "Be pleased to join me, Zobeid!"

"No!" she exclaimed. "No!"

"Ah!" he smiled, "can it be, indeed, that you do not love me?"

"I hate you?"

"Hate, too, spices the sauce of passion. Come!" His voice grew stern, and as she receded a step: "It is useless to resist, Crusher of Hearts. For consider the ancient proverb: 'On the egg combating with the stone, the yolk came out.'"

"No, no, no!" she cried again.

"I regret," he rejoined, "that I shall have to use force."

He gave an order to the Mongol soldiers. Zobeid resisted. But she was helpless. They lifted her on the rug. They held her there. Already the Prince had spoken to the rug: "O magic flying carpet, carry us to . . ." when suddenly his words were cut off in mid-air.

For there came a shrill, high, triumphant war cry:

"Allah akbar! Allah akbar!" and, the next moment, invisible hands came out of the nowhere; invisible hands sent the Mongol soldiers spinning in all directions; invisible hands struck Cham Sheng square between the eyes; invisible hands picked up the Princess Zobeid and carried her away, out of the room, up the staircase; while invisible lips gave again the shrill, mocking war cry:

"Allah akbar! Allah akbar!"

Invisible hands and lips. The hands and lips of Ahmed, the Thief of Bagdad.

For a minute earlier, down in the garden, Zemzem had reached his side through the torrid, clanking forest of weapons. From beneath the dropping, swishing, crimson blades she had cried out to him, and it had not needed more than her first words: "Zobeid—the flying carpet—hurry—oh hurry!" to make him understand what was happening.

TRIAL MARRIAGE LAW SHOULD BE ENACTED

Marriages in Which There Are No Children After Two Years Should Be Declared Null.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 11.—(United Press).—Marriages in which there are no children after two years should be declared null and void, Dr. A. S. Pinto, Omaha City Health Commissioner, said Wednesday in a speech discussing Nebraska's marriage law, which provides for ten days' notice before a license is issued. "I believe a two-year trial marriage law should be enacted," Dr. Pinto said.

"If there are no children at the expiration of that time, the union should be terminated so that either party could wed again.

"We must wake up to the fact that foreigners are about the only ones having children in the United States."

U. S. Entitled To Be Paid Under a Separate Treaty

Will Not Permit Allies to Foreclose on All German Assets.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press). — The United States Government is entitled to be paid under a separate treaty of peace with Germany just as the Allied Governments are entitled to receive payments under the Treaty of Versailles.

This contention has been carefully explained in European capitals and the State Department is confident of its soundness both in law and equity.

Officials of the Department yesterday were analysing with great care the British attitude as outlined by Foreign Secretary Chamberlain. A reply will go forward promptly.

Indications are that the United States reply will make it clear that the U. S. has no disposition to be unreasonable or unduly exacting. It also will point out quite emphatically that the United States does not propose to permit the Allies to foreclose on all German assets and then blandly inform the United States they must look elsewhere for payment.

"Now Feeling Fine and Able to do my own work"

Mrs. Walter Grieves, Coe Hill, Ont., writes:

"I was in such a weakened, run-down condition that I could not take care of my household duties. I was unable to sleep at night, and the doctor told me I was anaemic. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and to-day I am feeling fine and able to do all my own work.

"My little girl had eczema, and different remedies took no effect whatever. We got a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and that one box relieved her."

NEW LAMP BURN 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government, and 35 leading universities, and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

NEWS OF BURNBRAE.

Cheese Factory Patrons Report a Successful Year.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 10.—Rev. Mr. McKenzie preached the last of his series of sermons on the decalogue on Sabbath last. He dealt with the eighth, ninth and tenth commandments. This series of addresses have been greatly enjoyed by those who were fortunate enough to hear them. Mr. McKenzie has applied the commandments to practical, modern life and has shown that they are of as much importance today as when first handed down to the people of God on tables of stone.

On Sunday evening the minister addressed a meeting held in the interests of the W.M.S. Both services were well attended.

Annual Meeting.

The Burnbrae Ladies Aid held their annual meeting on Thursday last in the basement of the church. The officers of the preceding year were all re-elected with Mrs. Wm. Rannie as president.

The patrons of Brae Cheese and Butter Co. held their annual meeting in the factory on Saturday, December 6th at 1.30 p.m. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. Joss and Cowan of the United Dairymens' Co-operative Ltd., also by Mr. Jas. Irwin, official cheese grader for the district, Mr. Nicholl, manager of Campbellford branch, Bank of Montreal, and representatives of the Trenton Creamery.

The company has had a fairly successful year, having a total output of 97,274 pounds of cheese, which sold at an average price of 16.04 cents per pound. The average price per pound butterfat was 38.65 and a small balance remains to be paid. The officers for ensuing year are: President, Mr. Malcolm Totton; Secretary, E. L. Anderson; Directors Messrs. Percy Oddie, Ed. Wilson, Geo. Anderson, Bogart Lynn and Bert Hay.

The directors have succeeded in hiring Mr. Leslie Shillinglaw as maker for the 1925 season.

The annual meeting of the Prince of Wales Cheese and Butter Co. was also held on Saturday last. This is one of the largest factories in the vicinity and is owned by Mr. John Murray who is chief dairy instructor for the district. The factory was operated for the greater part of the season by Mr. David Wallace of Menie. The total output of cheese amounted to 120,249 pounds at an average price of 16.22 cents per pound. The average price per pound butterfat being 41.21 cents.

This factory achieved the distinction of not having a second-grade cheese during the past season. The past president, Mr. Wm. Locke, was unable to take office again owing to residence in Toronto. After considerable persuasion, Mr. Wm. Clark, the secretary, agreed to accept both offices. The directors for 1925 are Messrs. W. C. Wallace, E. C. Pollack and Jesse Locke.

Monday's heavy rain was very welcome in this vicinity as a water shortage was almost sure should winter set in without rain.

COUNCILLORS' CUES DO NOT ACT RIGHT

Sessions of Counties Council Tedium Lessened By Friendly Game.

COBOURG, Dec. 11. — Excellent though the United Counties' Council may be in deliberation on matters affecting the weal of the district it administers, the members show no great aptitudes for the lighter things of life—pool for instance.

Councillors Davidson, Dorie and McCubbin, endeavoring to beguile a slack hour, potted the balls around the table in the Dunham hotel. And "potted around the table" is used advisedly. The ivories seemed to have difficulty in finding the pockets.

Davidson was the tutor in this game that lasted until a late hour last night and resumed after breakfast. He was a master of strategy. "Kiss off the 8 and get the 15" he would tell John McCubbin of Percy and John would gallantly respond, sometimes. Most of the time he missed every ball on the table.

And the Campbellford man himself was not always able to do just what he wanted to do.

Pool strategy, however, is good recreation after the strenuous sessions wrestling with judicial orders to provide better ventilation in stuffy court rooms.

OBITUARY.

EZRA McFADDEN.

APSLEY, December 10. — The death occurred on Saturday morning in Burleigh Township, of Ezra McFadden, a well known and respected pioneer of this district, in the 78th year of his age. Mr. McFadden had been ailing for some months and his death was not unexpected. He was born in Lower Canada and settled here with his parents nearly sixty years ago. With the exception of a short sojourn near Young's Point he has lived on the Burleigh Road ever since. He was considered one of the best river drivers in the district, an occupation which he followed for a great many years. He leaves behind him besides his wife, four sons and three daughters: John and Percy of Lakefield; Roland in Peterboro; Mrs. Harvey Ellis, of Havelock, and Elgin, Elzina and Alice at home; one brother, William, in Chatham, and Cyrus McFadden, a nephew, at Burleigh.

The deceased was a member of the Orange Order here, members of which attended the funeral service which was held on Monday in St. George's church, conducted by the Rev. C. A. G. Spence, who was assisted at the graveside by the Rev. J. Ogden.

FRANCE SHOULD PAY TO BRITAIN MONEY SHE OWES

Churchill Says Britain's Debtors in Europe Should Pay Her As Well As U.S.

U. S. ANGERED.

Press and Populace Pleased With Chancellor of the Exchequer's Speech.

LONDON, December 11.—Winston Churchill's declaration yesterday in the first speech in the House of Commons as Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the government considers it essential that any payments made by Great Britain's debtors in Europe to the United States, should be accompanied simultaneously by proportional payments to this country, pleases the press and the populace immensely without regard to party or size of pocket book.

Every morning newspaper displays an account of his speech more prominently than anything else in the day's news relegating to second place one of the worst fogs in years which has kept London dark and dismal for more than 38 hours and which this morning was still going strong.

The Chancellor did not mention a debtor nation by name but almost every newspaper speaks of France, whose emissaries have been discussing the debt subject in Washington. The press with a significant solidity takes the position that if France begins paying her debt to the United States, it is only fair that she should at the same time start settling with Great Britain.

The British position in the popular mind may be summarized as follows:

Great Britain borrowed, roughly, one billion pounds and lent twice as much to her allies. She is paying her own debt but is receiving nothing from her debtors. If she can collect from her allies and Germany together, enough to meet the United States' demands upon the public purse she will be satisfied and will relieve her debtors of the remainder of their obligations to her. It is pointed out that Great Britain borrowed not for herself but because her allies were borrowing from her.

"It is obvious," says the Morning Post," that we cannot bear all the sacrifice, despite the somewhat barren glory which we reaped for our generosity. At the same time as Mr. Churchill more than hinted this country does not want to pursue any niggardly policy towards France. It seems then that the next step lies with the United States."

YANKS AROUSED.

WASHINGTON, December 11. — Uneasiness is aroused in official circles here by statements attributed to Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, that his government would insist on proportionate payments to it on occasion of the common creditor making payments to the United States. The treasury was silent on Churchill's remarks but it gave evidence of surprise at the turn taken in events because of the likelihood that such a declaration might cause delay in a prospective settlement with France. Meetings between Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Jusserand with respect to the French debt have been wholly informal thus far, and nothing approaching definite terms has been discussed but even in that state it was indicated, an expression from the British of such a character could mean only that France would pause to consider.

CHRISTMAS CANDY

FRUIT AND NUT BARS.

Two cups stoned prunes, 1 cup peanut butter, 1-2 teaspoon salt, sugar.

About 1 pound of prunes should be well washed and covered with cold water. Let stand over night. Remove stones and put meat through food chopper. Add salt and peanut butter and mix thoroughly. Pack in a square pan and let stand several hours. Cut in tiny bars and roll in sugar.

This is a harmless confection to keep on hand for small children. It forms a welcome contrast with too much candy during the holidays as well.

MORE EVIDENCE HOME BANK CASE

Clifford Gladman Received $40.000 on an $800,-000 Sale.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Further evidence concerning the British Columbia timber limits of the Home Bank was taken to-day at the trial of R. P. Gough, director of the defunct bank, by Clifford Gladman, who was sent west in 1918 to sell the limits at the suggestion of Mr. Gough.

Gladman was to receive $250 a month and five per cent. commission on the sales. Col. Mason, general manager, however, refused the offers Gladman was able to get. When an effort to effect the sale failed, the Western Canada Pulp and Paper Co. was organized to take up the Frost holdings on which the bank had made heavy loans. The Port McNeill tract was sold to the Western Canada Co. for $800,000, and from this sale the witness got $40,000 commission. He denied the suggestion that he had split the commission with anyone.

Giving effect to the preliminary objection raised by D. L. McCarthy, K.C., on behalf of the Crown, Mr. Justice Wright has handed out judgment refusing application by certain directors of the Home Bank for further particulars of the charges preferred against them under the conspiracy count.

PERJURY CASE COUNTY COURT

Morning Session Occupied With Addresses to the Jury.

This morning's session at the County Court was taken up with addresses to the jury by G. N. Gordon, K.C., acting for the defence, and A. B. Cunningham, K.C., of Kingston, acting as Crown prosecutor, in the case of Rex vs. James Newell, an action brought against the accused for subornation of perjury, in which it is alleged that Newell counselled two witnesses, Albert Hynes and William Millar, to give false evidence in his behalf in a case in which he was charged with seduction, under promise of marriage, of Clarice McColl of Norwood. Newell's trial, at which the two witnesses did swear falsely, resulted in disagreement by the jury, and came up for a second hearing, without jury, before Judge Ward, when he was acquitted. Later, the two witnesses were accused and pleaded guilty to having given false testimony at the first trial, and were each sentenced to serve two years in the Reformatory at Mimico.

The address of His Honor Judge Huycke was also delivered before the jury retired, and adjournment was made until two o'clock this afternoon.

G. N. Gordon, in his address, pointed out that testimony of a man convicted of perjury, such as was given by Albert Hynes, must be corroborated by other witnesses. He also described Hynes' willingness to do anything possible to aid the Newell family or James Newell, on account of his desire to stand in well with them and with Newell's sister, with whom he was keeping company, and cited the evidence of independent witnesses brought by him who refuted the testimony of the two young men brought from the Reformatory to testify in this case.

Mr. Cunningham ended an address in which he impressed on the jury the necessity of using their own common sense in the matter, by telling them that the gist of an arrival at a decision lay in weighing the respective falsity or truth of the evidence offered by Hynes and Peake, or in deciding whether they considered the charge a trumped-one against the prisoner.

His Honor, reviewing the facts of the case and giving a careful definition of the charge and its meaning, said that the law required corroboration of evidence in a case of this nature, and, in his opinion, the testimony of George Peake furnished such corroboration. He said "It would be a most abominable condition of affairs if anyone who wished to do so could go about swearing away the life of a man or the character of a woman, and if suborners or counsellors of such actions were allowed to go free." Impressing on the jurymen the necessity of allowing every reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt, saying that evidence of accomplices must be taken with a grain of salt, and referring to their notice the fact that Newell may have believed the evidence offered by Hynes in his behalf to be true, he said that a unanimous verdict was required in a case of this nature, and the jury retired.

His Honor prefaced his address to the jury with a remark which he said he thought should be made, in justice to the counsel for the accused, Mr. G. N. Gordon, that Mr. Gordon, when taking the case, had no knowledge of the falsity of the evidence which afterwards proved to be untrue.

TAKE CHARGE HERE.

E. C. Gartner Will Manage Local Branch of Coca-Cola Company.

Mr. E. C. Gartner, formerly of Nanimo, B. C., where he had charge of the Coca Cola Company branch, has recently come to Peterboro from Toronto, and will in future be in charge of the Peterboro branch of the same company here.

During the past year the Canadian business of the Coca Cola Company has been organized into a straight Canadian company, and a number of important changes are being put into effect by the new organization.

The total investment of the company in Canada is greater than in the United States, due to the fact that in Canada the company operates both a syrup company and bottling plants, while in the United States they operate a syrup company only.

Mrs. Gartner will reach Peterboro shortly and both she and Mr. Gartner will be made welcome as new citizens to Peterboro.

HANGMAN ELLIS QUOTES A LOWER TARIFF FOR HANGING CONDEMNED MAN IN THE WEST

WINNIPEG, December 11. — An application for the "job" of hanging Harry Tatarnuik convicted recently of killing his aunt, and condemned to die in February next, has been made by Arthur Ellis, "official hangman," to Sheriff Colin Inkster, and it is featured by a sharp reduction in fees.

For similar "jobs" Ellis has been paid $250, but he is quoted as naming "the prevailing price" at $100 and expenses.

No explanation for the reduction is given but a local paper suggests "fear of competition in trade" may have brought about a lower tariff.

RAILWAY LABOR WAR THREATENED

Chief of the National Union Places Pistol at Head of Government.

LONDON, Dec. 11.— (United News)—What may be the beginning of a great railway labor war in England or a mere prelude to a campaign of annoyance designed to plague the Conservative Government, is seen in the formal demand of J. H. Thomas, chief of the National Union of Railwaymen, for wage increases totalling $150,000,000.

Thomas also made formal demands for a pension system that would retire sixty year old railroaders, the abolition of casual labor and the drastic reduction of overtime.

Anti-Labor sources say Thomas has "placed a pistol at the head of the new government," if he has done so, Thomas can appreciate both sides of the drama. Until the general election last month, Thomas was His Majesty's chief minister for the Colonies and one of the most able men in the Socialist Cabinet.

Railway Executives characterize Thomas demands as outrageous. It is generally believed that they will be refused. Then it will be seen whether Thomas and his union are merely snipping at Baldwin or looking for real trouble.

TRUCK OWNERS TO PAY MORE FOR ROAD UPKEEP

At Present Amount Paid By Truck Owners For Road Construction is Small.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Motor truck owners were plainly told by Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Works, at a dinner last night that the Government expected from them much larger contributions towards highway maintenance than from average motorist. He stated that at the present time the amount paid by truck owners for road construction was comparatively small—scarcely 1 per cent. of the cost of operation— and intimated that it was the government's intention to increase this contribution.

The most equitable way of making users of highways contribute to their upkeep was gasoline tax and as mileage of motor trucks was much greater than that of the average motor car and gasoline consumption larger, truck owners would pay accordingly, he said.

BOAT STILL STRANDED.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press). — The Government steamer Grenville is still ashore near Byng Inlet, according to advices received by the Department of Marine today.

PARIS, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press).—Exhaustive tests by artillery laboratories at Vincennes are said to have fully justified claims made for new motor fuel extracted de-benzolized coal tar by process invented by M. Makhonine, Russian engineer.

When used in heavy trucks and tractors, according to Le Matin it developed much greater power than gasoline and gave slightly higher mileage to gallons. Its cost is said to be but one tenth that of gasoline.

Black, for the visiting committee, recorded relief afforded one hundred and fifty families during the year and nearly three hundred visits made. The treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Patterson, reported a total of $800 dispersed in relief work. In her report, the secretary, Mrs. W. Hughes, recorded a sum of $400 realized by last week's bazaar. Mrs. A. Thorndyke and her sewing committee made a great quantity of clothing during the year, Mrs. R. Bugg reported on attendance at the meetings of the Local Council of Women, and Mrs. T. A. Allerton for the kitchen committee.

In her address, the president, Mrs. R. J. Devey, spoke of the satisfactory period, both financially and from the point of view of membership, just finished, and thanked the ladies heartily for their support and co-operation.

The meeting which was attended by about forty members of the Auxiliary, opened with prayer for absent ones, and icluded later a feeling reference of regret at the passing of a member during the year, Mrs. Fred Stanley.

A pleasing feature of the session which followed the serving of an excellent supper by Mrs. A. Clark and her committee was the presentation to Mrs. Devey of a pretty gold pin, which was pinned on by Mrs. A. E. Tamblin, Mrs. Devey made a suitable acknowledgement of the gift.

MR. D. ZELINKA

Stomach Bloated With Gas Was His Worry

Mr. D. Zelinka of 15 East 26th Street, N. Y., writes: "I want you to know that no day passed for months and months that did not find my stomach bloated with gas and shooting pains darting through my stomach. I felt hungry at times, but as soon as I started eating, food nauseated me and I became bilious. My tongue was coated, had bad taste and breath was offensive. I never thought this could all be from my liver, but my liver it must have been, for the very first day after taking your wonderful Carter's Little Liver Pills I felt like a new person. The small dose makes them easy to take, too."

The Passing of Felix Arbour

Things were different forty years ago. When Felix Arbour, a stalwart young French Canadian of five and twenty, began work as a telephone lineman at Ottawa in 1885, John A. was the triumphant leader of the Government, Edward Blake marshalled the forces of the Liberals, and young Wilfrid Laurier, was already manifesting that ability as a parliamentarian that was to make him inevitable as Blake's Successor. As Felix Arbour went about his work in the vicinity of the old buildings on Parliament Hill, he often got a friendly nod and a cheery "Good morning" from the great men of that day. They envied his sturdy young frame and his smiling, kindly face.

But now it is all different. Ottawa has grown to be a big City, young men are in the seats of the mighty and Felix Arbour feels that his day is done.

His comrades of the Bell Telephone construction forces met the other day to bid him farewell ere he retired to enjoy a well earned rest. Following the presentation of an address accompanied by an arm chair and smoking set, Felix made a parting speech that promises to become a classic among telephone plant men. He said:—

"I am in good health and I thank God Almighty for that. I always received just treatment from my bosses. If I did wrong, they told me; and if I did well, they did not forget to praise me. I thank everybody for the help they gave me in my work. We did not always agree, and had arguments; but we tried to help one another, and it was all for the Company. Work in the Company's interest and you will be working in your own interest. Every time I went up a pole, I said to myself, "Felix, be careful; if you fall off you may break an arm or a leg or maybe your neck." Although I am not now working for the Company, I want you all to know me on the street; and as I go along I will keep my eyes on the wires and cables and if I see anything that will cause trouble or make an accident I will report it."

Where shall we go this evening?

FREQUENTLY you decide to spend the evening in town with some friend. The first part is easy. Dinner at a pleasant restaurant. But afterwards . . . What will you do to carry on this business of having a good time?

Easy! Three cents. An evening paper. A glance at the advertisements. Suggestion—agreement, and you're off!

You didn't go around to the different theatres, to be driven to an unsatisfactory choice by fatigue and time. If it's worth while to consult the advertisements about amusements, how much worth while must it be when it comes to the spending of the household money.

Read the advertisements. They place before you the full choice of the trustworthy goods in the market. They describe advantages, and give you full information before you have to stir out of your chair. Pursue for every article you buy the method you use when it comes to amusements.

The way to be sure of what you buy is to buy advertised goods.

Reading advertisements is an education in better buying

SEAMY SIDE OF LIFE IN COURT

Curious Tales Told to Magistrate on Monday Parade

"MURDER" CASE

Drunk, Who Took His Own Cough Drops, Fined

"Week-end quarrels," remarked the experienced sergeant at Thames Police Court when the "Black Monday" parade of aggrieved women lined up with requests for summonses.

But all the women in the queue were interested in the application of a husband who claimed protection for his wife. "She was bound over to keep the peace for six months," he said, "and now all the neighbors call her jailbird and she is frightened to go out. They are driving her mad."

The Clerk: How many of them?—Hundreds!

The Clerk: Bring them down to dozens.

The Sergeant: I'll find out the two worst and inquire into it.

"Now what do you think of that?" inquired a woman with a baby to a woman with a black eye. "Sending her husband, she is. She don't half know something she does!"

The absent wife was not popular. She had offended against the code. Every woman with a grievance in and around Mile End Road prides herself on being able to express herself fluently and at considerable length, and the protesting husband was regarded as a blackleg butting into the guarded rites of wronged wives.

"This one isn't satisfied," said the sergeant as a determined brunette entered the box. "She got off on Saturday on a summons; now she and her mother want a cross-summons against a neighbor." "She was throwing stones and dust at mother," complained the applicant.

"She's made all that up since she saw me," said the sergeant, and told the magistrate he would inquire into it.

Thrusting her way to the witness-box, the next woman began: "I'm his second wife, and he's threatened to knock my eye out five years. And on Saturday he took the picture down from the wall. I think I had better have a separation."

Mr. Disney: I think you had better step down. Next.

"Next" was a plump woman with a sense of the dramatic. "Two children were fighting," she stated, and paused for effect. "One was a boy, the other was a girl. I said, "Little boy, don't you know it is wrong to hit a little girl?' He stopped fighting and swore at me. I said I would smack him, and he shouted for his mother. She came and called me hysterical language. Then the father came, and the daughter, and the son-in-law, and I advised them to smack the child. With that they——"

Mr. Disney: "Rejected the advice! Next."

"This one," exclaimed the sergeant proudly, "wants a summons against the party behind her, who wants a summons against the first party's mother for assault."

"She's been carrying on with my husband," declared the first party. "She came to my house on Saturday and struck me on my doorstep."

"Her husband owes me money," put in party number two. "I went to collect it, and she mentioned my baby, so I hit her. And it isn't her husband's baby, anyhow."

First Party, plaintively: "She's just said she would hit me again."

Mr. Disney: If she hits you again let me know.

A middle-aged woman, side-stepping the sergeant, startled the court by remarking, "He's always murdering me."

The Clerk (solicitously): When did he murder you last?

The Victim: He's been murdering me off and on for the last eight years.

The Clerk: Very unpleasant. Is he in work?

The Victim: No; he don't do no work. He's always drunk. I'm being starved and murdered.

The "corpse" was granted a summons.

"I ast liven with him on Oaks Day," said another injured wife.

"Oaks Day?" queried Mr. Disney.

"Ums, Derby week," explained the sergeant.

"Ladies' Day," murmured the clerk.

Mr. Disney: Oh, a horse race.

Voice from the rear of the court (reminiscently): Straitlace, 100 to 30.

"This next one has been sent on to us from Old-street Police Court," said sergeant deeply aggrieved. "She wants a summons for assault too."

"Where did it happen?" asked Mr. Disney.

"On a tramway-car near Stepney Green Station, Mile End Road," said the applicant. "A bloke come on the car, see? Then he punched me in the face, see? The conductor wouldn't stop, see?

"That's Old-street," declared the sergeant. "The other side of the street is our district."

The Applicant: I've been to Old-street this morning, see? And they told me to come here, see? And here I am, see?

Mr. Disney: Better let her have a summons.

The Sergeant: Right, sir. (Triumphantly): And that's the lot!

The applicants having departed, it was the turn of the prisoners, the most interesting of whom was John Quick, an alert, middle-aged man possessing a confident air and exactly eight shillings in money.

Pleading not guilty to the charge of having been drunk and disorderly in Chrisp street, Poplar, on Saturday, he said: "I was selling cough drops when the policeman took me to the station. The doctor said I was drunk. I don't agree. Why was I more drunk than anybody else?"

The constable in the case, bewildered by the question, replied, "You reeled and smelt of drink."

"The odor was not drink," declared Quick. "I take my own cough drops. In reference to the reeling part I walked the line and held up one leg."

The Clerk: Did he smell of cough drops or of drink?

The Constable (bluntly): He smelt of beer.

The Sergeant: He's been here before, and he owes 7s. 6d. on the last fine.

"Quite right, and here it is," said Quick, taking three half-crowns from his pocket. "I give you this, and that leaves me with (diving again into his pocket and displaying six coppers) exactly sixpence."

"We will take the 7s. 6d. and a further 10s. or seven days," said Mr. Disney.

"Cough drops!" murmured the sergeant.

Marriage Proposals Among Letters In Dead Postie's House

More than a thousand letters, Christmas cards, and valentines have been found under a bed in the house in Belfast, formerly occupied by Thomas Keady, postman, who died two years ago.

The letters included business communications and even proposals of marriage. Some were posted ten years ago, and many of the people to whom they were addressed are dead.

The police took the letters to the post office, where those for persons still alive were sorted out for delivery. The remainder were burned.

MORMON ADONIS CHIEF IN BRITAIN

Sent from Salt Lake City to Win More Converts

MANY HELPERS

Birmingham and Newcastle are Focal Points of New Attack

A dark and handsome young man of twenty-three, with wavy hair and large and appealing eyes, has been appointed head of the Mormon Church at Tottenham.

He is President E. C. Willey, late of Salt Lake City; and the one purpose of his presence in London is to gain more converts to the faith of the Mormon, the spread of which in England has already caused considerable disquiet, especially in Newcastle and Birmingham.

This new Adonis of Tottenham has come on the tide of another Mormon influx of youth and beauty from Salt Lake City, to relieve the patriarchs hitherto at the helm of the London branch. Another arrival is Dr. James E. Talmage, also of Utah, to take the place of President McKoy at the Mormon headquarters in Liverpool.

Dr. Talmage is a Berkshire man, converted to Mormonism at an early age. Both his father and grandfather came under the spell of Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, and the exponent of polygamy.

"We have made a great many changes recently, and many young men have been appointed heads of sub-divisions in England," said the new and youthful president to a press representative. "We are full of hope for the future of Mormons in London. Our meetings inside and outdoors are crowded; and we still canvas personally from house to house."

President Willey is not alone in his work of conversion. He is assisted by fourteen other young missionaries almost as handsome and as virile as himself.

"Of course, we attract women to the faith," said the young president blushingly, "but women always abound and outnumber the men in most churches. We convert the men as well as the women.

"It is our faith that gives us impetus and inspiration to continue our work here. And we shall prevail, in spite of our unpopularity."

NORFOLK ESTATE SUBJECT OF CLAIM

Camberwell Bottle Merchant Seeks Title to Jermy Property

A Camberwell bottle merchant, Charles Jermy Larner, has decided to take active steps to claim the Jermy estate in Norfolk, which is now said to be worth £7,000,000.

"The manor house of the estate, Stanfield Hall," said Mr. Larner, "was at one time occupied by the ill-fated Amy Robsart, who was supposed to Cumnor Hall by the Earl of Leicester.

"The house has been the scene of many dramas. In 1838 a transference of interests in the estate led to one John Larner marching up to the hall with eighty or ninety supporters from surrounding villages. The rioters held the house for a day, and had finally to be dispersed by military.

"A few years later a man named Rush, who was a friend of Larner, and who owed the Jermy of the day thousands of pounds, walked into the hall and shot Jermy and his son dead."

Mr. Larner bases his claims on the rights of John Larner, from whom he is descended. "I have reason," he said, "to be very sanguine that I shall be able to clear up many points, in which case I shall seriously consider the question of litigation."

TRAMP'S DREAM OF PARADISE IS CAR

A tramp wandering along a road near Langho, Blackburn, dreaming of nothing better than old boots or bread and cheese, found a motor car.

The mudguards were damaged, but all the lights were burning, and nobody was in attendance. The car lay at an angle in a ditch.

The possession of a car was too much for the tramp. He informed the police, who have inquired all over the district without result.

The owner has not come forward. The problem that now obsesses the tramp is—what shall he do with the car if it comes into his possession after three months through no owner being found?

ONE-ROOM DWELLERS.

Mr. Clarke Hall, the magistrate at Old street police court, remarked in an ejectment case. "As things are in this district it is not unusual for a number of people to occupy one room. If I cleared out the people living in one room I should clear out half the inhabitants of Bethnal Green."

WOMEN AT THE BAR.

Seven women law students are to be called to the English Bar shortly. These will bring the number of women barristers to 41.

NIMBLE BURGLAR ACTIVE IN LONDON

Daring Coup Carried Out Under Nose of Police

CLIMBS LIKE CAT

Fourteen Servants on Floor of One Place That Was Looted

The cat burglar is becoming a terror to London and the countryside.

His activities are causing acute anxiety alike to Scotland Yard and the district police.

Householders, too, are asking not only why a summary stop is not put to him, but also why higher and more experienced officials are not called in earlier to investigate his trail.

Athletic thieves made a thousand pound haul from a London residence, a bare few yards from Kensington Palace, and at Ashtead, Surrey, possibly by the same acrobatic culprits dashing across the country in motor-cars, a large residence was robbed of valuables to it similar amount.

The West End coup was carried out right under the noses of the police constables and the night watchmen deputed to watch the neighborhood of Kensington Palace Gardens early yesterday morning.

The cat burglar is presumed to have hidden in Kensington Gardens until the occupants of 12a, Kensington Palace Gardens—the property of Mr. Thomas Craven—were asleep. He then scaled the low garden rail, and coming round to the front of the house climbed a waterpipe to the first floor. Here he entered a bedroom in which Colonel and Mrs. Kindersley were sleeping, and removed jewellery to the value of £1,000. This included a pearl necklace of 185 graduated pearls, a diamond wrist watch, a brooch, and other valuables.

He then descended to the drawing-room on the ground floor, where he filled a sack with silver objects, later leaving by the front door.

The astonishing thing is that there were fourteen servants on that floor at the time.

The Surrey escapade was at Ashley Court, Ashtead, the lonely country house of William E. Rennie, a city business man who was at dinner with his wife, daughter, and a few guests during the time the burglar gained entrance by forcing a bedroom window.

Searching the various bedrooms, he stealthily took a bundle of forty-nine £1 notes, a handsome Russian sable stole, valued at £2,000, and a chinchilla wrap almost as valuable.

The burglary was not discovered until about 9 p.m., when the daughter knocked at her mother's bedroom door and found it locked on the inside.

Footmarks in the garden indicated that the stackpipe had been climbed up to the bedroom window, and that a confederate kept watch below.

LUNATICS WHO RUN MAGAZINE

Poems Written by Inmates of Asylum at Leicester

Patients at Leicester City Mental Hospital conduct a magazine entirely by themselves, and it is neither edited nor censored.

Lieut.-Colonel J. Francis Dixon, medical superintendent of the hospital, made this statement in evidence before the Royal Commission on Lunacy at Whitehall Gardens.

"Lunatics," he added, "are much more sensible than people think. At Leicester City Hospital they have been discussing this Commission, and famous cases connected with it, in a very reasonable and sensible manner."

A woman inmate of the asylum, Dr. Dixon said, had written an article for submission to the Commission, making certain suggestions about treatment, and she had made suggestions to him. She also wrote articles and poems for the hospital magazine.

The Chairman: It appears to me that this lady would make a very valuable witness for us to hear. (Laughter.)

Earl Russell: She would make an admirable member of the Commission.

Dr. Dixon handed a copy of the magazine to the members of the Commission, who studied it with close interest.

In answer to the chairman, the doctor said the whole magazine was written by the patients.

Verses on the buttercup were not by the woman he had mentioned. She was very versatile, and had written an article entitled, "Should Married Women Work?" The propriety of her detention was not in question.

WAR CASUALTIES IN FAMILY, 100

Admiral Mark Kerr Expresses Preference for Arbitration Method

Admiral Mark Kerr, addressing a League of Nations meeting at the Essex Hall, said:—

"I have been in the fighting services since 1877, and I am as anxious as any one to safeguard this country, but during the last war I and my wife lost more than one hundred members of our families.

"Since then I have come to feel it would be much better if we could bring the world to order its affairs in the same way as we do our private affairs in this country."

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

Mrs. Maude Robinson (Maudie, wife of C. E. Robinson, race track follower, who made a hit with Hurri Singh, son and heir of the Rajah of Kashmir, when she wore her famous grasshopper costume at a Victory Ball. Hurri's infatuation was not frowned upon by the lady, for the pair were found together in the bedroom of a Paris hotel. Then Hurri paid £300,000 to hush the matter up, and the sequel was the most sensational blackmail case in British legal history, the reverbrations of which are running through the hills in far-off Kashmir.

Squanders Fortune of £34,000 Then Takes Dose of Veronal

Ralph Tonge, a young man, of Findlay street, Leigh, who was accused at Wigan of attempting to commit suicide, was stated to have spent every penny of £34,000 inherited from his parents and other relatives.

It was stated that Tonge took an overdose of veronal while in the Grand Hotel, Wigan. Tonge promised that if the magistrates would overlook the case he would go to friends in Manchester who would find work for him. The case was dismissed.

WOMAN RECLUSE HAS LEFT £6,400

Miss Lavinia Parminter Cardnell, of Matlock Bath, Derbyshire, who had for some time lived the life of a recluse with only pets for companions, and was found dead in September, left £6,455.

She died intestate, and letters of administration have been granted to her nephew, George P. Cardell, dentist, Bournemouth.

DAMAGE TO EYE ASSESSED AT £500

A Frome (Somerset) boy of 12, named Hillyer, was at Bristol Assizes awarded £500 damages for an injury to his right eye.

The boy was watching the unloading of some putty lime when a piece of the material entered his eye, which was injured so badly that he has practically lost the sight of it.

Negligence was alleged, but this was strongly contested by the defendants, a Warminster firm of builders, who obtained leave to appeal.

BRUTAL AUNT AT NORTHAMPTON FINED

Mrs. Mary Wrigglesworth, licensed victualler of the Red House, Conniger-ton, was fined £10 at Northampton for cruelty to her ten-year-old nephew, Ross Green, who was made to get up at six a.m., light the fire, make tea for her, feed the chickens, and sometimes milk a cow before breakfast.

The woman was alleged to have beaten him with a stick, a halter, and a rolling pin. One of the bruises on his back was six inches long and half an inch wide.

She said the boy was a thief and liar, and consequently she thrashed him.

AMPLIFIER NEEDED TO HEAR DOG BARK

The sensation of the Birmingham Dog Show which opened at Bingley Hall was the entry of dogs so small that an amplifier was necessary in order to hear them bark.

Notable among these miniature animals were the tiny Yorkshire terriers with hair so long that they tripped over it at every step, and the papillons, or butterfly dogs, which are recent importations from France. The average weight of the papillons was three pounds.

The best papillon was Mouchy, entered by Mrs. M. B. Cooper and Mrs. Gordon Greatrex, of Hornsea. This tiny animal has already provoked an offer of £800, a price which works out at £5 an ounce.

There was a magnificent entry of Alsatian wolf dogs—nearly two hundred and fifty. In order to judge them P. J. Widener, an American expert, has made a dash across the Atlantic.

PILOT FORETELLS CURIOUS MISHAP

A flying officer, who before he went up expressed a premonition of disaster, crashed into a cottage known as Grove Farm, Arpinge, near Folkestone, while flying at ninety miles an hour. He was seriously injured.

The aviator was Flying Officer L. E. Maynard, aged twenty-two, attached to the 25th Squadron, Royal Air Force, stationed at Hawkinge. He and a number of other officers were engaged in fighting manoeuvres in the vicinity of the aerodrome.

Flying Officer Maynard was flying low in a new single-seater machine. The aeroplane crashed through a wire fence, struck a tree, turned over, and dashed against the house, knocking the corner of it away.

There was nobody in the house, but the tenant, Mr. Harden, a farm bailiff, was about to enter it when the accident occurred.

Can't Get Away to Marry You, Today—My Wife Won't Let Me

Miss Ellen Thomas, a young Cardiff woman, went with the members of her family to the register office to marry George Guinea, but waited an hour in vain.

Two days later her father saw Guinea, who is a coal-trimmer, and demanded an explanation.

"I am very sorry," the man is alleged to have replied, "I was married abroad, and I have a wife in India."

When this story was being told at Cardiff Sheriff's Court, Miss Thomas fainted.

She was awarded £150 damages against Guinea for breach of promise.

SOLWAY FISHERMEN MAKE BIG HAUL

Maryport fishermen had another great haul of herrings, but several boats lost their nets through the weight of fish.

The Solway Firth is alive with herrings. Captain Lascelles, of the coasting steamer Clydebrae, says that after passing the Mull of Galloway he steamed through a shoal of herrings seven miles long.

EARTHQUAKE BELL DELICATE MACHINE

Speaking at the Birmingham Rotary Club J. J. Shaw, the West Bromwich seismologist, said his instruments were so delicate that they recorded the expansion and contraction of the walls of his house as the sun appeared and disappeared on a summer day.

He was the only man in England whose seismograph had a bell which warned him when an earthquake was recorded.

QUARTER MILLION ESTATE; NO WILL

Ronald E. D. Sassoon, of Knightsbridge, S.W., merchant, who died at Baghdad in July, whilst travelling in Persia, left £232,420.

He died intestate and a bachelor without parent, and letters of administration have been granted to the next of kin, his sister, Mrs. Muriel Helene Ezra, of Cobham, Surrey.

Duties on the property at the above valuation will amount to about £63,000.

PENSIONS FOR ALL URGED AT AGE 65

Urging the adoption of a compulsory old age pension insurance scheme for everyone between 20 and 65, with benefits much better than 10s. a week, a correspondent of a London newspaper writes:—

I know a sergeant of the police force who joined at 20. He will leave when he is 45, and receive a pension of about £4 a week.

I have been at my present situation 50 years, and I am 72 years of age. If I left work now I should receive 10s. a week, out of which I should have a home to maintain.

MEN LEAVE LAND FOR COAL MINES

Miners are flocking to Nottinghamshire from all parts of the country, and farm laborers and youths are deserting the land in large numbers to start work at the new collieries where rich coal seams have been struck.

Housing accommodation is limited, and much difficulty is experienced in obtaining shelter.

Farmers in the county find it impossible to replace the men who have left them, and in some places girls have gone to work on the land.

At a special meeting of the Notts Farmers' Executive the outlook was reported to be black, and that if they did not give some encouragement to the youths they would soon have no male labor.

BIRMINGHAM CITY OF SHINGLED BEAUTY

Women of all ages in Birmingham are fast losing their silken tresses. It is estimated that one woman in every three in the city now wears her hair bobbed or shingled.

"Birmingham women," the city's expert hairdresser says, "insist on being smart, and they realize that one of the principal factors in smartness is a well-dressed head."

The increasing use of face powders and creams is astonishing. During the first nine months of this year 3,000 tons of powder and cream were imported into the city.

SIR CHARLES ROSS' LAND FOR CLAN

Proposes to Leave One Scottish Estate—Statement in Court

DIVORCE CASE

Pleads Domicile in New York State Not in Scotland

Sir Charles Ross, Bart., who rowed for Cambridge in the 1894 boat race and invented the Canadian Service rifle which bears his name, proposes to leave one of his Scottish estates—he owns over 350,000 acres—to the clan of which he is a member.

This was mentioned in court at Edinburgh in a preliminary to a divorce suit by Lady Patricia Ellieon or Ross, of Warwick Square, London, against Sir Charles (who was described as of Balnagowan, Rossshire, and New York) and Emily Key Hoffman, or Daizie, of New York, who was called as co-respondent.

Both the latter defended the action, and Sir Charles also pleaded that the Court of Session has no jurisdiction, as he now domiciled in New York State.

Edward Wilkinson Grange said he had known Sir Charles Ross since 1908 or 1909. Sir Charles used his Balnagowan and Scottish estates generally as security for raising loans for use in connection with his Ross rifle business in Canada, and told witness that he intended leaving the Balnagowan estate in trust for the benefit of the Clan Ross.

Following the disposal of his factory in Canada to the Canadian Government, Sir Charles acquired an apartment in New York. In 1917 he received an appointment under the American Government in relation to munitions.

In cross-examination, witness said he knew that defendant had bought "The Outlook," a London newspaper.

Counsel: He had a place in the North of Scotland, an interest in Lanarkshire, a place in London, and a newspaper in London. What did he ever tell you to make you think that he had severed his connection with Scotland?—He never told me he had done so.

Edward Nicholson, an American solicitor, said Sir Charles told him many times that he had no intention of returning to live in Scotland, as all his social and business friends were in New York.

The hearing was adjourned.

TWO MEN FIGHT FOR PRETTY BRIDE

Bout Staged at Fulham Baths to Decide Matter

George Richards and Jim Thompson, both milkmen, fought at Fulham Baths for the hand of the Most Beautiful Ladye of Fulham. The two Knights of the Churn were painfully nervous, but the hundreds of onlookers cheered them on with cries of "Milk-o" and "Hit him with a can."

The two men, who take milk round to Fulham residents every morning, acquired a love for the same girl. She was not present to see the fight.

They had already fought one indecisive battle when they heard of a boxing tourney at the Fulham Baths, and asked the promoter to let them fight out their battle there. He consented.

The battle was short. Both men pirouetted gracefully, and seemed unwilling to hit each other. In the third round Richards hit Thompson hard on the side of the head. Thompson went down and stayed down. The winning blow seemed to surprise Richards as much as it surprised the loser.

HOW LARGE SHOULD MAN'S FAMILY BE?

Several Opinions Think Three Reasonable and Nine Too Many

How many children should there be in a family?

Judge Cluer at Shoreditch County Court said, "A family of three children is reasonable; nine is unreasonable and unnecessary."

This opinion is borne out by many of the leading authorities on birth control, most of whom qualify their expressions by stating that circumstances alter cases.

"Parents have no right to burden the community with children for whom they have neither the means nor the circumstances to educate as decent citizens. A family of nine is excellent if the parents have the means to bring up their children respectably," said Dr. Marie Stopes.

Miss Norah H. March, editor of "National Health," said "Parents have no right to rear children for whom they are unable to provide."

Dr. Leonard Williams said, "I do not see why Judge Cluer should choose three as the size of the family. I should say four. Two boys and two girls are a reasonable family and a desirable one."

Dame Beatrix Hudson Lyall said, "It is entirely a personal matter which must be left to the individual."

LOSS BY COLDS PUT AT £20,000,000

The costliest of our diseases is the common cold, said a medical officer of health.

The season is beginning, and between now and next summer we shall have from 60,000,000 to 80,000,000 colds in Great Britain. In loss of time, lowered working capacity, medicines, and doctors' bills many a cold costs £10 and upwards.

But if we take the low average of 5s. per cold, the annual loss cannot fall short of £20,000,000.

Half of the colds could be prevented if people were forbidden to cough and sneeze in public places without covering their mouths.

This is "Mr. A."

Rajah Sir Hurri Singh, the victim in London's sensational blackmail case, who paid toll when found in a Paris hotel with Mrs. C. E. Robinson.

FLAPPER'S AGE IS JUDGE'S PROBLEM

Question of Admission to Movies Issue in Lawsuit

RULE APPROVED

Managers Responsible for Dismissed Judging Patron's Age

Three judges wrestled with the problem of how to tell a flapper's age, but did not arrive at any infallible system.

It is of great importance to cinema proprietors to know whether the bobbed hair and short-frocked female seeks admission is under 16, or a grandmother, so a King's Bench Divisional Court (the Lord Chief Justice, and Justices Shearman and Salter) had a go at the question.

The case was an appeal by Mr. Mills, who runs a picture theatre in the Old Kent Road, against a conviction for alleged breach of the L.C.C. by-law by admitting children unaccompanied by adult guardians to see a film that had not been passed by the censors for exhibition to young people under 16.

Mr. Giveen (for Mr. Mills) said nowadays it was impossible to judge with accuracy the ages of people between the ages of 14 and 20, owing to their dress and make-up.

Mr. Justice Shearman: You don't suggest that you have got to put into the regulations the word "Flapper"?

Mr. Giveen: Unless one can correctly judge the age of a flapper a picture theatre proprietor may lose his license. There might be six different opinions about the age of a person, and not one correct.

A guardian, even, might have a young appearance and he be refused admission, while the child might look over 16 and be admitted.

What would happen to a cinema proprietor if he admitted a well-known jockey to see a certain picture? The jockey might easily appear to be under 16, and counsel was not sure that it would be any defence to say that he was in fact over 16.

After hearing counsel for the L.C.C. the court held that the condition was reasonable, and that the magistrate was right in upholding it. The appeal was therefore dismissed.

WOOLF BARNATO MUST PAY £1,500

Son of Magnate Mulcted for Action of His Chauffeur

Captain Woolf Barnato, of Blindley Heath, Lingfield, who was not present when his motor-car, driven by his chauffeur, knocked down and injured Miss Ethel Maude Coote, a Golders Green typist, was ordered in the King's Bench Division to pay £1,500 damages to the girl.

The defence was that the accident was caused by Miss Coote's negligence.

The car, said Miss Coote's counsel, was being driven by Captain Barnato's chauffeur at a fast pace on the wrong side of the road.

Miss Coote said she remembered nothing of what occurred after she had said good night to a friend. She was unconscious for three days.

The driver of the car, John Percy Moule, gave evidence that he was returning after driving Captain Barnato to his club in London. There was a woman who had asked for a lift seated at the back of the car, but she was not present to give evidence.

Captain Woolf Barnato is a son of the late Mr. Barney Barnato, the multi-millionaire.

MURDER CHARGE AT LIMERICK HEARD

A dramatic account of a murder plot said to have been evolved by a woman was given at Limerick when Annie Walshe and Michael Talbot, her nephew, were charged with the murder of the woman's husband, Edward Walshe, a farm laborer.

Superintendent Maguire said that after his arrest Talbot made a statement in the presence of Mrs. Walshe.

He said that Mrs. Walshe met him on the day before the murder and asked him to come over on Friday night, when they would kill "Ned," meaning her husband. She said she would get compensation for her husband's death and would give him half of it.

Talbot added that he went to the house on Friday night, and while he, Mrs. Walshe, and her husband were sitting at the fire, she told her husband to go out for some sticks.

In his absence she put a hatchet under her apron and lowered the lamp. When Walshe returned his wife struck him on the head with the hatchet, and, asking Talbot to hold his hands, she hit him again until he showed no signs of life.

The two prisoners were sent for trial.

DUNLOP MILLIONS QUICKLY VANISHED

Judge Appalled at Colossal Total Loss of £10,527,542

RE-VALUATION

No Attempt to Make Anyone Liable in the Matter

Mr. Justice Eve, in the Chancery Division sanctioned a scheme for the reduction of the capital of the Dunlop Rubber Company, Ltd., in order to deal with a loss of £10,527,542.

The judge, before granting the application, said that the loss might possibly be even greater than that stated, but in any case the figures appalled him.

Mr. Sims, for the company, said that the total loss was £12,582,000, but that had been reduced by the appropriation of certain reserves, leaving a net loss of £10,527,542.

When Mr. Justice Eve asked how long it took to get rid of that amount, Mr. Sims said that it was lost quickly.

The loss consisted mainly of an item of £8,320,000 in 1921, owing to the depreciation in the market prices of raw materials, principally rubber and cotton, and partly of loss on exchange on the company's foreign business. There was, consequently, a reconstitution of the board. The new board decided that there was no way out of the difficulty but to put forward the present scheme.

The A, B, and C Preference shares were all entitled to priority in capital, and the C Preference shareholders had agreed to have their shares reduced to sixteen shillings each. The rest of the loss fell on the Ordinary shares, which would be reduced to 6s. 8d. each.

Sir Eric Geddes, the chairman of the company, stated in an affidavit that the loss arose mainly on a revaluation of the company's holdings in subsidiary companies and depreciation in the market value of stocks of raw materials held by the company. The 1920 report showed that there had been a severe slump throughout the world, and the company found itself over-bought at most unfavorable prices.

The affidavit showed further that, more than £3,000,000 was lost in certain American subsidiary companies, besides other considerable losses in Yorkshire cotton and other subsidiary companies.

Mr. Justice Eve said that money seemed to have been lost in hundreds of thousands, and asked whether the shareholders received anything from those who embarked in this sort of speculation. The judge also inquired whether some independent litigation arising from the case did not seek to make somebody liable "for this mismanagement."

Mr. Sims said that as far as he knew none of the litigation sought to make any director or other person responsible for the loss on any forward contracts.

He added that the scheme had been laboriously worked out and approved by the shareholders. The sum of £769,000 would be accepted by the A, B, and C Preference shareholders in satisfaction of all arrears of dividend. The capital of the company in consequence of the scheme would be reduced to £9,472,427, but restored to £20,000,000 by the issue of new capital.

Mr. Justice Eve finally confirmed the reduction of capital and sanctioned the scheme.

LONGER HOURS FOR COTTON WORKERS

More Work for 150,000 People Will Be Provided

Striking evidence of the continued revival of the cotton trade is furnished by the decision of the Short-Time Organization Committee of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' Association to recommend that the hours of working in the mills spinning American cotton should be increased from 32 to 39¼ per week.

This decision was reached after a careful study of the state of trade.

The members of the federation using American cotton will shortly ballot on the question of short-time, and will have before them the committee's recommendation.

The increased hours went into effect on December 1, and meant additional work for 150,000 operatives.

Organized short-time working has been in operation in the cotton industry since February of this year. Up to last month, when the 32-hour week came into operation, mills have worked practically half-time.

A number of firms report that last week, from the point of view of orders, was the best they have known for more than a year.

Passengers Blamed For Dirty Carriages By English Railway

Excited season ticket-holders who reside in Eastbourne strongly condemned the Southern Railway, its rolling stock, and its methods at a meeting in the town.

The mayor announced that the corporation had sent a deputation to the company, but the manager refused point blank to meet them.

Two cases were cited in which residents had been compelled to leave Eastbourne owing to the bad train service. The unpunctuality of trains was stated to be worse than for twenty years.

The mayor said he had written a personal letter to Sir Herbert Walker, complaining of the unpunctuality of trains and the dirtiness of the carriages, and a reply, initialled by a clerk, stated that the improvement in the service was being steadily maintained.

The letter added that the dirtiness of the carriages was due to passengers' habits.

This reply was described as disgraceful, and insulting to the mayor.

A. E. Bowes, of Eastbourne, said that if the company ignored that meeting then they should call an Indignation meeting in every town on the company's system.

BELMONTS LOSE FIRST GAME TO PORRIDGE TEAM

Quakers Pounded Harrison and Holyman But the Decision Was Close.

TURNER STARRED

Quaker Catcher Had Perfect Batting Average—Accounted for Five Runs.

Two triples by "Lefty" Turner at critical moments in the game, were big factors in the Quakers win over the Belmonts last night when they nosed the club section winners out by the score of 10 to 9 in the most exciting fixture played in the Arena this season.

A ball player's dream came true to the Quaker catcher last night, when with two down and the bases loaded he hammered out a triple to deep right, scoring three runners, and in the next inning with two on he put his team in front when he pulled the same feat. The two hits were the only ones made last night that went for more than one base and were undoubtedly two of the cleanest made this year.

About one hundred fans were on hand to witness the battle, and they sure got their money's worth for the game was full of more thrilling moments and spectacular plays than all the rest of the games played this season put together.

Belmonts Started

Belmont led off with one run in the first and three in the second and for a time it looked as if the score was going to stand that way, but Turner made the score a little closer when he took one of Hap Harrison's swift ones square on the nose and three men registered. Turner put his team ahead in the sixth inning when he drove out another for three bases and two more men scored. When the sixth had finished the score stood 8 to 4 for the Quakers and it looked as if they had the game nicely tucked away.

The Belmonts chalked up one in the seventh inning, but the Quakers came right back with the same number in their half of the seventh. A fumble by Carruthers, a wild peg by Butcher three walks and a timely single by Fanning accounted for four runs in the eighth and the score was now tied. The Quakers went scoreless in their half of the eighth but in the ninth with two men down, Ralph tore across the plate with the winning run and the game was ended.

Holyman Called on

Harrison on the firing line for the losers could do nothing with the Quakers after the fourth inning, when Turner broke his heart. He was going fine until this frame and in the sixth he was walloped for six hits and five runs, giving the Quakers a four run lead. He was replaced by Holyman in the eight and he managed to hold the porridge mixers at bay in this frame but the ninth was the one when they got to him for the winning run. In the two innings he pitched he kept Haskill climbing the walls after them and he issued three passes.

Haskill was all over the rink and he nearly broke his neck a couple of times after foul flies. He did pick off a beauty when he reached the air, reaped in the floater and then "nose dived" to the ice.

Carruthers pitched a great game, but he was not as steady as in some of his former performances. He had a world of speed but was a little wild at times, getting himself into a bad hole in the eighth inning when the Belmonts sent four runs in and tied up the score. Outside of this one bad inning he pitched a good game.

Ash pulled off one of those you read about, when he almost tied himself in a knot while going after a line drive over second. He speared it one hand, threw himself at the base touched the base with one hand and made what a few seconds before had looked like a clean hit into a double play. Turner not only led his team at bat with four hits but he also turned in a nice game behind the plate.

EXAMINER LEAGUE.

Last night's rolling in the Examiner League, at the Water Street Alleys, brought the first half to a close with the Pressmen and Proofers tied for first place.

When the teams went into action last night the Proofers and Jobbers were tied for first place, with the Newsies and Pressmen tied for second place, a game behind the leaders. The Proofers engaged in the first game of the evening with the Monos. They won two and lost one and grabbed a good holt on first place. The Jobbers were next. They met the Directors and dropped two out of three and that threw them in the discard with the Proofers looking like sure winners. Then came the upset. The Pressmen and Newsies, each with a grand chance of tieing for first place if either team won three games. The Pressmen did! They got the second game by the small margin of one pin. The last game was of no importance, other than the Casters three straight wins over the Comps sent them into second position.

The Pressmen's victory was the most popular of the night. At the outset of the league they were considered to have no chance of winning, and even last night they were conceded very little. But they came through the season, winning only a few at start but finishing in a blaze of glory by taking their last nine games. To win last night they had to show some real rolling, and two of their men went away over the 600 mark for three games, and each had a high game of 300 and over. The Pressmen were sure the surprise of the league and they deserve great credit for their success. They had to roll for every game and a week ago they showed their stuff when they took three straight from the Proofers, who up until then seemed to have the league cinched.

The Jobbers put up a great fight to win the first half of the league, but the Directors were too much for them. The Directors bowled a little above their usual form. Every man on these two teams was well over the 500 mark.

Frank Gray had the high three games of the evening with 635. George Cairns was next with 633. Bob Baker next with 588 and Max Swanston had 580. Frank Gray had the high single of 302 and George Cairns had an even 300. Gray's single is now high for the league.

M'AULIFFE TELLS OF FIGHTING WHEN BARE KNUCKLES WERE USED

Unbeaten Lightweight Champion Says Blows Are More Effective When Gloves Are Used.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(United Press.—"Some of these critics who keep pointing back to the tough times of the old bare-knuckle days give me a laugh. When they say it took more gameness to fight a man who had bare fists than a man with the gloves, they don't know what they're talking about," Jack McAuliffe, the retired unbeaten lightweight champion said recently, in a fanning bee about the old times.

"A good hitter can inflict more damage with a light glove than he can with the bare fist, because he can hit harder and he can get better punches on the face or body with a glove than he can with the bare hand.

"The big advantage a fighter has in a glove is that he has something to get a grip on. In the old days when I was fighting with bare fists, I used to try to sneak a match-stick or something or a handful off grass in my hand. They would give me something to grip. Otherwise the muscles of the hand would get so tired that it was almost impossible to grip the hand tightly or to even close it.

"You will notice that many runners have regular cork grips to put in their hands when they are running. The idea is following the same theory of the old fight days."

McAuliffe pointed out that with the gloves it is sometimes possible to sneak something into the hand to add to the force of the blow or to get something inside the bandages or the lining of the glove.

"In our days," he said, "it was impossible to get a plaster of paris case on the hands or to hold an iron slug in the hands like some of the fighters do now. The beatings that some of the modern boxers have to take now could not have been inflicted in the bare knuckle days."

It always has been maintained by some critics, who do not feel friendly toward the champion, that Dempsey had his hands packed when he fought Jess Willard at Toledo and won the championship. The story was denied by all concerned and the insistence with which Jimmy de Forest clung to the statement that Dempsey had nothing but ordinary tape on his hands added strength to the other denials.

De Forest trained Dempsey for the Willard fight and was his chief second during the battle. De Forest has no reason to stretch a point of truth for the champion, as he was let out right after the fight and there is no reason why he should feel tied by any bonds of loyalty to cover it up if Dempseys' hands were slugged with plaster of paris.

It seems unusual, however, that Dempsey should have caved in the face of the giant Willard when he had never inflicted such damage on other opponents before that time and has never shown such crashing power since then.

Carpentier left the ring without a mark, but it might be argued that Dempsey didn't have to smash the smaller Frenchman. Gibbons left the ring in Shelby with nothing more than a bruise on his groin from a low punch and Dempsey had no reason to pull his punches in that fight. Firpo wasn't badly marked when he was dragged from the ring in the Polo Grounds and Dempsey had every reason to get savage enough to murder the South American in that fight.

It is quite possible, however, that Dempsey never was in the same mood and on the same great edge as he was in the Willard fight and that he never will be the same perfect machine again. He never will be if there is any truth in the theory that an athlete reaches his best at only one time in his career. Because Willard was such a huge man, Dempsey may have been forced to hit harder and more accurately than he had ever done before or since and it might be that Willard was softer about the face and head than any of the other opponents Dempsey met. Willard certainly was soft inside, and he may have had a soft shell.

One of the Eastern contenders for the lightweight championship has a reputation of carrying an iron slug in his hands. The story is told in the Middle-west that this fighter, when he was in his corner in a city near Chicago, felt a gun in his back and was told to drop the slugs. There was said to have been two splashes in the water bucket that weren't caused by the sponge.

McAuliffe is not one of the old school who insists that there are no good fighters among the present crop, but he does claim that some of the champions today are not as good as the old fellows of yesterday.

"Our days were tough," he said, "not because we fought with bare knuckles, but because we fought for such a long time and fought for such darn small purses. General conditions were not as good then as they are now.

"Boxers in our time had no social rating and they couldn't exercise the rights of ordinary citizens in some places. They used to post rewards in some towns for the arrest of any fighter and hotels were barred to any man who was known to have been connected with a prize-fighter.

"Now the prominent boxers are permitted in the best social circles. They live in fine houses and are welcomed to the best of hotels. They fight in fine clubs and they ride back and forth in high-priced cars. They never have to duck the police like we did. They have cops at the ringside to protect them. Great days, these are!"

McAuliffe is now doing an act with a musical show, "Hurry Up." He does a monologue and a boxing act with Irish Patsy Kline in which the old and the new ways of boxing are demonstrated.

SENATORS LOST GAME.

Toronto Team Picked Up a Four Goal Lead and Pulled Out.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Toronto St. Patrick's sent Ottawa Senators down to humiliating defeat here last night before a small crowd by the score of 6 to 3. Commanding the play for two periods, the Toronto team piled up four goal lead, and though absolutely outplayed from every angle in the final twenty minutes, managed to stave off a terrific finish of the locals and relieve the pressure with two more tallies that settled the issue finally.

Referee: Dr. Eddie O'Leary, of Ottawa.

BLANKED MONTREAL.

First Clash in the National Hockey League Last Evening.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Canadiens blanked the new Montreal pro-hockey team in their first meeting in the National Hockey League here last night, 5 to 0. Dazzling rushes by the world champions brilliant forwards, Joliat, Morenz and Billy Boucher, were too much for the new-comers. Joliat was the bright star, netting four of the goals after spectacular rushes.

Montreal—Goal, Benedict; defence Munro and Cain; centre, Lowrey; left wing, Berlinquette; right wing, Broadbent. Subs: Dinsmore, Noble, Rothschild, Scott, G. Munro and Carroll.

Canadiens—Goal, Vezina; defence S. Cleghorn and Coutu; centre, Morenz; left wing, Joliat; right wing, W. Boucher. Subs: O. Cleghorn, Mats and Mantha.

Referee: Cooper Smith, Montreal.

TIGERS WON GAME.

Defeated the Boston Bruins by Score of 7 to 1.

HAMILTON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Boston Bruins were acclaimed here last night on their first invasion and were handed 7 to 1 defeat to mark occasion by Jimmy Gardners fast travelling Hamilton Tigers. Locals scored only tally of first frame, Langlois doing it alone, and they added two in the second while Bruins secured their orphan. Four in the final ended fun. The locals were miles the best and Forbes was unlucky not to have stopped only Boston goal. Bruins played hard hockey, but lacked finish. There was considerable heated feeling in game.

Boston—Goal, Fowler; Defence, Rowe and Herberts; Centre, Sparrow; Wings Cooper and Mitchell; Subs, Schnarr, Headley, Harris, Skinner, Redding and Cook.

Hamilton—Goal Forbes; Defence Langlois and Randall; Centre, Burch; Wings, "Shorty" Green, and "Red" Green; Subs, Spring, Roach, McKinnon and Bouchard.

Referee—Lou E. Marsh.

Turns Down New Offer to Enter Professional Ranks.

STRATFORD, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Renewed overtures to lure Dr. Bill Carson from Stratford Senior O.H.A. Hockey Club, made by Charles Querrie, of Toronto St. Patrick's, were turned down by the former Toronto Varsity star.

Brothers stated last night: "Carson turned down the St. Patrick's offer last year to please his father. In fact the two Carson brothers have an agreement with their father not to turn professional, and besides, Dr. Bill gave me his word of honor that he would not accept terms to play professional hockey under any circumstances."

PHILLIES GET FIVE PLAYERS

Three of Arthur Fletcher's New Men Have Been in the Major Leagues.

OTHER DEALS

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Manager Arthur Fletcher, of the Philadelphia Nationals, came forth yesterday with a determined effort to lift his club out of the ruck in 1925 by consummating deals for five players, three of whom have seen service in the major leagues.

Pitcher Philip (Lefty) Weinert was traded to Vernon of the Pacific Coast League for Walter Kimmick, a third baseman, who formerly appeared with Cincinnati. Lee Parkinson, who has played infield positions for the Phillies for several years, went to Nashville of the Southern League with an unstated amount of cash for "Chicken" Hawks, formerly an understudy to Wally Pipp of the Yankees. Infielder Andy Woehrs and Pitcher Lerton Pinto were exchanged for Third Baseman Huber of the Beaumont Club of the Texas League. The same club sends Pitchers Dana Fillingim and O. H. O'Neal to the Phillies for cash and three players to be named later.

Baseball men regarded the deal for Hawks as the best part of the bargain, as the youngster, who came originally from the Pacific Coast circuit, hit for .336 last season in 142 games and fielded for .979.

McNally to Boston.

Another interesting shift was recorded in the case of M. J. (Mike) McNally, substitute infielder of the Yankees, who returns to the Red Sox, for Howard Shanks, former third baseman of the Washington Senators.

McNally, one of the fastest men in the American League, has been handicapped while with the Yankees with such stars as Frank Baker and Joe Dugan occupying his accustomed position, but has managed to break into world series games and played brilliantly in the series of 1921 when Baker had to leave the game. McNally played in 49 games this season, batting .247 and fielding .970. Shanks appeared in 72 contests, batted .259 and fielded .960.

Business Manager Oscar Reichow of the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League announced that he had bought Catcher Gus Sandberg from Cincinnati. Manager Jack Hendricks of the Reds signed Grover Land, veteran of Cleveland and Chicago as coach.

MORE SUPPORT FOR K. M. LANDIS

American League Declares Confidence in Commissioner—Johnson Rebuked.

PEACE COMMITTEE

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The American League yesterday lined beside the National League in support of the administration of Commissioner Kenesaw Landis and took steps toward effecting a conciliation in the feud between its president, Ban Johnson, and the Commissioner.

Taking action interpreted by baseball men as the sternest rebuke ever delivered to Johnson, who wielded czar-like authority in baseball until the regime of Landis, the American League club owners unanimously adopted resolutions declaring their "continued faith and confidence in the integrity and ability" of the Commissioner and pledging "fullest and unqualified support and endorsement" to him in his "methods of conduct and leadership."

At the same time, however, the American League men also followed the example of the senior circuit's magnates in refraining from personal reference to Johnson's attacks upon Landis.

Charges Tabled.

Baseball men interpreted a second set-back for Johnson when his club owners, in the only other important issue before them, tabled his charges that gambling existed in connection with the Pacific Coast League.

Details of these allegations, it was learned, were laid before the board of directors by Johnson and referred later to the League meeting as a whole, but no official action was taken as a result of feeling that conclusive proof was not apparent and that the matter was outside the League's jurisdiction.

The American League's move to conciliate Johnson and Landis took the form of appointing a committee authorized to interview the Commissioner in the interests of restoring "full harmony and co-operation" between baseball's governing forces. This committee, composed of Col. Jacob Ruppert of New York, E. S. Barnard of Cleveland, and Thomas Shibe of Philadelphia, will confer with Landis at the earliest practicable date, it was said.

NATIONALS CONCLUDE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—National League club owners concluded their annual meeting yesterday by unanimously approving an amendment to the world's series rules, which will be considered at the joint session with the American League, and tabling four other matters of business for consideration at the schedule meeting in February.

The substance of the amendment follows:

"For 1925 games 1, 2, 6 and 7 shall be scheduled in the city of the pennant-winning club of the National League, and games 3, 4 and 5 in the city of the pennant-winning club of the American League; then reverse annually thereafter."

Further consideration of the most valuable player award, including the two-fold plan to name a pitcher and a regular-playing performer, was tabled until the 1925 meeting, togetherr with the claim of the New York Giants against the League for reimbursement for loss alleged to have been sustained in waiving Pitcher Gearin, obtained by the Boston Braves.

DOUKHOBORS HELD ELECTION ON WED.

"Peter's Peter Lordly" Elected Spiritual and Temporal Leader.

NELSON, B.C., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—"Peter's Peter Lordly," who, according to a letter received in Brilliant, left Toronto a week ago and was yesterday at the grave of his father, Peter Veregin, elected both spiritual and temporal leader of the Doukhobors, by thousands of voting members of the sect and society who took bit in teeth and held the election, despite repeated announcements from official leaders that the election would not be held until next week.

Peter Veregin, Jr., or "Peter's Peter Lordly," the late leader's name having been changed at the death to "Lordly," is a man of 41 years of age, born in Russia, and is well educated. He was in Canada for six months, ten or twelve years ago. He was supposed to have left Russia just before the death of Peter Veregin in the Farron coach explosion of October 29th. Ten thousand Doukhobors are now awaiting his appearance with eagerness, and unless he has for some reason stopped in Saskatchewan, he should be here to participate in one or more of the remaining "days of remembrance" for the late leader, as yesterday morning's ceremony, with the exception of the part relating to the election, which is to be repeated.

On the Y.W.C.A. gym. floor last night the Western Clock girls defeated the Quakers by the score of 16 to 2. Westclox showed lots of class and combination, and although the Quakers put up a game fight, the combination play of the winners was too much for them. Miss G. Gimblett refereed. To-morrow night there will be four games run off, and these will be the last games before Christmas. After Christmas the League will be re-opened again.

2 MONTHS FOR DRINKING.

Not One of Ten Children Could Be Induced to Say Good Word For Father.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—When not one of a man's ten children can be induced to say a good word for him, he hardly can expect much sympathy from the court.

Following that conclusion a court sentenced James Hyde, 56 years old, to two months in the penitentiary.

Hyde was arraigned in the City Court on complaint of his daughter, who charged him with drinking too much. The Judge, on hearing he had ten children, asked if he had any who could testify in his behalf. Hyde replied in the negative.

SECOND GAME OF FINALS TO-NIGHT

Belmonts and Quakers Clash at Arena at 8 O'clock Sharp.

The second game of the play-off series for the City Softball Championship will be played this evening in the Brock Street Rink at 8 o'clock between the Belmonts and the Quakers. The Quakers won the first game played last evening by the score of 10 to 9, and if they manage to hand the Belmonts a trimming to-night they will be declared the champs, but if the Belmonts win to-night the series will be tied up and a third game will be necessary to decide the winner. Last night's game was one of the fastest staged this season, and the large crowd that turned out to see the battle were well satisfied with the performance.

The Quakers are confident in winning to-night's fixture, while the Belmonts on the other hand say that the Quakers were lucky to win the game last night, and that they will hand them a real trimming to-night. The teams are both evenly matched, and with Carruthers and Harrison doing the hurling the game should be a humdinger.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The bizarre Nazimova is at the Capitol Theatre for two days of this week, in "Madonna of the Streets."

Although moralists would doubtless object to the tenor of the theme of this production, which pictures a scarlet woman as becomng the bride of a London evangelist, later returning to reckless ways, and then reforming for a final close-up the theatrical atmosphere imparted by the posing of Milton Sills on the one hand and the atificiality f Nazimova on the other, saves it from having too strong an influence on even the most susceptible of audiences. To call Mary Aisleigh, the mistress of the millionaire vavasour who on his death, and finding herself disinherited, comes to England, poses as a good woman, and marries his nephew, and heir, John Morton, a man with a vision of redeeming his fellows, to call such a character a "madonna," even in a screen title, would be an offense against even the laxest screen morality, were it not for the weak acting of the principles.

Milton Sills was immense as the "Sea Hawk." He is immense in most of his characterizations, but he isn't much good as John Morton, and Nazimova, playing opposite to him, is as "stagey" as possible. Outside of some good photography and a rather vivid street scene in which the hero is stoned by a London mob, the production is rather foolish. It gives an excellent idea, however, of the lengths to which producers will go at times to get effects. Just when the lady has returned from a hectic interval of time, spent presumably in the dens of London, and is supposec to have passed away from exhaustion, a "miracle" transpires, a long shaft of golden light illuminates her couch, and she rises transfigured to resume a startling career. A somewhat sallacious inner meaning to this picture has been glossed over by an attempt to impart a strong religious atmosphere to it, in a fashion that is improbable and rather ridiculous.

A breath of revivifying laughter precedes the feature in the really excellent comedy, "Shanghaied Lovers" in a Mack Sennett mix-up featuring Harry Langdon.

WRIGHT'S 2 MILLION NOVEL ON SCREEN

The main screen feature at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow and Saturday is the photoplay adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's well-known novel, "When a Man's a Man," which is a First National attraction.

The plot concerns the adventures of an indolent young clubman who goes West after the girl of his heart throws him down. He lands in the cowboy town of Prescott, Arizona, and goes to work on the Cross Triangle Ranch as an ordinary ranch hand. Here he loses his identity and becomes known as "Honorable Patches."

His daring and willingness to work and likeable personality win him many friends on the ranch, but there are several chronic cranks that are suspicious of every stranger, and so Patches comes in for his share of suspicion. He does not improve his position any when he takes up with Yavapai Joe, a cattle rustler, whom he realizes at once is simply a poor boy in a bad environment.

How the tenderfoot is caught with the cattle rustler, pursued by a lynching party, accused of shooting the ranch foreman, and finally vindicated by the poor boy he had befriended, only to lose his right to happiness with the girl he loved when she comes west on her honeymoon trip married to his rival, make up one of the most fascinating photoplays to come to the screen in a long time.

Edward F. Cline directed the picture, which was made in the exact locale of the story, Prescott, Arizona.

AT THE ROYAL.

Big British Racing Classic—"Come on Loving Cup" at Royal.

The "Sport of Kings" is again the subject of a thrilling film. Racing pictures are always popular and the British production "Come on Loving Cup" is no exception to the rule. The race scenes are said to be the most realistic ever taken by a camera. The same producers made "the Sporting Earl" and the now famous "Squibs Series." "Come on Loving Cup" is the main attraction at the Royal tonight and the balance of this week.

A Buddy Messenger Comedy, "Low Bridge," William Duncan in "The Fast Express," and a Canadian Travelog," are also added attraction.

STAGE SUCCESS NOW ON SCREEN.

"Welcome Stranger" is a Sparkling Comedy of Jewish Enterprise.

"Welcome Stranger," a sensational Broadway stage success of a few years back, made into a photoplay under the direction of James Young, comes to the Royal Theatre for a three day run on Monday.

As a stage play, "Welcome Stranger" gave George Sidney one of the greatest characterizations ever seen on the speaking stage. In the screen adaptation Dore Davidson, who made a distinct personal hit in "Humoresque," plays the role made famous by Sidney. Florence Vidor, who heads the cast, has one of the most appealing roles of her career.

The story is clean comedy of the "Potash and Perlmutter" type, with an undercurrent of humanity that throws the humorous situations into high relief.

Its leading character is a shop keeper who by the sheer force of kindliness and humanity, melts every prejudice and leaves every character with whom he comes in contact better than he found him.

The play is essentially a comedy melodrama of race prejudice, and the ironic title refers to the cold shoulder given to the Jewish shopkeeper when he comes to establish himself in a small New England town one bitter New Year's eve. How he melts this prejudice by his humility, his kindliness and his generosity makes for as entertaining a picture as has come to the screen in many a year.

The production was made by Belasco Productoins, Inc., and adapted for the screen by James Young and Willard Mack.

Besides Miss Vidor and Dore Davicson, the cast includes such notable names as Virginia Brown Faire, Noah Beery, Lloyd Hughes, Robert Edeson, William V. Mong and Otis Harlan.

THE GAS RATES TO BE REDUCED

Promise Made to Civic Deputation in Toronto Yesterday.

"We are now unscrambling the ...s in Central Ontario operated by the Hydro Electric Commission and owned by the Provincial Government with the object of submitting a proposal in the near future to the municipalities interested whereby all profits in their operation by the Hydro Commission shall be returned to the municipalities."

This was a statement made by Sir Ada Beck to a deputation from Peterborough yesterday, introduced by Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., which waited upon him in connection with the present gas rates in the city.

The deputation with Mr. Bradburn included Mayor J. J. Turner, Ald. W. Stocker, and the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

From figures submitted by Mr. Gaby, Chief Engineer, it was evident that the gas plant in Peterborough was operating at a fair profit, and Adam Beck to a deputation from ation would be given to a reduction in the gas rates for the city in the near future.

DURANT SAID TO BE BIG WINNER IN WALL STREET

Automobile Manufacturer's Profits Estimated at More Than Three Millions.

OFF ON HOLIDAY.

Reported to Have Been Luckiest in Stock Market Boom Since Elections.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12. — The heavy post-election trading in Wall Street is said to have added some new millionaires to New York's long list of wealthy men and to have greatly enhanced the fortunes of others already rated high. While these rumors of overnight fortunes have vied with other tales of such great losses as must go to balance the ledgers of stock speculation there has been much mystery covering the identities of those who have played stellar roles in the spectacular market drama of recent weeks.

Gossip yesterday for the first time named the biggest individual winner of these days of boiling stocks and million-share days. The man himself had nothing to say; instead he quietly withdrew from the market and started for a vacation in California. Business associates said that he had earned a rest after six months of intensive speculation and they were equally sure he could afford it.

The man about whom they talked with great positiveness as the biggest winner in a series of big winners is W. C. Durant, head of the motor company bearing his name. They didn't pretend to be in the know to the extent of telling exactly how much and the estimates ran all the way from $1,000,000 to well over $3,000,000. Most of these profits, according to the talk of the Street, are still on paper, but some of them have been cashed.

One-Man Pool in Cast Iron Pipe.

Mr. Durant's biggest success is said to have been in United States Cast Iron Pipe, in which he has run what has been virtually a "one-man pool." He accumulated, it is said, about 40,000 sharer, which averaged a little better than $60. This block of stock is reported to be retained by Mr. Durant and as the stock, now sells at from 138 to 140, he has a paper profit of something more than $3,000,000. In an additional speculative line of the same stock, amounting to some 25,000 shares, in which he was "in and out of the market" very frequently, he is reputed to have made a net profit of about $1,000,000. During this stock market campaign, no less than fifteen large accounts in brokerage offices have been operated by Mr. Durant personally, all of them over the telephone from his office in Columbus Circle.

Lost $125,000,000.

In addition to the successful speculation in United States Cast Iron Pipe, Mr. Durant has been credited with taking frequent and extremely lucrative flyers in many other Stock Exchange issues, in each of which, however, the campaign has been shorter than in Cast Iron Pipe. It is said that at various times he was heavily long of Southern Railway, Fisher Body, Missouri Pacific preferred, Radio Corporation and others.

CAMPBELL CASE NOT RE-OPENED

One of British Pre-election Incidents Settled by People Baldwin Replies.

LABOR IRONICAL.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The John Ross Campbell case, which was one of the thing that led to the downfall of the Labor government, came up again in the House of Commons Thursday at question time when Premier Baldwin, in reply to a question stated that the present government had no intention of holding an enquiry into the matter of the withdrawal of Sir Patrick Hastings former attorney-general, of the prosecution which had been launched against Campbell on a charge of sedition. Premier Baldwin said the electorate had given a final decisive verdict on the Campbell case at the polls on October 29 last.

This statement by the Premier evoked ironical opposition laughter.

Mr. Baldwin added that the Conservative government had reversed its predecessor's instruction under which the attorney-general was directed not to pursue political prosecutions without cabinet sanction. The present government held that such instruction was unconstitutional and subversive of the administration of justice, he continued. It also was derogatory to the attorney-general's position.

The opposition (Labor) protested that the late government had only followed precedents in the Campbell case, and asked for an opportunity to discuss the whole matter before the adjournment of the house for the Christmas holidays.

CHAMBERLAIN'S VISIT TO ITALY ACCOMPLISHED ALL ITS OBJECTS

Sidetracked League's Intervention in Egyptian Affairs—Discussion of Peace Protocol Deferred.

TO MARCH SESSION.

Visited Mussolini and Pope—Increased Confidence in the League.

ROME, Dec. 12.—"I go back to England with increased confidence in the future of the League of Nations," was the valedictory declaration of Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, delivered last night at an impressive public session of the League's council. While the council probably will continue to set two days more Mr. Chamberlain starts back for London today.

The head of the British foreign office apparently is immensely satisfied with his trip to Italy. He has succeeded in putting off a discussion by the council of the Geneva peace protocol until the March session so that Britain may have time to consult her Dominions on its cardinal features which excited their apprehension. He had sidetracked, up to the moment of his leae-taking at least, all attempts to secure the council's intervention in the Anglo-Egyptian conflic, and he has had satisfactory conversations with Premier Mussolini, in the direction of establishing closer co-operation between Great Britain and Italy on Mediterranen problems.

Finally Mr. Chamberlain had pleased the Pope by asurances of constant colaboration on matters affecting the Vatican and the British Empire as, for example, questions touching the Holy Land.

But if the British foreign minister has officially left tht council board with an apparently happy ending to the various issues in which he was interested, Senator Fanous of Egypt has not abandoned hope of some eleventh hour move in the council calculated to force an examination of the Egyptian problem.

The Egyptian senator took a new lead last night by impressing on members of the council, whom he again interviewed, that the recent British note to the League declaring that Britain would not recognize Egypt's right to appeal to the League, even if Egypt signs the Geneva peace protocol, was really written before the assassination of Sir Lee Stack, the Egyptian Sirdar. Hence the senator insisted that Britain did not formally question the council's privilege of ordering an investigation of the Egyptian affair under Article 11 of the League covenant.

PARDEE SAYS LIBERAL AND U.F.O. AIMS ALIKE

Ridiculous That Two Similar Parties Should Be Separated.

AILSACRAIG, Ont., Dec. 12.—Speaking at the annual meeting of the North Middlesex Liberal Association Thursday, Senator F. F. Pardee, of Sarnia declared the time had arrived not only for a resumption of two-party alignment in Ontario but for a wider interest by citizens generally in public affairs.

"What do the U.F.O. want?" he asked. "They want advanced legislation, less taxation and fewer burdens on the people. It is ridiculous that two parties with similar aims should seek to attain their ends by going at each others throats. Liberal governments have not only lived up to these principles but carried them into effect."

Nelson Parliament, M.L.A., spoke along the same line.

J. F. E. Harrison, of Parkhill was elected president and Fred Barrett, of Parkhill secretary treasurer.

SHE'S A MINISTER.

Margaret Pohek Bobbed Like Any Flapper is Very Dignified.

Margaret V. Pohek has bobbed her hair, is 27 and a minister. And she's just dignified enough to believe that the Billy Sunday style of evangelistics is not dignified. She has been preaching in two churches in Maine but is now in Boston and will hold services in several churches. She delivers her sermons simply, but forcefully. And she is not opposed to dancing or theaters.

ENGINEERS RESTIVE.

British Trades Decline to Resume Wage Negotiations.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The engineering trades of Britain are now also restive on the subject of wages. At the meeting today of the representatives of more than thirty unions it was decided to decline the request of the Engineering and Allied Employers National Federation for a resumption of the negotiations held on August 12, last between the representatives of the federation and the engineering trades regarding the men's demands for a national advance of one pound a week.

TO CLOSE UNIVERSITY.

Fresh Outbreaks Reported From Bucharest.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, December 11. — Fresh outbreaks of anti-semitic demonstrations by students have caused the authorities to order the closing of the University of Jessy.

Attempts yesterday by the students to stage a manifestation in Bucharest was checked by the prompt intervention of the military.

The authorities appear apprehensive but seemingly have the situation in hand.

POLICE CLAIMED PROMOTION FOR ELECTION HELP

Ald. Leon Trepanier Told Montreal Court of Enquiry His Own Experience.

NEED A COMMISSION.

Administration of Police Should be Independent of Interference by Council.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12. — There have been police officers promoted for no other reasons than their competence in organizing "telegraph" operations at elections, Ald. Leon Trepanier declared at the police inquiry Thursday, stating that when he was secretary to one of the former boards of control at the City Hall, he had seen these things happen.

Policemen who helped the successful candidate at an aldermanic election, often came to the alderman afterwards, when promotions were open in the force and claimed his help in getting promotion for them. He himself had been so approached. Not one alderman was any better than his neighbors in that respect.

He cited an altercation he heard between the Chief and the executive regarding the proposal to reinstate Capt. Savard, declaring that language had been used then, which might have been interpreted as hinting at threats, and that on that occasion the matter had gone so far that the Chief offered to resign.

The only way to avoid these things, he said, was to make the Chief independent of any influence or interference in the direction of the police force by members of the City Council.

The alderman outlined his idea of a permanent police commission, composed of the Mayor of Montreal, the chief judge of the court of sessions of the peace and the chief justice of the superior court, to appoint the director of public safety, and act as practical advisers to him. They would also protect him and the police department from the patronage system and influences, which the alderman declared to be rampant at the present time.

Would Commission Be Civil?

Mr. Germain: "Would not your commission be ultimately like the civil service commission in Ottawa, where it is recorded that a Minister of the Crown sent a recommendation to the secretary of the commission and the latter replied, 'Will you please mind your own business?' "

Mr. Lanctot: "You don't mean to suggest that the chief justice of the superior court would be so lacking in politeness?"

Mr. Germain: "I do not like to talk about the judges too much."

"Have you ever had personal knowledge, since you have been an alderman, that anyone directly or indirectly influenced the Chief in a dishonest or unworthy manner?" —"Personal knowledge? No."

Continuing, Ald. Trepanier said: "It is often said in aldermanic elections, that if the policemen are on

GERMANY'S MILITARY ACTIVITIES DEFY PEACE TREATY'S TERMS OF DISARMAMENT

French Fear Serious Setback To Rapprochement of Germany and Allies as Result of Discovering Liveliness in Munitions Industries.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—The process of conciliation between Germany and Allies, particularly with France, has received a setback, it is feared in French circles, by the report of the inter-allied military control mission in Germany to the effect that the provision of the Versailles treaty concerning disarmament are not being carried out.

The Allied mission, according to its report, has found that the German staff continues its deliberations, as it did before the war; that the German arms factories are turning out new war material and, that, contrary to the treaty there is in Germany an effective force of soldiers far surpassing the limit fixed by the Versailles pact.

The mission complains of innumerable hindrances put in the way of its work. These hindrances, it was stated, did not, however, prevent it from discovering factories installed for the production of arms and munitions, and the finding of secret stocks of newly-manufactured rifles and cannon.

Ammbassadors' Dilemma

This report, it is understood, will put the council of ambassadors in the dilemma of renouncing the conditions it imposed on itself to transform the mission of control from a military to a civilian body, or of opposing the policy of the present French government which favors immediate transfer of the responsibility for the military control of Germany to the League of Nations.

The opinion in French official circles, is that Germany's activities in re-establishing her military equipment, and keeping up an unauthorized trained force of men is more directly threatening to Poland than to France, because she has less to gain from war than from the conciliatory negotiations which the new French Government has inaugurated and because the revenge feeling in Germany runs much stronger against Poland than against France.

WON NOBEL PRIZE.

Dutch Savant Research in Medicine is Recognized.

Prof. Villem Einthoven of Leyden University is a very serious man. And well he should be, for he has won the Nobel Prize in medicine and physiological research. His research was along electro - cardiogram lines, we are told, and that sounds very serious. The prof was born in 1860, which should make him 64 now. He was 26 when he joined the faculty of Leyden University.

Revues and Jazz Music Drive Drama From Stage

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—All the leading cities of Germany are having an epidemic of revues on the stage, and the old time actors who have nothing to offer the revue managers are in despair. With the exception of Shaw's Saint Joan, there is today no new outstanding dramatic production to be seen in Berlin, and revues and moving picture houses monopolize the theatrical advertising.

The popular shows offer jazz bands and a great variety of foreign dancers, and are giving Germany a medley of London, Paris and New York.

PASTOR DENIES POISON MURDER MIND IS BLANK

Rev. L. M. Hight Repudiates Confession, But Pales at Evidence of Purchase.

"DON'T REMEMBER."

Mrs. Sweetin Hides Face as Story of Crime is Repeated.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., December 12.—The Rev. Lawrence M. Hight took the witness stand here on Wednesday and virtually repudiated his confession that he poisoned his wife and assisted Mrs. Elsie Sweetin in the slaying of her husband.

Before the accused preacher went on the stand testimony had been offered as to his purchase of ten cents worth of arsenic from a clerk in a Benson drug store.

This testimony was given by W. C. Messner, who said that Hight came into the store and asked for arsenic to poison some arts.

The clerk said that he recommended a tube of regular rat poison, but that Hight declined this and asked for ten cents worth of purse arsenic.

This was given him, Messner said, after he had signed the poison book, as prescribed by law.

Pales at Signature.

Hight's emotionless face went white when confronted with his own signed confession and his signature which he gave the drug clerk in receipt for the arsenic, but to all of Prosecutor Thompson's questions he made the convenient reply:

"I don't remember."

He added:

"Whatever I signed, I signed in hope of reward. The minister appointed as my attorney in the church proceedings told me it would be best for me."

Since his arrest he has forgotten everything that relates to the events with Mrs. Sweetin, his pretty parishioner, with whom he spent evenings of romance in an orchard behind her husband's house in Ina, the little village where Hight had his pastorate.

Thompson demanded:

"Did I not tell you anything you said would be used against you "

"I don't remember. Maybe you intended to, but didn't."

Denies any Confession.

"Don't you remeber telling the ministers you killed your wife because she was cold and that you got the got the poison for Elsie Sweetin to give her husband be use she had a warm and affectionate disposition?"

"I don't remember any such statement."

Thompson thundered:

"Do you deny you said it?"

"I don't say I did, and I won't say I didn't. I was so prostrated that I don't remember what happened for about two weeks after I was arrested."

The State was plainly surprised by Hight's testimony. His repeated denials brought gasps from a court-room full of spectators.

Mrs. Sweetin, the co-defendant, sat ruddled down in a seat near the counsel table and veiled a chalky face behind a black-gloved hand. She was dressed in the deepest mourning.

The Rev. J. S. Cummings told of Hight's confession to a committee of Methodist ministers appointed to investigate the crime and who called on Hight at the jail. Cummings said Hight had said:

"I don't know just how it happened. First, I was in the church and Elsie walked down the aisle and I felt a power that I could not resist. Then we vowed our love for each other and I bought the poison. Well, it's all over now and I am in jail. I wrestled all night with God and he has forgiven me. I'm ready to meet the court."

The Rev. Mr. Cummings is white haired and precise. Even his exact recital of Hight's confession could not light a spark of memory in the defendant.

EMPLOYEE SHOT DEAD BY BANDIT

Paymaster Shouted "Robbers" When Ordered to Surrender $9000 Payroll.

ONE CAPTURED.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press). — Howard B. Huff, paymaster at the National Carbon Company, Niagara Falls, N.Y., was murdered hursday afternoon by a bandit, when he shouted "Robbers," instead of obeying the demand to give up the payroll of $9,000. William (Jake) Carpenter, formerly of this city, was captured and held by employees of the plant and turned over to the police.

Three men took part in the robbery, one remaining in a high-powered automobile which waited while two men climbed the stairs to the paymaster's window. One of them pushing an automatic through the window told Buff to turn over the payroll. Instead, he shouted and was shot, one bullet going through his heart and killing him instantly The noise brought others out who grappled with Carpenter and disarmed him. The other rushed down stairs into the car and away. John Noble was picked up by the police on suspicion of being implicated. A search of the district is being made by large bodies of police and deputy sheriffs.

JURY DISAGREED.

THE GUMPS—WELCOME, STRANGER

DARK HORSE IN WARDEN'S RACE

Three Men Mentioned, But Opinion is That Fourth Will Win.

EXPERIENCE HELPS

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—A dark horse is the favorite for the Wardenship of these United Counties for 1925. This may be deduced from the reticence of the present councillors, most of whom have marked their seats in the next council "reserved" and are hoping some luckier individuals do not step in to seize them.

With the reciprocity system working in this particular, the honor should next year be Durham's, whose last representative was Mayor Smith of Port Hope.

Three names have been mentioned tentatively—Reeve James McCamus of Cavan; Reeve W. T. Wood of Millbrook and Reeve M. J. Elliott of Bowmanville, but these do not by any means exhaust the possible candidates. And there is the added hazard that they may not survive the election, although they have all rendered good service in Council.

Reeve Wood has the edge in service, but the other two have favorably impressed constituents and council associates alike with the clarity of their thought and the clear expression of their cases in debate.

Not many of the Councillors have expressed a determination to forsake public life, but some anticipate a change in their spheres of activity. Reeve Charles Davidson of Campbellford, for instance, is being pressed to contest the mayoralty of his town. A Seymour representative is almost determined to forsake public service, but regrets losing the comradeship of Council.

Experience Counts.

In endeavouring to persuade the Seymour man to return next year, Providence and the electors being willing, a companion pointed out the advantage of his experience. "We always pay for new men learning," this man said. "Look at the farmers' government. I voted for it and it turned out worse than the other fellows and we're still paying for it."

The experience gained in a session in Council, this man said, counts in the following year in a quicker grasp of the business in hand and the point at issue, expediting the transaction of business.

FOUR MEN EXECUTED.

Said to be Rebels Under Tiburcio Coello in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press). — General Adolfo Hernandez, also a major and two captains belonging to the rebel forces under Tiburcio Coello have been executed at Pueblo City after a court martial.

A SECOND KREISLER.

Violinist of Savannah Acclaimed By European Critics.

When Arna Segall, of Savannah, Ga., returned to America he wore spats, a very fancy cane and one of those combination collars and neckties which we old fellows used to call stocks. Arno had a perfect right to dress up, for he had just made a successful tour of Europe and was hailed by critics as a very promising violinist, one of them saying he is a second Kreisler.

TEN TIMES CHEAPER AUTO 'GAS' IS FOUND

French War Department Gives 'Carburant' a Test.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Found—Carburant—ten times cheaper than gasoline and with much greater power.

So highly does the French War Department think of the new "gasolessence" invented by Professor Makhounine, that according to Captain Eucadier, in charge of experiments, they have already supplied a hundred heavy ten-ton trucks with the necessary apparatus and intend to equip thousands.

Carburant is simply crude oil from which gasoline and other essences have already been extracted. Hitherto this oil has only been used on roads. The Makhounine process renders it available for use in the same manner as gasoline with 10 per cent. of surplus energy but a thousand per cent cheaper.

It was learned that the process also was being tried in the United States.

BROKE WORLD RECORD.

Adjutant Bonnet Flies Kilometer at 258 Miles an Hour.

MARSEILLES, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press). — Adjutant Bonnet, French aviator, broke the world's speed record for one kilometer for airplanes at Bas Istres Airdrome yesterday with an average of 448.170 kilometers per hour (about 258.3 miles per hour).

The former record was 429.026 kilometers.

MORE MEETINGS OF ALLOWANCE BOARD

Fifteen Applications From Durham County Widows For Assistance.

MILLBROOK December 11. — A meeting of the Mothers' Allowances' Board for the County of Durham, was held recently at Bowmanville, the president, F. W. Galbraith, of Port Hope, presiding.

Fifteen applications had been received during the year, the secretary, Mrs. A. L. Nichols, reported, and others were dealt with at the meeting.

The rather infrequent meetings of the Board were commented upon and the decision arrived at to call the members together at more regular intervals in the future.

Only a widow with two or more dependent children has a claim likely to receive favorable consideration under the provisions of the act.

The same board was re-elected for 1925, the members including:

Chairman, F. W. Galbraith, Port Hope.

Vice chairman, W. A. Van Camp, Burketon.

Secretary, Mrs. A. L. Nichols, Bowmanville.

Five representatives are required for the county, Mr. H. Bland, of Ida, and Miss Pearl Burnham of Millbrook, completing the quota.

Regarding the social values of the Mothers' Allowances Act, the last annual report has the following to say: "In many houses an entirely new atmosphere has been created; new furnishings have replaced shappy or scanty articles; rough floors that were difficult to clean have been covered; whole clothes have replaced ragged ones; cleanliness and neatness await the visitor instead of untidiness—all because the mothers have at their disposal time and strength formerly spent in the struggle to keep the family warmed and fed. They have time to buy economically; to sew where before they had to buy ready-made articles; time to cook wholesome dishes instead of buying so much canned goods. One mother said "I can save almost as much as I used to earn because while I was at work the children wasted food, and burned more gas than I did."

It is necessary for all applicants to have two years' continuous residence in Ontario immediately prior to date of application for help. It is gratifying to note that the vast majority of the beneficiaries have proved worthy of the allowance and give good care to their children. Supervision is constantly necessary in some cases but only in very few has it been necessary to cancel allowance because of the mother's unfitness for the benefit conferred.

LINER FEARED LOST.

Italian Steamer Concordia Lost Its Captain and May Have Foundered.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.)— The captain of the Italian liner Concordia has been lost at sea and the ship itself may have been wrecked in the opinion of Capt. Konrad Luck, of the Hamburg-American liner Westphalia which arrived here yesterday, two days late, after a stormy crossing.

The Westphalia was unable to get radio responses to offers of assistance from the Concordia a few minutes after the Italian liner had reported its captain's loss. The exchange of messages took place during a raging gale, which prevented the Westphalia beating its way to the aid of the other liner.

LOVE LETTERS ON IVORY.

Romance of a Gladiator of Pompeii.

A remarkable collection of love letters inscribed on ivory tablets, which has just been unearthed among the ruins of Pompeii, throws an interesting light on life in the ancient city.

One of these missives, addressed by a patrician admirer named Julia to Strax, a notablt gladiator, runs as follows: "More beautiful art thou than rosy Aurora in her garments of perfume. It love thee for thy prowess and for the fire that is emitted from thy splendid eyes, thou exquisite specimen of Britannia's manly beauty. Thou must be Phoebus Apollo reincarnated in the body of Hercules.

"I am young, and my admirers, whom I detest, say that I am beautiful. My chairbearers will be at thy door at sundown. They will carry thee to the temple of Isis, where I await thy arrival."

KILLED AT CROSSING.

Snow Obscured John Harris' View of C. N. Passenger Train.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—His view of the approaching east-bound Canadian National Railway passenger train, obscured by heavily falling snow, John Harris, of Port Credit, met instant death early last evening when the motor car he was driving was hit at a level crossing. Harris, who was about 35 years of age, and married, was inspector for the Casualty Company of Canada.

WORK IN QUARRIES.

Will Be Provided By Kingston For Unemployed.

KINGSTON, Ont., December 12.—Mayor Angrove stated on Thursday that as a further means of relieving the unemployment problem in the city, one or more of the stone quarries are to be opened and stone broken during the winter months. The mayor explained that the usual cost of stone to the Board of Works was about $14 per toise (6.39 feet) and the stone broken during the winter will eventually be handed over to the Board of Works at that price. The actual cost of the stone to the city will be slightly over this amount, the increase being borne by the city poor relief.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE

WASHINGTON, (United Press). Brazil, where most of the world's rubber supply is grown, is one of the leading customers of the United States for automobile tires and other manufactured rubber goods.

Argentine, however, appears to be turning to automobiles faster than any other foreign country on the western hemisphere, United States exports of auto casings reached a new high mark in the month of October, according to department of commerce reports, Argentina importing 21,531 of them.

MEAT TRADE VEILED 'VAMPIRE' MURDERS

Landlady Knew Nothing of "Death Shop"—Boy Relates Ogre's Ghastly Threat.

COURTROOM, Hanover, Dec. 12.—A butcher shop where Fritz Harrmann, the meat vendor, practised his trade upon human beings was the picture which took form Wednesday before judge and jury in the trial of the vulture murderer.

This horrible phase of Harrmann's years-long experience as a killer for pleasure and gain had been indicated in previous testimony, despite the pre-trial announcement that the prosecution intended to delete some of the more ghastly aspects of his disposition of the bodies of his twenty-seven victims.

Frau Engel, the mild-mannered little landlady who testified she knew nothing of the murder shop Harrmann made of his little attic room, was the prosecution's star witness to-day, and told of Harrmann's meat sales ,always at the lowest prices.

Kurt Fromm, the boy who escaped from Harrmann and thus brought police action, told how he lay in Harrmann's bed while Harrmann laughingly flourished a butcher knife and asked him:

"Are you afraid for your life?"

SETTELL'S PRISON JOB.

Will Likely Be Employed in Deputy Warden's Office.

KINGSTON, Ont., December 12. — It is understood that Clarence E. Settell, who is now serving a term in the Portsmouth penitentiary, has been given a trial in the accountant's office but owing to the fact that he knows very little of bookkeeping he will not be employed in this department and will probably be placed in the office of the deputy warden.

TAKE IN DOMINIONS.

Baldwin Will Announce Plans For System of Consultation.

LONDON, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press).—In the House of Commons yesterday, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin replying to a question stated that the government was communicating with the governments of the dominions and he hoped to make statements shortly regarding proposals for preliminary inquiry into a system of consultation on matters of foreign policy as outlined by J. H. Thomas, former secretary for the colonies on July 10th.

It is expected that a companion measure for northern Ireland will be in augurated later.

OBITUARY

W. GAUCHER.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 12.—On Thursday morning about 4 o'clock, W. Gaucher, in his 27th year, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gaucher, of Seymour Township, near Meyersburg, died at his home, after a long illness of eight years. About eight years ago he was working in the Trent Valley Woollen Mills (now the Campbellford Cloth Company), and in lifting a heavy bail hurt his back. He has been ill and suffering from that time up to the present. For the last six years he has been confined to his bed, either at home or in the hospital. He has been a great sufferer, especially the last three days, when he welcomed death as a happy release. Besides his parents, he leaves one brother, James, at home, and one sister, Mrs. Gordoneer, who lives in Belleville.

The funeral will be held this afternoon, service at the house at 2 o'clock.

DURANT SAID TO BE BIG WINNER

Mr. Durant's speculative successes have been the talk of Wall Street, particularly in view of his remarkable "come-back" from a financial standpoint, since 1921. At that time, when he was affiliated with General Motors, of which he had already lost and regained control, he was caught on the long side of the market in the drastic deflation which followed post-war inflation. His speculative holdings at that time were taken over by bankers, his stock, mostly of General Motors, being delivered to the bankers from forty-four brokerage accounts. Subsequently the Morgan and du Pont interest emerged in control of General Motors. Mr. Durant is said at that time to have taken the greatest loss in the stock market of any single individual in the history of speculation. In brokerage gossip it has been placed as high as $125,000,000.

After this unsuccessful venture Mr. Durant started his own motor company and appealed to his friends throughout the country to buy the stock. At the same time he inaugurated the sale of the so-called "units" of stock. The shares of the Durant Company have not been particularly brilliant market actors despite Mr. Durant's own success in other directions. The Durant stock which once sold above 50 on the Curb, now is quoted around 15, and is more or less dormant in the market.

SHARING THE BURDEN.

Except from those immediately affected by it, there will be little complaint in regards to the announcement from Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Works, that the Government expects from motor truck owners a much larger contribution toward highway maintenance than from the average motorist.

It has long been contended that while heavy trucks are responsible for much of the wear and tear on the roads because of their weight and that of the large cargoes they carry, the owners have not paid anything like their share of the cost of upkeep.

Hon. Mr. Henry confirms this statement that, declaring that the amount at present paid by truck owners for road construction is scarcely one per cent. of the cost of operation.

Undoubtedly a tax on gasoline is the agency upon which the Minister will depend to secure from owners of trucks their fair share of the burden.

This seems the simplest and most equitable means of dividing the cost of road construction and maintenance, inasmuch as the motorists who used the roads most will feel the levy much more than the automobilist who takes his car out two or three times a week.

As the mileage of motor trucks is much greater than that of the average family car and the consumption of gasoline is correspondingly larger, the owners will perforce have to contribute more generously.

A NEW POLICY.

Ontario motorists will be interested in the action of the British Columbia Legislature in introducing a new policy in regard to traffic regulations.

The Pacific Coast Province has adopted the method used in France by eliminating all reference to speed limits from the Act and requiring motorists to drive their cars in such a manner as to avoid menace to public safety.

There is no restriction as to speed.

A motorist can drive at 45 miles an hour if the conditions are such as to make that speed safe, having regard to the welfare of others.

On the other hand, driving at five miles an hour may be considered an offence under the Act where the circumstances as such as to call for low speed and care.

It is provided that three convictions will result in the suspension or cancellation of the license of the offending party.

The working out of the new policy will be followed with great interest throughout Canada.

It is in line with the opinion of many drivers and traffic experts who favour the elimination of the speed regulations and the judging of each case in accordance with the particular conditions affecting it.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION.

The Examiner called attention the other day to the fact as announced by the Citizens' Research Institute that the municipalities of Canada raised in taxes alone well over $175,000,000 in 1922.

This money, it should not be forgoten, represented money taken from the pockets of taxpayers to defray the costs of civic services not borne by any other revenue, and it figures out at the rate of about $100 for the average family of five.

Municipal taxation, it is true, is only part of the taxpayers' burden—the Provinces and the Federal Government require their share.

But it is the part over which the taxpayer, if he wishes to exercise his power, has the most direct control.

The civic machinery is there for him to watch work.

He may see the money being spent and the results of the expenditure.

He knows the men who are actually doing the spending.

If the taxpayer then cannot produce results in controlling municipal taxation, how can be hope to affect Provincial and national taxation?

It is not merely an affair of shifting the burden onto the shoulders of others.

The vital need of the present period is to cut taxation.

This perhaps cannot be done permanently.

Twenty-five years from now taxation will probably be higher than it is now, as society discovers new needs for which it demands satisfaction.

But it can be cut now for a period long enough to give business and industry a chance to recover, to give an impetus to immigration, to help stem the current of emigration and to establish a firm basis for a long period of healthy expansion.

The thing will, however, not do it itself. It will require planning and effort.

WHAT THAT HAMILTON CASE MEANS.

For months Hamilton police were puzzled over the murder of Joe Baytoizae, for which crime his wife and four foreigners are now in custody waiting trial on the charge of murder. Not in years has there been more pathetic evidence than that given by the woman's seven-year-old son, who, looking out of his bedroom door, witnessed what is claimed to have been the striking down of his father and the subsequent removal of his body.

There is no desire on the part of the public to prejudge the case, because in the eyes of the law the accused are innocent until their guilt has been established, but this is not the first or the second or the third case of its kind in Hamilton and other cities where the foreign population has been allowed to huddle together in one section, says the London Advertiser.

Police who are attached to the station in that district of Hamilton where this murder is claimed to have occurred are frank in their statements that they find work very difficult. Foreigners who are law-abiding citizens are afraid to say anything of wrong-doing they know is taking place, for if they were found out they would be marked men.

What is a city to do with such a population? Those living in the residential sections, so-called, would be up in arms if a move were made to scatter the foreign population all over the city. The truth is that there are immigrants from some foreign nations that bring with them their customs and ideas to such an extent that they cannot be made Canadian citizens. They have greater freedom in Canada than they had in the land from which they came, and they use it for their own selfish purposes.

The case in Hamilton is important in so far as the clearing up of one miserable murder is concerned, but it opens the larger field of the desirability of admitting only such people to this country as are likely to become good, law-abiding citizens, who are prepared to live in a land of freedom under laws of freedom, and forsake their customs and habits of plotting against the lives and property of others.

The Immigration Department could very well take this Hamilton case under advisement because it is a concrete illustration of what happens when Canada is not able to assimilate foreigners. A newcomer is not an asset, but a distinct liability, when his presence makes it necessary to hire more policemen to watch him.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore has returned to the stage of British politics. One of the earliest acts of the Labor Government on assuming office was to hiss the project off the boards with a swiftness and a decision that left no room for doubt as to their sentiments, while the first act of the Tories on returning to power is to bring the plan back to the centre of the stage and turn upon it the limelight of publicity.

Labor will naturally oppose the resuscitation of the scheme, although it is likely that nine months of office and responsibility, nine months of observation of Empire currents and Empire secrets from the inside, with the acquisition of a vast amount of knowledge that would otherwise have remained hidden have modified the views that their leaders formerly held. Labor's opposition may be a little less vigorous, but it will be unmistakable and sustained. The Liberals, through the pact made by Mr. Asquith with Labor, are also committed to opposition, and Lloyd George may be expected t odon the mantle laid down by his former leader. Yet neither the attacks of Labor nor the challenge of the Liberals will cause Mr. Baldwin to deviate a hair's breadth from his determination to carry through a proposal to which his party is definitely pledged.

The Admiralty has urged construction of the base for many years past as necessary for the mobility of the fleet. On three successive occasions the Committee of Imperial Defence has endorsed this view and three successive Governments approved the project. The Imperial Conference went on record that it "takes note of the deep interests of the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand and of India in the provision of a naval base at Singapore as essential for insuring the mobility necessary to provide security for the territories and trade of the Empire in Eastern waters."

When the plan was discussed in the British House Ramsay MacDonald admitted that his action was opposed to the concensus of opinion in Australia, New Zealand and Newfoundland and that "when the Canadian Government was approached it preferred to abstain from any opinion on abandonment." Canada has not modified that attitude, and although the Ottawa Government has shown no signs of enthusiasm over the scheme, it has not categorically opposed it.

Yet what can Canada do so long as she persists in her attitude of not subscribing a single penny towards the cost of construction? The astonishing Mr. Woodsworth did, indeed, gravely ask the Canadian Government two years ago if Canada "acquiesced" in the Singapore policy of the British Government, but why Canada should "acquiesce" in a policy which not even its opponents deny must strengthen the mobility of the British fleet, but towards which the Dominion is not contributing a single penny, it is a little difficut to conceive.

The only ground on which Mr. MacDonald's Government rejected the scheme was that it was undesirable to carry it out on political grounds. He punctured the criticism that the proposal infringed the Washington Treaty by openly stating that in his opinion "that argument was not sound." The disclosures of those who took part in the Washington Conference have made it abundantly clear that every delegate to that conference knowing of the Singapore project definitely set the limits of the neutral zone of the Pacific at the 110th meridian which left Singapore just outside that zone and that they did so with a full understanding that such a clause was an invitation to Britain to fortify Singapore.

Labor in Britain and Mr. Woodsworth and his group in Canada hint darkly at the challenge to Japan. They might just as reasonably talk of the challenge of France to England when she mounts guns that will reach the shores of Britain on her north-eastern defences. Singapore is not a challenge, but is the prudence of the fore-warned in anticipation of a possible contingency. Britain may have one day to protect India and the Empire against a revolt of China or Japan to overthrow the white race and dethrone its rulers from the world throne. In such an event—which God forbid—the value of Singapore would be inestimable. For the insurance of the life of the Empire, the cost of Singapore is a small price to pay. —Montreal Star.

Judging by some of the comment in the Sun-Times, there are those who doubt if all the space in the new school will be used. There need be no worry on that score, as the history of vocational schools is that the rooms fill up rapidly and the problem then becomes one of finding more space.—London Advertiser.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—The market closes the week steady on all kinds of butchers cattle except canners, which have come in this week in unusual volume. A good supply of baby beeves were on sale and the packers took them at $8.00 to $11.00 a cwt. For a small bunch of export steers $7.25 was paid. Export cows cost $4.75 and two bulls $3.75 and $4.50 a cwt. Canner cows sold at $1.75 to $2, and a quantity of bologna bulls $2.50 and $3.00 a cwt.

The small supply of calves left no market worth while this morning. One good calf sold at 11 cents and any others were steady at the quoted prices.

The packers are down on the heavy lambs and were not making even a bid for these today with about 700 for sale. The light choice lambs hold steady, but the packers' buyers are asking 10 cents a pound on the heavy lambs. Handyweight sheep are a good property at 7 to 7½ cents a pound.

Over 11,000 hogs came in for the week, but the price has firmed and some hogs sold on Wednesday at $9.15 to $9.25 a cwt. f.o.b. The packers' bid stands at $9.00 f.o.b. and $10 a cwt. off cars.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:

Sir,—Principal D. J. Fraser, President of the Presbyterian Church Association, has declared that he is neither a "Modernist" nor a "Fundamentalist." He compiains bitterly of being classified as a "Modernist," and says that those who thus classify him are "guilty of an unjust and unbrotherly act." What kind of an act does Dr. Fraser regard that of the authors of the notorious "Kew Beach Pamphlet," issued under the name of the Presbyterian Church Association, of which he is President? That pamphlet contained a most scurrilous attack upon his Methodist brethren. It declared that the Methodist Church was "apostate" and applied other unjust and unbrotherly epithets to the doctrinal views of Methodists. This pamphlet was circulated with the full knowledge of the leaders of anti-unionism and for verification of its charges readers were referred to the anti-unionist headquarters, St. Andrew's church, King street, Toronto.

Similar attacks have been made by anti-unionist speakers and letter writers upon leading Presbyterian ministers, and no word of admonition or correction came from the chief leader of anti-unionism. It is significant that his present protest is published in self-defense, merely. Dr. Fraser speaks of the "present acrimonious debate" and "this distressing controversy." The acrimony was injected into the debate by those who started it—by his own followers who published the slanderous pamphlet against the Methodist Church. "This distressing controversy" was started by the followers of Dr. Fraser, who have been most bitter in their letters and speeches, while the Unionists have tried to be good-humored and reasonable.

Allow me to place before your readers a statement of Dr. Fraser's position, by Dr. Fraser himself. I do so in no acrimonious spirit, and with no intention of accusing Dr. Fraser of "apostacy" or "Modernism," I merely quote it and leave your readers to judge where Dr. Fraser stands between the "Fundamentalists" and the "Modernists."

"A sign of the times is that thoughtful men are forsaking the church, because they are not intellectually ministered to. They find that the pulpits are often making emotional appeals with little regard for scientific accuracy of statement; or that they are using the old terminology which has no meaning to the modern mind. Our best religious leaders are feeling the urgency of training our preachers in modern criticism, the new psychology, the latest science, in order that they may not insult the intelligence of their educated hearers."

The above is an extract from a sermon recently delivered by Principal Fraser in Knox Church, St. John, New Brunswick and published in the local papers. If I were asked whether I would class Dr. Fraser as a "Modernist," I would reply that she thus classifies himself in the above statement, but every reader has the right of private judgment.

Let those Presbyterians whose minds have been disturbed by the accusation of "Modernism" against the United Church ask themselves whether they are strengthening their position as "fundamentalists" by leaving their parent church for a new denomination under the leadership of Dr. Fraser.

The Editor, Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I notice in your issue of Saturday the 6th inst., a letter signed by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Centreville. My name, along with others, is freely mentioned and as Rev. Mr. McConnachie singles me out in a special manner, I desire to frankly explain the facts.

Mr. J. Hutchison, to whom reference was made, was born and lived for many years in the Centreville district and was a member of Centreville Congregation. He has many friends, and also, relatives in the locality with whom he has discussed the matter of Church Union on a number of occasions. Among his relatives was his brother-in-law, who some time since expressed a desire that Mr. Hutchison should invite Mr.

Cowan and myself to meet a few members of the congregation in his home, in a purely informal way. The purpose was to discuss certain phases of the Church Union question in which such keen interest is being taken.

Some time later, having an evening free, we decided to motor down, Mr. Hutchison accompanying us. On the way we stopped at the homes of three friends of Mr. Hutchison and of his brother-in-law, who were invited to accompany us. This they did.

We went to the home of Mr. Hutchison's brother-in-law, where we discussed, in a purely informal way, various provisions of the Church Union Bill. Such action is the privilege of every member of the Church. It is what tens of thousands of other people, unionists as well as anti-unionists, are doing all over the Dominion. It was not until after we had been there some little time that we were informed that arrangements had been made the night before for a joint debate in Centreville by outside speakers on the Church Union question. In spite of Rev. Mr. McConnachie's assertion to the contrary, the visit was in no way official nor can it be regarded as such, especially as no action of any kind was taken nor was any suggested. Rev. Mr. McConnachie seems to resent the fact that he was not consulted in the matter. As he had already signed the affirmation, declaring his intention to enter the United Church, it was hardly to be expected that he would be, especially as the meeting was one of laymen.

Rev. Mr. McConnachie assumes that members of Presbyterian congregations holding any form of office, who are opposed to Church Union, have no right to discuss this tremendously important matter with officers of any other Presbyterian Congregation holding similar view, even in the privacy of their own homes. The assumption is not to be entertained. Such a contention is untenable in view of the fact that ministers supporting Union who are moderators of different sessions, are continually calling on each other to discuss ways and means of lining up their respective congregations in favour of Church Union.

Rev. Mr. McConnachie states, "there was no invitation, even the second visit was unauthorized." In this he has been misinformed. The day following our first visit, our host of the night before, gave us a cordial invitation to visit his home again the following week to meet some of his friends who had expressed a desire to obtain further information regarding the Church Union Bill, a copy of which, like thousands of others, they had never seen. We accepted this invitation, believing as we still do, that we were acting well within the right of any British citizen, whose view is that every man's home is his castle.

Having occupied his pulpit on several previous occasions at his request, Rev. Mr. McConnachie accuses me of having taken an unfair advantage of his courtesy in this respect. May I point out to Mr. McConnachie that on such occasions I have never mentioned the matter of Church Union in any shape or form, from his pulpit nor to any member of his congregation during my visits to his Church. Further, in every case when I have been invited to preach in either Methodist or Presbyterian Churches I have confined myself on the Lord's Day to the preaching of the evangel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Everything else is common and trivial, compared with this. If my acceptance of such invitations involves my being precluded from discussing this matter at other times, with those who desire to discuss it with me, I shall be obliged to decline any further invitations to occupy pulpits until the Church Union question has been settled.

Regarding my having to answer to Presbytery for anything I have done I am quite prepared to justify my action before this court of the church.

It seems to me that Unionist ministers are fearful of the issues involved. They are endeavoring to repress every effort that is being made to give information to members of their congregation. They are afraid to trust the people. In their zeal they are in some instances taking advantage of the opportunity offered by their preaching services to preach Church Union in one form or another and then, when members of their congregation ask for the use of their own Church for the purpose of holding meetings so that an opportunity may be given the other side to present their case, they are denied this privilege. Is that British justice or fair play?

This attitude is one of the contributary reasons for the growing opposition to Church Union. The Presbyterian Church is essentially a people's church and in this great issue there is a growing feeling in many quarters that the people are being ignored.

I regret that Rev. Mr. McConnachie thought it advisable to discuss this matter through the press. Relationship existing between him and myself has been, and still is, as far as I am concerned, most cordial It is my hope that even our strong differences on the Church Union question will not mar our Christian fellowship.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Asthere has been a lot of wind about the result of the West Hastings by-election and as I covered a good part of the constituency in a business way during the campaign, I must say that it was not the bombosh of cabinet ministers that the people of Canada are paying a high price to manage their departments or the O.T.A. that caused the result, it was the outstanding personality of the Liberal candidate and the good Conservatives paving the way for the general election the good people of West Hastings and also Peterboro do not want to be represented by anyone who will not spend any time in framing up any evidence to protect any scoundrel or to take the precious time of a sitting court in asking questions foreign to the case to discredit the witness. I hope at least that one of the parties in the constituency of Peterboro, in choosing their candidate will choose one of an outstanding personality, coupled up with ability, be it man or woman.

Mr. O. Flynn in addressing a liberal meeting said they were looking to the women to clean up the politics of Canada. This was well said, and our only women members with all her peculiarities has set a noble example in standing true to her principle on the sessional allowance. Canada's divorce laws, Murdock charges in which the only evidence necessary is embodied in ten words Murdock said to his stenographer—Take this money and deposit it in your own name—also in her leadership in the ginger group of ten that made the protest to the progressive party for joining hands with a wobbling government to hold it in power. Thanking you.

I remain yours, etc.
W. H. MERRILL.

POLICE CLAIMED PROMOTION

your side you are all right. I had good policemen in my ward and worked hard for me and did not ask or seem to expect any recompense, but later when promotions were in view, some of them came to me and asked me to help them, because they had helped me in the election.

J. A. A. Belanger, former chief of detectives for six months at the end of 1918, told the commission of having suspended Morel, recently hanged with the Hochelaga Bank bandits, for having had dealings with a bandit whom witness considered the then detective had put up "to do a job." He also stated that the police union had paid Morel's salary for a year after his suspension and made him a vice-president of the union.

Start New Life.

Cross-examination by Alban Germain, Mr. Belanger said he thought that much good work could be done by establishing some system of helping girls who had been taken from disorderly houses to get work of some kind other than the unsavory business they had been in. If that were done, many of them would gladly leave that life and take to honorable means of living. He did not know exactly what positions the girls could get right away.

He agreed that it was difficult to get at the man who was living from the fruit of these women's occupation. He remembered the law that existed during the war, under which everyone was required to do some useful work, and was subject to punishment if he did not. He admitted that it was correct that about 90 per cent. of those charged in court under that law were acquitted, as they were easily able to prove that they were agents for firms selling things on commission and so on. There were so many firms that advertised regularly for agents to sell their products on commission that it was easy for any one to get an agency of that sort and pretend they were earning a living by it.

350 Houses Recorded.

Answering questions by John Sullivan, the witness agreed that he had always been opposed to the police union on principle. He remembered their having continued to pay Morel's salary for a year after he had been dismissed from the police force, and had made Morel vice-president of their union, although he was under suspension. Further questioned by Mr. Brossard he said he remembered the union having subscribed funds to support certain election candidates. Men like, for instance, Alderman Sansregret, who was a union candidate at the election, were more likely, in the opinion of the witness, to favor a union policeman than a non-union man, if they had a chance to give any favor.

Joseph Tremblay, former director of public safety, stated that he had held that position for eight months. At the beginning of his term he had taken a census of the disorderly houses known to the police and recorded about 350.

He started out raiding the houses and in the first two months raided about 250 of them. At first he had followed the same procedure as his predecessor and found evidence that the people in the houses were being warned in advance that the raids were to take place. Then he instituted new methods, putting the present Chief Belanger at the head of the work, and taking precautions to prevent the houses being warned of the coming raids. He continued throughout his period of service to raid the houses steadily, and many of the houses went under because they could not stand the financial strain of continual arrests and fines.

Disposition Is Problem.

Asked as to the problem of disposing of these women when they were removed from the houses of ill-fame, Mr. Tremblay agreed that this was a grave problem. There were anything from 1,000 to 2,000 women who would be turned out on the street, if a serious effort were made to finally close out the houses in the red-light district. It was impossible to dump them in the river. What was to be done with them?

"I brought a good number of these women to my office after raiding houses, and questioned them. I talked of what brought them to this kind of life, and tried to show them the abyss they were falling into, asking them if they did not want to abandon that life. Many of them said, 'Yes, we will quit if you will give us a means of living.' Others said, 'We quit once before and went to work, but as anyone found out what we had formerly been, we were thrown out.'

"If a house of refuge existed in which women could be detained in the first place, and means taken of teaching them some way of earning a living decently, it would help. Then you would need some person or organization ready to extend a charitable hand to help them along and encourage them when they went out into the world to earn their own living again.

Could Close Houses.

"Do you believe the red-light district should be closed?" he was asked. "I believe it should be closed, but not by scattering these women all over the city," he answered.

He agreed that these houses could be shut down by continually prosecuting them until the strain of repeated fines broke them down financially.

"Another feature, however, that you must consider," he added, "is that this, like tuberculosis, is a scourge that you cannot deal with by attempts to cure the suffering alone. You must deal with it by preventive measures. That means studying the causes that lead up to commercial vice.

"A young woman who works from early in the morning until a late hour in the evening, and comes home to a little, restricted, uninviting place that is all the home she has, and does not find it attractive to spend her evenings there, has no other place to go but to the street, the movies and the dance-halls, many of which are the hunting-grounds of procurers.

"What opportunity has such a girl to find decent amusement and recreation in her evenings within the reach of her purse? There is nothing that I know of, except parish circles run by Catholic priests and the Y.W.C.A., where an admirable work is done providing pleasant surroundings and opportunities for entertainment for working girls.

Provide Decent Amusement.

"Girls can meet friends there, dance and have entertainment in conditions of strictest morality, and at a cost within the reach of a limited purse."

That was one of the essential steps to remedy the evil, Mr. Tremblay believed, provide young working girls with decent, honest amusement within the reach of their purse.

"Then there is also the question of wages," he continued. "When girls are paid a matter of $6 a week wages and expected to dress well on that money, they have little alternative but to eke out their earnings by vice."

FOUND TWELVE BOTTLES.

Liquor Was Hidden Under Brush—Owner of Land Charged.

COBOURG, Dec. 12.— Twelve bottles of apparently good whiskey were found by License Inspector Goodrich and Provincial Constable T. W. Gousans in a search of a swamp near Lake Scugog, and as a result William Parr is charged with an offense under the O.T.A. He will appear tomorrow before Magistrate Floyd sitting at Blackstock.

The liquor was hidden under some underbrush and gave the law enforcement officers a pretty hunt, they say.

GREASE DISHES WELL.

Grease well the dishes in which you bake cakes or puddings in which there is molasses, as molasses scorches much more easily than sugar.

PEOPLE FAIL TO REPORT DISEASE

M. O. H. of Cobourg Points Out Result in Epidemic.

SPREAD CONTAGION

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—Edgar W. Hayden, Medical Health Officer of the township of Hamilton, has opened a campaign for the education of children in prevention of disease, and is also urging upon citizens the necessity of their reporting promptly and in good faith all cases of contageous disease. He comments favorably on the conditions in the schools and expressed great appreciation of the attention paid to him in his lectures on health subjects given to the pupils.

During the year there were 48 births and 33 deaths. There were 3 deaths under 1 year of age, which is at the rate of 63 per 1000.

Neglect Means Epidemic.

Through neglect of people to give notice of the first cases, there is at present an epidemic of mumps and chickenpox. This deliberate neglect causes Dr Hayden to issue a strong warning of the health menace and the legal trouble that may follow, stigmatizing it as gross carelessness and an appalling condition.

His aim in talking to the children in the schools he said, is principally to quietly impress upon them this need for notification.

CAMPBELLFORD TOWN MAY PAY BRIDGE BILLS

Whole Amount Must Be Paid and Town Will Await Rebate.

GALLANT FIGHT

Reeve Davidson Carries Contention to Government—Unexpected Demand.

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—Discussion of the liability of Campbellford to pay $4,000 to the counties on account of the bridge was renewed yesterday in counties council, and it appeared that the only relief would come from the department of roads and bridges of the provincial government.

The question first arose on Tuesday when Counties Treasurer MacNachtan submitted his report on the financial standing of the counties. Campbellford was shown as debtor in the amount of $4,000.

Reeve Charles Davidson objected to this, saying that the amount due by his town should be compiled after the 40 per cent grant from the government was deducted.

Warden W. M. Fowlds at that time pointed out that the counties had already paid the total due for erection of the bridge, and that it might be a year before the government paid its 40 per cent share. It was suggested that Campbellford pay its total and obtain the rebate when received by the counties from the government.

Objection Useless.

Reeve Davidson was not satisfied with the arangement and yesterday re-opened the question. Cudgels were taken up on his behalf by the Warden and other members of the Council in an effort to have the town billed for 25 per cent of 60 per cent of the total. This would represent the exact amount due, and the amount figured on by the town in entering on construction.

Apparently, however, this arrangement is impossible, and unless relief is obtained through the government department Campbellford will be compelled to pay the full amount and await a rebate of 40 per cent. The question is being pursued by Reeve Davidson today in the hope that he may yet be able to avert what he considers the imposition of a condition not explained or recognized by the town.

COUNTIES JUDGE TAKES HIS SEAT

Judge Cameron, Succeeding Judge Ward, Has Brilliant Record.

WROTE TREATISE

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—His Honor Judge Cameron, newly appointed judge of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, has had a distinguished career, and takes the position as the latest in a long line of brilliant men. Judge Boswell presided in this court for forty years; his successor, Judge Clarke, retired to become chief counsel of the C.P.R.; Judge Benson, tutor of the members of the bar today; Judge Ketchum, son of a Coborne pioneer, and Judge Roger, son of Rev. Mr. Roger of Peterborough. Judge Roger held the position for twelve years.

His Honor Judge Cameron is a son of one of the most outstanding men in Canada. His father was lieutenant-governor of the North West Territories and his grandfather was the Hon. Malcolm Cameron, distinguished in the history of the province.

Judge Cameron himself has marked himself by a treatise on the law of Dover. He served successively as member of the town council, reeve and mayor, and member of the legislature for two terms in 1902 and 1905. He was appointed K.C. in 1902, served on the commission for revising the statutes of Canada and one of the board of examiners to the law society.

Judge Cameron's immediate predecessor, Judge Ward, has served ten years as judge after a splendid career in parliament, in the militia, at the bar and in connection with Trinity College School. He has now retired from the bench and is resuming his practice of law.

NO ACCOMPLICES IN MURDER OF MIDWAY

Members of Counties Council Don't Approve Motherwell's Sentiments.

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—Commenting on the statement made by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture that he would sweep away all midways from fall fairs, several members of the Counties, Council today told The Examiner they could not see the point in the attack.

"I would like to see the whole midway swept away altogether," was the declaration made by Mr. Motherwell.

G. S. Vanvolkenburg, a member of the Board of Directors of Seymour admitted that the midway takes away interest from the exhibits and money from the community. While midway attractions may be necessary in cities, he said, the farmers and their wives are sufficiently interested in their business to inspect the agricultural exhibits without a spread of midway jam.

Deputy Reeve J. L. Dorie of Campbellford could see no object in Mr. Motherwell's denunciation, as in his opinion the midway adds to the gate receipts.

Thomas Patterson of Clarke township, a member of the Agricultural Society, would like Mr. Motherwell to explain his stand, as it seems to him altogether without reason.

DR. NORVALS STOMACH TONIC TABLETS.

People who are suffering from constipation, billiousness or sick headache are sometimes in doubt what remedy to take to relieve these ailments. You should have no hesitation in asking your druggist what he thinks of Dr. Norvals stomach and tonic tablets and he will tell you as a laxative and tonic tablet they have no equal. Ask your neighbour and in all probability they will tell you their home is never without Dr Norval's stomach and liver pills. Test them for yourself and if they fail to do what we claim, return the bottle to the dealer and he will refund your money.

Kellogg's Bran did more in two weeks than medicine taken in 20 years

Out of regard for your own health, read this letter:

Dear Sirs:

Your "Krumbled Bran," used by me as a cereal, has done more for me in two weeks than the hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine I have taken in last twenty years for constipation. It is wonderful, and it is so simple.

Yours truly,
Arlington H. Carman.
(Address on Request.)

Mr. Carman's experience has been duplicated in thousands of homes. Why does Kellogg's Bran succeed when drugs and pills fail? The answer is simple. Drugs have an unnatural effect upon the bowels. They irritate the intestines. The more they are used, the more one has to use. Finally, they have no effect at all.

Kellogg's Bran STIMULATES the intestines. It cleans, sweeps and purifies them. It acts exactly as nature acts. And it is never necessary to increase the amount eaten. If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran is guaranteed to bring permanent relief to the most chronic cases of constipation, or your grocer returns your money. For Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be so effective. That is why doctors recommend Kellogg's.

The wonderful, nut-like flavor of Kellogg's Bran is exclusive. It is delicious—totally unlike ordinary brans. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream and in the recipes on every package. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Toronto, Canada. Sold by all grocers.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY AUXILIARY MEETING

Millbrook Methodist Women Meet at Mrs. P. Stinson's Home.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11.—The December meeting of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. Stinson, over forty members being in attendance.

The president, Mrs. (Rev.) F. W. Howard, occupied the chair for the opening business and worship period, after which group D, Mrs. T. H. Aiken convener, provided the programme.

Mrs. Stinson, Mrs. Harvey Aiken, and Miss Martha Lunn gave brief selections from the third chapter of the study book, "China's Real Revolution," and Miss Nellie Hetherington followed with a comprehensive synopsis of the fourth chapter.

A vocal solo by Miss Ethel Richardson was much enjoyed, as were the piano selections which Miss Richardson also gave during the social hour when refreshments were served by Mrs. Stinson, assisted by Group D.

Miss S. Dean had charge of the "Watch Tower", when Heralds reported interesting items of news from the various home and foreign mission fields.

A Christmas responsive service was used for which leaflets were distributed and in which all could take part. The closing "Christmas Prayer", composed by Miss Margaret Slattery for use by the Auxiliaries at this season, brought an atmosphere of earnest consecration, and was particularly appropriate to the occasion as the concluding petitions were uttered in unison: "that henceforth we may live as He lived, love as He loved, and following in His footsteps, bring help to the needy, courage to the weak, comfort to the sorrowing and hope to the lost."

Mr. and Mrs. H. Johnston of Janetville were guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. Stinson on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Elson, Misses Ella and Olive Elson were visitors to Peterboro on Thursday.

Rev. F. W. Howard was in Whitby this week attending a committee meeting in connection with the O.L.C.

CHRISTMAS BASKETS FROM GOOD FELLOWS

Workers Regard the Job as Great Privilege.

A NOVEL IDEA.

Charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up." At Christmas one's thoughts turn toward giving and that generously,—not only to our dear ones but to those especially in need those to whom otherwise Christmas would mean a sad time—a time when Santa had apparently forgotten them.

Charity has such an unpleasant sound. If it is translated into love and good fellowship it will work out the greatest happiness, to all. One woman who for three years had charge of the Christmas baskets given by a women's club said she had always regarded this work as a very great privilege.

"We fix up our baskets as if we were giving them to our friends," she said. "First we find families who are worthy and to whom baskets will be acceptable. There are always the "proud poor" who would only feel hurt if offered gifts. Then if we know the age of the children in the family we supply stockings and mittens of the right size.

"A call for donations from the club members gives us varied supplies. Home-made preserves or canned goods, we always receive. Then each basket has a chicken, there is in it candy and dates, or some special Christmas dainty. We try to see that each child receives a little gift.

"As to packing the baskets," she continued "we make a special effort to make them look attractive. The baskets are decorated with colored paper, the gifts are all wrapped with tissue paper and tied with ribbons, in other words just as we would send to our dearest friends. Each basket has its Christmas card with a merry rhyme. Our grocer kindly loaned their truck and delivered the baskets for us, this last year.

"Besides the work the club does for the individuals, we try to help the settlement house in which we are interested. For them we send out a call to our club members for soap, and for all sizes of stockings. These two articles seem to be the most needed. As to clothing, our effort has been to supply that, both before and after Christmas. If we know of some special need, we ask our members for the size and kind of garment, and it is always forth coming."

Another branch of this club's Christmas fellowship work is handled by a committee to work among the ex-soldiers in a near-by hospital Different organizations take up the various needs, so as to not confliet with each other. One group gives handkerchiefs to each one of the soldiers, another group gives socks, and so no. This particular club gave each boy a Christmas box, besides decorating trees for the different wards in the hospitals.

In order that the boxes might be nearly uniform, club members were asked to buy their gifs, with the box to amount to a dollar. Cigarettes, stamps, stationery, toilet soap, shaving soap, tooth paste, toilet water decks of cards, were suggested as possible gifts.

At a meeting in which the gifts most acceptable were discussed, there was some amusement felt over the toilet water. But it was explained that the soldiers did really regard it as a luxury and were very fond of it,—and at Christmas they surely ought to receive the things they like.

It was further suggested that a little note accompany each box so that the recipient would feel it more of a personal present and so that if he wished, he might write and thank the giver. Not that the giver wants to be thanked—but the boy's self-respect has been considered. An incident is called to mind, of the days of the war. One Sunday afternoon, a young couple invited a stray sailor lad from a near-by training station to their home for the afternoon. He seemed so appreciative of the effort to entertain him that he could hardly wait until he might "return the favor." He invited them to visit his training station, and later when the young folks were able to accept the invitation, he took great pleasure in showing them around and explaining all he could. They, in turn were grateful to him for a pleasant afternoon in one of those enormous and marvelous schools the war developed.

A last little hint for Christmas fellowship, left over from war days, concerns the subject of mittens. One dear lady always carried four or five pairs of mittens with her when in the city. Whenever she saw a newsboy (or any other child) with red, cold little hands, she gave him a pair of mittens. Seems rather a nice idea, doesn't it?

ENGINEERS ON TRIP BY FILMS TO THE ARCTIC

Conducted by J. D. Craig, M.E.I.C. Officer in Charge of Two Expeditions.

AMONG ESKIMOS

Trial of Eskimo for Murder of Trader Held Aboard Ship.

Something of a novelty for a meeting of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada was presented last night when the speaker was Mr. J. D. Craig, D.L.S., B.A., B.Sc., M.E.I.C. Mr. Craig is Engineer of the International Boundary Commission, and was officer in charge of the Arctic expeditions of 1922 and 1923, sent out by the Department of the Interior to visit the trading posts and R.C.M.P. posts in Baffin Land and Franklin District. He presented six reels of film taken on the trip of 1923 and a number of colored slides showing in detail the costumes of the natives in the different islands.

After a short introduction by Mr. A. L. Killaly, M.E.I.C., vice-chairman of the Peterboro branch, the address was opened with a short lesson in geography.

A map of Canada was thrown on the screen and the speaker pointed out the vast extent of this little-known portion of Canada. Two thousand miles straight north of Peterboro is still in Canadian Territory, and these yearly expeditions are made to maintain sovereignty over this territory. The value of the oil, ivory and fur brought out of Baffin Land alone is from one to one and a half millions of dollars every year. These islands are known to contain coal, iron and other minerals and whereas the Government S.S. Arctic is now required to carry in about five hundred tons of coal for the posts every year, it is expected that they will soon depend entirely upon the native fuel, which is of much the same quality as Alberta coal.

The C.G.S.S. Arctic, Capt. J. E. Berier, has figured in news of the North Country for many years. The vessel was built by the German Government in 1900 and was used for explorations in the Antarctic regions. The ship is built along yacht lines and at every place in the hull is at least two feet thick, having three eight-inch layers of timbers.

Voyage to Greenland.

The expedition left Quebec City in July, 1923, and sailed first for Gaspe Inlet, where they picked up a party for the Labrador Coast. Sailing north through the Straits of Belle Isle, they landed the Labrador party. For twenty-four hours after leaving the coast they sailed through loose ice fields, which would have caused great damage to a less staunch boat. The next stop was Godhavn, on the Greenland coast. Here the Danes maintain a trading post, and also keep a scientific laboratory to aid the natives in finding better methods of tanning hides and providing other scientific information. They give a great deal of attention to teaching the natives cleanliness and hygiene. All trading rights are a Government monopoly. There is in the town a newspaper entirely edited and printed by Greenlanders. There are laundries, schools, art and photograph galleries. The film showed several Greenlanders in native costume and most of them showed traces of white blood. There are very few full-blooded Eskimos in Southern Greenland, and the inhabitants prefer the name, Greenlanders. They elect an advisory board to sit with the Executive Council on matters concerning the native population.

In the harbor of Godhavn the Canadian expedition met the Danish explorer Rasmussen, who has since come out of the Behring Straits, having successfully negotiated the North-West Passage.

Met MacMillan.

From Godhavn the route led through Glacier Strait to Craig Harbor, in Baffin Land. From here they crossed to Etah on the Greenland coast. The tribe of this district had been visited by an attack of the flu, so all but two families had packed up the household goods and left for regions not infested with "evil spirits." On this leg of the journey Mr. Craig's party met MacMillan, the American explorer, who is spending several years in the Arctic. The next stop was at Cape Sabine, the most northerly point reached, 72.48 degress north latitude. They were unable to make a landing here and turned south to Craig Harbor. Walrus were sighted on the iceflows, but attempts to obtain specimens for the naturalist were unsuccessful. The only musk-ox sighted during the summer was seen at this time. The next port of call was Beechey Island, Sir John Franklin's headquarters in 1846. Pictures were shown of the ruins of Franklin's huts and of the boat left for his use by the search parties. The Franklin Cenotaph, erected by Lady Franklin, and the graves of some of the crew, were also objects of interest.

Trial on Ship.

Passing Lancaster Sound, the Arctic came to Button Point. At this post they picked up the witnesses for the trial of Nukoodlah, an Eskimo who had murdered a Newfoundland trader. A stipendiary magistrate, Mr. L. A. Rivet, K.C., ex-M.P., and two lawyers, were members of the party on the Arctic, and six members of the ship's crew composed the jury. When the witnesses were all on board there were 90 people and 120 dogs. Luckily, the trip from Button Point to Pond's Inlet, where the trial was to be held, was short, as the overcrowded ship was filled with the characteristic Eskimo odor, which Mr. Craig was sorry the camera could not repro-

This Nurse Sends a Message To Every Woman in Canada

Brantford, Ont.—"During my twenty-one years of experience at nursing, I not only took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription myself to keep up my health and strength, but I have also recommended it to many a patient, especially to prospective mothers, and think it is by far the best tonic and nervine that a woman can take, and for that reason I give it my highest endorsement."—Mrs. A. A. Foulger, 41 Sheridan Street.

Health is most important to every woman. You cannot afford to neglect it when your neighborhood druggist can supply you with Favorite Prescription, in tablets or liquid. This Prescription is made in Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont. Send 10 cents here if you wish a trial package.

duce. At Pond's Inlet the trial was conducted so as to impress the Eskimo with the majesty of the law and the certainty of punishment if the white man's laws were broken. Mr. Duval, who has lived for 45 years at Cumberland Gulf, acted as interpreter. After Nukoodlah had been found guilty and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in Stony Mountain Penitentiary, the Arctic sailed for Pangertung, as they had material on board for a new R. C. M. P. post there. When this was finished, in September, the first snow of winter had come, and sail was made with all speed for Quebec, where they arrived in late September, having covered 7,000 miles in three months.

Mongolian Traces.

The film was interspersed with pictures of Eskimo types taken at the different posts visited. These all showed Mongolian features, and there were very few of them but might be taken for Chinese if in a different garb.

In answer to questions from the audience, Mr. Craig said that the soil produced nothing but moss. Contrary to the usual opinion, he said, the summer climate was very warm, and only in damp weather were topcoats necessary. It is the intention of the Government to erect a hospital at one of the posts in Baffin Land, and they are also establishing wireless stations throughout the district.

Mr. E. R. Shirley, chairman of the local branch, conveyed the thanks of the members to Mr. Craig for his kindness in giving this interesting account of the work of the police and traders in the far northern territory of Canada.

KEEP OUT TEMPTATION.

Judge in Montreal Probe Would Spare Policemen in Raids.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12—(Canadian Press).—The law as at present construed is too lenient towards keepers of disorderly houses, in the opinion of Mr. Justice Coderre, who is conducting an investigation into Montreal police affairs, in so far as it demands a very difficult basis of proof regarding the keeping of such houses.

At yesterday afternoon's session of the probe His Lordship stated that he did not think it should be necessary for a constable to go into such a place, bargain with the keeper, and pay with the city's money in order to have evidence of a disorderly house. When the police declared they had found in the house so many girls, scantily dressed and allowing themselves freely to be caressed, that should be sufficient evidence to satisfy anyone.

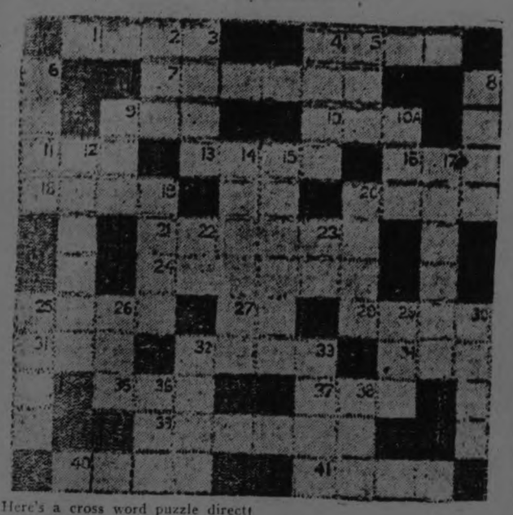
A WORLD MARVEL!

Cross-Word Puzzle Came Across the Atlantic By Radiogram, Just as You See It Here.



Here's a cross word puzzle direct from London, as direct as anything ever came from London. The diagram was sent by radiogram the new process of the Radio Corporation of America by which photographs are literally sent through the air.

Definitions for the horizontal and vertical words were radio-ed in the usual manner. In several days the puzzle and its proper solution will be photographed and radiograped.

And if you are of the memento-keeping sort you might put this away for your grand-children. It will show to posterity one of the earliest beginnings of what promises to be a great industry of the future. And it will also show posterity what a universal hold the cross-word puzzle had on folks in 1924.

This puzzle was evolved by the London Daily News. With it was sent a photo of a London bobby holding up traffic at Parliament crossing on one of London's typical foggy mornings.

MENNONITES COME TO FARM IN WEST

All Arrangements Made For 3,000 Next Year—Land Purchased.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—During the season of 1025, three thousand Mennonites are expected to come from Russia to take up land in Western Canada and preparations for their arrival in this country are now under way.

It is announced that 10,000 acres of farm lands have been purchased for the Mennonite colonization at a cost of $500,000.

The deal includes the purchase of six farms between Winnipeg and Portage La Prairie on the Canadian National Railways which include some of the finest wheat growing land in the Province.

Prominent immigration and colonization officials last night denied reports that 1925 would see 80,000 Mennonites coming to the west. There are 30,000 Mennonites in Russia desirous of seeking homes in the Dominion, but it was pointed out that the Soviet government objects to their leaving the country, having imposed heavy passport charges and regulations and the Mennonites in general are not in a financial position to move.

Wordy Warfare Wages Over Peace Plan Originator As Honor Is Claimed For England and America

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(United Press.)— "Apparently it is not generally known to the public that the whole idea of the Dawes plan originated with Sir John Bradbury," Sir William Goode, former secretary to Lloyd George, said in a speech. "The plan was due entirely to the conception and initiative of the Reparations Commission," Goode said.

—AND SAYS AMERICA:

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 12.—(United Press.)—At a testimonial dinner, Owen D. Young, hailed as the vitalizer of the Dawes plan, declared: "The plan would not have been created or adopted without America. Full credit for the present success of the plan and its continued operation goes to the United States."

Young named Secretary Hughes as the origiantor of the idea of an Experts' Commission.

Mrs. A. J. Johnson's uncle, Mr. Jas. A. Stephens, of 19 Dennistoun Avenue, is to-day celebrating his 94th birthday, having been born Dec. 12th, 1831, in Helston, Cornwall, England. He with his parents came out in a sailing vessel to this country in 1842, settling in Toronto, where they lived for a number of years. There he learned the book-binding trade, and went into business for himself in Brockville, where he resided for forty years. He has lived in Peterboro over seven years, and is still enjoying fairly good health for a man of his years.

INTERESTING SHOW AT TURNBULL STORE

Attractive Demonstration By Domestic Science Graduate and Dietitian.

A very attractive demonstration of "Wear-Ever" Aluminum utensils is being held at the J. C. Turnbull Company's establishment this week, and will continue until Saturady evening. In charge of Miss Kathryn Chamberlain, the light shining pieces, manufactured by the Northern Aluminum Company of Toronto, are displayed in a pretty little booth arranged with Christmas-like streamers of green, red and white paper.

Miss Chamebrlain, who is a Domestic Science graduate and dietitian demonstrates and explains the materials and advantages of this ware, which includes every possible shining piece to delight the heart of any housewife and brighten her kitchen. The ware is of heavy-guage cold-rolled, sheet aluminum, and every piece is seamless, making it all the more convenient to use.

A special advantage and economical factor is the graduated size of the various pieces so that they may be used for various purposes. The double cooker may be used in combination with the tea kettle affording a great saving in the fuel line, and sauce and pudding pans are graduated in size in such a way as to allow of being used as double cookers also. An aluminum roaster also officiates in the dual capacity of a canner and combination cooker.

FRENCH CABINET MEETING HELD HERRIOT'S BEDROOM

Condition of Premier Showed Slight Improvement To-day.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—(United Press).—Premier Edouard Herriot cannot move his right leg because of severe inflammation, and a third doctor, a heart specialist, was summoned to his bedside to-day. The French Premier took to his bed on Tuesday, exhausted from his recent efforts in directing a campaign against the Communists, and suffering from la grippe and rheumatism.

The Cabinet meeting to-day was held in Herriott's bedroom, the Ministers sitting about the sick Premier on chairs and on the edge of the bed and interrupting their discussion upon the arrival of the doctors.

It was said that the Premier's condition to-day showed a slight improvement.

The official bulletin issued last night by the Premier's physicians said:

"The condition of the patient is stationary, but the Premier must maintain absolute immobility of his right leg."

ENVIED THE BOYS.

President Beatty Eulogizes Value and Dignity of Work.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—The first and even the last lesson we learn is the value and dignity of work.

This was the keynote of a notable address delivered here lrast night by E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific at the annual prize day of Lower Canada College.

Mr. Beatty told of his own start in school life and of his early hard-learned lesson that not even a very young boy could afford to waste his time and pay no attention to his duties as a pupil or student. He envied the boys present, who were only at the beginning of their school work partly because they would take part in the development of this country at a time when its development was apt to be unusually conspicuous.

Trotsky Admits Mistakes.

Writes a Book Entitled "My Mistakes"—Health Breaks Down.

(By Ferdinand Kuh, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW, December 12. — Leon Trotsky who will leave shortly for a health resort on the orders of his physicians, is reported to be writing another book, "My Mistakes."

In it the Red Army chief discusses his admitted theoretic falacies when preparing for the 1917 revolution.

The deadlock will emphasize however that Trotsky enunciated prior to 1917 those principles which have been sustained throughout the history of the Russian revolution.

Every gift a man possesses implies an obligation to the less gifted.

It is useless hoping for the best unless you are also working for it.

"MY LOVE GIRL" SAYS A LETTER

Names Kept Quiet in Toronto to Suit For Alimony.

JUDGE EXPLAINS.

TORONTO, December 12. — Mrs. Hilda Betty Cooke, who is suing her husband, J. H. Cooke, barrister, for alimony, was called to the witness stand yesterday afternoon by her counsel and gave evidence with regard to her relations with "Mr. A." consisting chiefly of a denial of the allegations.

The case was responsible for bloodshed during the afternoon when "Mr. D." against whom allegations were withdrawn by the defence on Wednesday, struck a man scheduled as a witness a violent blow in the face, drawing a considerable amount of blood.

During the progress of the case Mr. Justice Orde said he had gathered that the impression had got abroad that the names of certain men connected with the case were being suppressed in court. Those who had attended the hearings knew that this was not so. The suppression was by the newspapers.

"I am not suggesteing that what the newspapers are doing is in any sense wrong," His Lordship commented, "but the idea has got abroad that the names "Mr. A." and "Mr. B.", etc., are substituted by the court which is not correct."

A letter alleged to have been written by "Mr. J." to Mrs. Cooke and intercepted by her husband, was read in court. It began "My love girl," and contained many expressions of endearment. When Mr. Smythe, the defence counsel, had finished reading it, Mr. Justice Orde remarked "If there are many more like that I might suggest that it is not necessary to read them all."

IN THE MORNING HER TONGUE WAS COATED HAD BAD TASTE IN MOUTH

Miss Pearle L. Zinck, Barss Corner, N.S., writes:—"I was awfully troubled with my liver, and used to get such dizzy spells I would have to sit down while I was doing my work.

In the morning, when I used to get up, my tongue was coated and I had a bad taste in my mouth and often times, throughout the day, I was troubled with pains in my stomach.

I suffered in this way until a friend of mine who had used your told me of having taken them, so I decided to try them, and I can truthfully say that they certainly did me a lot of good.

I cannot recommend them too highly to all those who suffer as I did."

SEA NIBBLING AT AMERICAN COASTS

In Time Superior Forces of the Seas Will Capture the U. S. Coast.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(United Press). — The meeting place of land and sea, immortalized by romanticists for its quietude and poetic inspirations, is in reality a great battleground where land and waters meet in a never-ending fight for supremacy, according to the bureau of coast and geodetic survey.

And, unless the land is given assistance, the superior forces of the seas will capture the American coast, destroying pleasure resorts, carrying with it as captive some of the most fertile farm land.

The physiographer and engineer heeds not the enchanting murmur or lapping waves. Rather do they see pent-up forces being released by every incoming wave to carry on its work of destruction. Every wind and wave which assail the coast leaves its impress, carrying away some of the land.

"It is to them we must ultimately look," declare officials of the bureau, 'for a solution to the intricate and perplexing problems of coast evolution.

Unless work of protecting the coast line is expedited, many of the famous pleasure resorts of the country will be endangered, they warn. Too often in some of the mighty battles between land and sea the enraged waters of the two oceans flanking the United States have been victorious. Costly structures, some a monument to engineering skill, have been swept away.

There is no bureau to-day making the necessary study of coast erosion and protection, as will ultimately be necessary to devise protective measures. The necessity for centralizing the work is pointed out and it is urged that it be consolidated with the coast and geodetic survey.

GOLD.

Our "gold peril" is nearing its end, the bankers say. They mean the great flood of gold into the United States from abroad has been materially checked. Recently gold imports have been the smallest in nearly five years.

Economists hold that the presence of an abnormally large amount of gold in a country tends to inflate all prices. Accordingly most of us, not having any of the gold, will say, "Ship it all back."

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

He catapulted himself toward the palace gate. A giant Tartar captain stepped square into his path. Lance then against lance. Thrust and cut against thrust and cut. Skill and strength against skill and strength. The lance jerking up, skidding from the ground with a dry rasp of its bamboo shaft, lunging viciously. The Thief of Bagdad, wheeling nimbly out of harm's way while his sword, thrice whirled round the head, descended like lightning in a slanting direction. Forged steel biting through flesh and muscle and tissue and bone. A darkening blotch of blood spreading grotesque arabesques over dragon-embroidered tunic. A choked death gurgle. And Ahmed leaping over the fallen man; Zemzem by his side, leaping parallel, like a small terrier by the side of a lean-flanked greyhound.

On the threshold of the palace was a wall of steel-bossed arm shields, topped by a wall of yellow, high-cheeked faces, a wall of glittering, oval bladed lances: Cham Cheng's picked Manchu bodyguard, here to fight for their master to their last drop of blood.

They were too many for one man to attack and defeat.

Ahmed stopped for a moment. Then he remembered the Cloak of Invisibility which he had found at the bottom of the Midnight Sea, wrapped about the magic silver box: the cloak to guard him against the jealousies and envies of the unrighteous.

He tore it from his waist shawl. He flung it quickly about his shoulders. He could still see the Manchu warriors. But could they see him?

He wondered. The very next second he knew. For one of them, who had been on the point of thrusting at him with his lance, dropped the weapon and stared in open-mouthed, rather ludicrous astonishment.

"Where—why—how——" he stammered. "Where has he gone to?"

He moved away from the threshold to search for this man who had so miraculously vanished into thin air; and Ahmed used the opportunity to slip through, into the palace, and up the stairs where—as we related before—he sent the Mongols spinning, smote Cham Sheng across the face, picked up Zobeid where she stood on the flying carpet, and ran away with her, carrying her high in his arms.

She did not see him. The cloak hid him so completely. But love needs no eyes. Somehow, by the thrill and tumult in her heart, she felt who he was; she knew; and she laughed, happily, while the Mongols, led by their Prince—their first surprise and stupor over—dashed after them, following the sound of Ahmed's rushing feet, the sound of Zobeid's high laughter.

But by this time their comrades down in the garden had died to the last man beneath the Moslem swords. The Arabs came charging into the palace. There was a play and counterplay of bare blades and many individual heroic deeds, by both Mongols and Arabs, of which the ancient chronicle makes much, until at last—though Arab and Mongol historians, while both admitting the same result, differ as to the cause, the former claiming that it was due to their bravery and their faith in Islam, while the latter say they were outnumbered ten to one, and demand, with rather pertinent irony, what would have happened to their enemies had it not been for Ahmed's miraculous seeds—until at last the 111 Arabs were victorious the Mongols were dead.

All except two: Cham Sheng and Wong K'ai, who protected his master with his body.

Already swords were raised to cut them down when a high voice—it was that of Bird-of-Evil, Ahmed's old partner in knavery and thievery, who had just arrived on the scene—declared shrilly that such a death was too good for them.

"String them up!" he yelled.

"A splendid idea—by Allah and by Allah!"

So through one of the windows in an upper room they stuck a tall, stout pole, fastening it securely; and, a few minutes later, Cham Sheng and Wong K'ai were hanging by their necks, slowly stran ing to death.

Such was the end of the Prince of the Mongols. But even at the very moment of final oblivion, while his soul was already leaping the Dragon Gate to join the souls of his ancestors near the Seven Yellow Springs, his lips, blue and twisted and tortured into a painful grimace, uttered the proud boast of his race:

"Others of my race will come after me! Again and again the world will quail and fall before the Mongol scourge!"

The boast was not heard—would have been ridiculed had it been heard.

"Tiger!"—a little, golden-skinned Arab slave girl cried down in the garden, looking up at the Mongol Prince's dangling corpse. "Pah! Paper tiger with paper teeth!"

"God be praised!" chanted the priests.

"God be praised!" shouted the warriors.

"God be praised indeed!" echoed the Caliph of Bagdad, who had been released from his dungeon, as had the Princes of Persia and India. He turned to a majordomo. "Where is this mighty hero who freed us from the Mongol scourge?"

"He is with your daughter, Heaven-Born. Up there—in the throne room."

"Tell him to come to me and accept my kingly thanks. By the way—Who is he?"

"May the Heaven-Born forgive the lowest of his slaves. But the man who freed us from the Mongol yoke is none other than the Thief of Bagdad!"

"No longer Thief of Bagdad!" laughed the Caliph. "But heir to the throne of Bagdad and, after my death, by the token of his marriage to my daughter, Caliph of all the Faithful, Shadow of Allah upon Earth, King of the Sovereigns of the Universe, and Supreme Ruler in Islam!"

And "Heir to the throne of Bagdad!" he greeted Ahmed when the latter, side by side with Zobeid, came into the room.

He overwhelmed him with his gratitude, kissing him on both cheeks, elevating him on the spot to various ranks, titles, and splendid emoluments. The courtiers and soldiers, the priests and the Princes of India and Persia followed suit, kissing him, embracing him, shaking his hands, until Ahmed, blushing with confusion, stepped on the magic flying rug, his arm still about Zobeid's waist.

"I am awfully sorry," he said, "but I shall have to leave you. You see, a few moments ago this worthy"—pointing to a green-turbaned priest, the very priest who had first sent him on his journey in the serach of life's happiness—"united Zobeid and me in holy matrimony. And now, with the permission of all of you, or without it, we are going on our honeymoon." He turned to the magic rug. "Fly!" he ordered. "Fly away, O rug!"

"Where to?" asked the Caliph.

"Up to the moon! Up to the land of happiness and laughter and sweetness and love and little children!"

"Drop in on me on your way," cried the Prince of Persia, his heart warming with generosity as the rug rose into the air, "and I shall have such a feast prepared for you that it will go down in history!"

"Visit me at Puri!" shouted the Prince of India, not to be outdone by the Persian in generosity, craning his neck as the rug rose still higher, "and I shall introduce you to my divine cousin, the goddess Doorga!"

Ahmed did not reply. He waved his left arm—his right was still about Zobeid's waist—and so the flying rug carried them out of the palace, out of the garden, out of Bagdad, high through the air, up to the moon, on their wedding journey, where many fantastic and extraordinary adventures befell them.

"But this," says the ancient Arab chronicle, "is another story. . . ."

From American factories this year come 2800 million dollars worth of passenger cars and trucks. The auto is no longer a luxury or a toy. In most cases it is almost as much a necessity as other factors in the cost of living. —Says British Labor Leader

Civilization Doomed!

But Millions Now Living Will Never Die!

Viscount Grey says: "I think it is certain that if there be another such war again civilization will never recover from it.'

That another war is brewing in Europe is a foregone conclusion. It will have a marked effect upon the future history of the world. Not only are the nations and governments of earth in turmoil and confusion, but the religious leaders are also involved in a controversy which threatens to split the church from end to end. Modernists and Fundamentalists are at open war, and the church member who seeks peace in the house of God is further confused and discouraged by ecclesiastical wrangling. Truly we live in a day when they say: "Peace, peace," and there is no peace. God's Word, properly understood, is a rock of safety in the troubled sea of human strife.

For a clear, logical presentation of events of history and prophecy, and for a message of hope and encouragement by a keen observer of world conditions.

KIWANIS HEAR TALK ON CURE OF CRIMINALS

Dr. Alfred Lavell, of the Ontario Parole Board, Spoke at Luncheon.

PUNISHMENT USED.

Kindness is Keyword of Address—Lash Hurts Criminal Too Much.

At Kiwanis luncheon to-day in the Empress Hotel, Dr. Alfred A. Lavell, of the Ontario Board of Parole, gave a very interesting address on "The Curer of the Criminal."

Mr. Lavelle's job is, as described by Wilfred Huycke, in introducing the speaker, to give a man his liberty when he thinks that the man is cured and that he has served a long enough sentence to sicken him of prison.

The science of criminality is a real science to-day, said the speaker. Criminology is at present groping out of its past of stupidity and cruelty. In 1888 there was a man in Rome who committed a crime. He was sentenced and put in a dark dungeon, where he stayed until he had rotted away and was eaten up by rats. Many years afterwards in Venice a new device was used to punish criminals. A man who committed a crime there was put in a heavily padded cell, which was proof from all outside noises. In the cell with the man was placed a machine that caused a steady knocking sound that never ceased. The man was left in the cell until he was driven insane by this sound and finally died. This was the way that different countries took to stop the breaking of the laws.

Since that time ways of punishment have changed greatly and some of our prisons are now so up-to-date that I would just as soon spend a week-end in one of them as in a hotel," said the speaker.

Hanged For Forgery.

One hundred years ago, in England, several men were hanged for forgery. In twelve years there were over two hundred hanged for this offence and forgery steadily increased, so this proves that their way of stopping criminal offences at that time was a failure. Referring to another case in Ontario three years ago, Dr. Lavell said that a farmer was given two years, less one day, for robbery. He investigated the case and found that the man had an excellent wife and two children, and if the man was kept in prison for the two years he would lose his farm which was not paid for. If he was kept in prison he would not only suffer, but his wife and two children would suffer for the wrong that he had done, so he allowed the man to go back to his farm and work it so his family would not suffer. "The man made good," said Mr. Lavell, "and do you think that I did not do the right thing?"

The penitentiary at Kingston and the reformatory at Guelph are two of the greatest institutions of their kind in the world. In these institutions the men are treated the way they should be, and there is no cruelty used unless a man needs it. If a man needs a kick he is given a kick, but if he does not he is treated the way he should be. Does that not sound more reasonable than to put a man in a dungeon to rot away? There is no justice in letting a man's wife and family suffer for the wrong that he has done.

Lash is Cruel.

I think that when a man is sentenced to a prison term and given corporal punishment he should be sentenced to be given a spanking with a wide strap instead of the lash. The lash is a cruel device, and I think that the strap would do just as well.

"Revenge breeds revenge and hatred breeds hatred." We want a change. The old scheme of corporal punishment did not cure crime, so why do they still use it?

If you had seventy-five men suffering from minor ailments, two men suffering with leprosy and two with smallpox, would you put them all in the one room together? If you did they would either all be lepers or would all have the smallpox in a short time. Why then should men who are sent to prison for minor offences be put in with murderers and other wicked criminals? They will soon grow to be as bad as the worst if they are left together. In every prison 75 per cent. of the criminals are good men and 5 per cent. are vicious scoundrels of the worst type. These men should be kept separated. A man should be taken out of prison as soon as he is fit to be taken out and should be started on a new life. In the old days all criminals were classed alike, and no matter what you did you had your head cut off. A criminal is a man who breaks the criminal law of his country, and he may be classed as a criminal in this country and not in England. When a man is sentenced he is not worthy of his liberty and needs to be looked after. He should be treated as he needs be. No magistrate can make any mistake when he adds an indefinite term of 2 years less one day to the sentence he imposes, for if a criminal is not fit to be let out at the end of his term he can be kept there until he is fit. There is no car made that is worth a one-year sentence to a 17-year-old boy, and the minimum sentence that a magistrate can impose on a boy for the theft of a car is one year. "I do not keep these boys in prison for a year. I take them out as soon as I think they have had enough to sicken them of prison. At present there is only one-tenth of one per cent. of the population of Ontario in jail."

A vote of thanks was proposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, and Judge Marshall presided.

SUPPORT POLICY TO PAY BRITAIN

British Papers Back Chancellor in Demand For Equal Rights With the U. S.

CONFERENCE NEEDED.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Allied war debts continue to hold first place in the news and editorial columns of London papers, which unanimously support chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill's announcement that if the continental nations begin paying their debts to the United States, they will be expected to make proportionate payments on their obligations to Great Britain.

Comparing the published views in a United States and France on the war debt question to the one almost universally held here, some of to-day's papers conclude that they represent three distinct attitudes which eventually will have to be brought into line with each other, perhaps by an international conference.

Washington's Viewpoint.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—(Canadian Press).—Statement of Winston Churchill, British chancellor of Exchequer, that British Government would insist on proportionaate payments to it in case any allied debtor nation settles her debts with United States has increased feeling here that settlement of debt with France is still a long distance away. Churchill's statement being weighed here chiefly with reference to its bearing on the settlement of the United States debt with France though it applies to other Allied debtors.

While some officials express surprise over Mr. Churchill's utterances and some doubt whether this is the view of the majority of the British Cabinet, others point out that there have been previous intimations that Great Britain would take the position outlined by Mr. Churchill.

MRS. M'INTOSH IS NOT GUILTY SAYS THE JURY

Judge Comments on Fairness of Her Trial and Treatment.

COMMENDS JURY.

A. B. Cunningham Again Congratulated by Bench on His Presentation.

A verdict of "Not Guilty" was rendered by the jury this afternoon in the first case of Rex vs. Mrs. Annie McIntosh, on an accusation of subornation to perjury in the case of the witness, Albert Hynes.

The verdict, rendered by the foreman, F. J. McFadden, brought the commendation of the Judge, who said he agreed with it.

Counsel for the Crown, A. B. Cunningham, here asked His Honor to traverse to the next sessions of the peace the second case against Mrs. Annie McIntosh, in regard to subornation to perjury of the second witness Wm. Millar.

This was agreed to.

The accused woman, who was pale and haggard, wept when the verdict was announced, and was taken out by her husband, who was her constant companion during the progress of the trial.

This Morning's Session.

Addresses to the jury in the case of Rex. v. Mrs. Annie McIntosh, on an accusation of subordination of perjury in the case of the witness, Albert Hynes, occupied the major portion of this morning's session at the County Court.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, in his address, speaking for the defence, spoke at some length of the methods practised by the local Police Department in attempting to extract information from Mrs. McIntosh during an interview at the local Police Station after she was brought here from Cobourg. He also referred to the character of the two principal witnesses, Hynes and Millar, as being that of confessed perjurers.

A. B. Cunningham, K.C., of Kingston, who is acting as Crown Prosecutor, in his address, said that it wasn't feasible to imagine that evidence in a case of this nature could be drawn from religious institution and that therefore, only evidence possible was that of the perjured men. Mr. Cunningham also pointed out that this case against Mrs. McIntosh lacked the strength of the case made against her brother, James Newell, on a similar charge.

His Honour, Judge Huycke, in his address to the jury, pointed out the fairness exhibited by the Crown Prosecutor, Mr. Cunningham, in his conduct of this case.

His Honour also referred to the evident fair and kindly treatment accorded Mrs. McIntosh, on her trip from Cobourg, by the Chief of Police, who escorted her to Peterboro, and also to the fair treatment accorded her by Police Chief Newhall, while here.

His Honour referred to the offence of which the prisoner stands accused as "one of the most damnable crimes in the calendar," but also pointed out that the evidence was not of sufficient strength to indicate that Mrs. McIntosh had positive knowledge that the evidence of the two young men was absolutely false, as it afterwards turned out to be, although he referred to the arrangement as to changing the dates by her instance, if this evidence were true, as being a fair presumption that she might have known it was false.

GERMAN SITUATION REMAINED CHAOTIC

Chancellor Marx and Party Leaders Hope to Form New Cabinet.

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, December 12.—Throughout the day Chancellor Marx and the party leaders were hoping to obtain some counsel as to how a new German cabinet might be formed.

The situation remains chaotic, the fate of the whole situation hanging mainly on what Marx's chiefs do next week. Meanwhile the present cabinet has decided to resign but cannot decide when, owing to the difficulty of finding a successor.

Two blocs are struggling for the ascendancy—a great coalition and a bourgeois bloc—with the result in doubt. Marx and Ebert oppose the latter group, which would be led by the Nationalists. This party appears however, to have successfully blocked the efforts to form the "great coalition" desired by the present leaders. The deadlock may exist for a week.

SECOND TRIAL OPENED.

Case Against Newell Re-opened Before New Jury.

The second trial in the action of Rex vs. Newell, in which the accusation is one of subornation of perjury of the witness, Albert Hynes, an action in which the jury in the first trial disagreed yesterday, opened this afternoon at the Court House, with the following jury: G. Telford, Smith; Stanley Johnson, Otonabee; Frank Fowler, Smith; Bert Trotter, Asphodel; H. D. Coones, Smith; Webster Blewett, Monaghan; Arthur McLeish, Peterborough; George Hanbridge, Otonabee; Eric Greer, Douro; David Kemp, Otonabee; Chas. Harding, Belmont, and Chris. A. Howson, Otonabee.

JURY DISAGREES IN NEWELL CASE

Unable to Bring in Unanimous Verdict Required By Law.

LAY IT OVER.

In the first case of Rex vs. Newell, in the action charging the accused with subornation to perjury of the witness, Albert Hynes, the jury which remained out yesterday from noon until half past four o'clock, were unable to reach a decision. A unanimous verdict is required in a case of this type, and the foreman, A. Lang, of North Monaghan, reported that it was impossible to reach a unanimous conclusion. The judge, regretting their inability to do do, discharged the jury.

A second trial of James Newell on the same charge with reference to the witness William Millar, is pending.

Case Against Woman.

The criminal case of Rex. vs. Mrs. Annie McIntosh, in which the accusation is one of subornation of perjury, opened at the December Session of the County Court yesterday, the prisoner, who is defended by Gordon & O'Brien, pleading not guilty. A. B. Cunningham, K. C., of Kingston, acts as Crown Prosecutor, as in the similar case preceding it of Rex vs. Newell. It is alleged that the accused counselled a witness, Albert Hynes, to give false evidence in Newell's behalf in a case in which he was accused of seduction under promise of marriage, of Clarice McColl, of Norwood.

The jury called in this case consists of the following: Michael Geary, Ennismore; F. J. McFadden, Peterboro; Wiliam J. Breckenridge, Asphodel; William Hickson, Ennismore; Albert Jones, Stewart Pretty, Peterboro; Robert Hamilton, Dummer; Arthur H. Simmons, River Road, Peterboro; T. H. Gordon, Harvey; R. J. Girven, Asphodel; Alex. Huston, Otonabee; W. J. Sanderson, Asphodel and C. W. Garbutt, Douro.

Albert Hynes, who is now serving a term of two years in the Mimico Reformatory, on a conviction of perjury, committed at the first trial of Newell a year ago, was the first witness called.

He stated that in conversation with Mrs. Annie McIntosh on November 29th, 1923, the accused asked him to swear as to relations with Miss McColl. At that time, in and around the house of John Newell, the father of James Newell, there were present members of the family, including the parents, two sisters, Mrs. Annie McIntosh and Margaret Newell, and others. Joseph Moore, William Millar and Leslie Would. A visit was later made to Mr. Gordon's office, when the witness and Margaret Newell came up to Peterboro together, and another party that attended the conference included James Newell and Mrs. McIntosh. William Millar was also in the office that day. After this conference, it was decided by Mrs. McIntosh and communicated to Hynes, that the date of Hynes' alleged relations with Miss McColl had better be changed from October, 1922, as was first set, to some time in the last of August or the first of September of the same year.

The witness also said that Mrs. McIntosh knew from his own statements that he did not know Miss McColl.

Hynes, the strain of whose position is very evident in his drawn countenance and haggard look, was examined and cross-examined at length, repeating substantially the evidence given by him on Wednesday.

Jury Had Rest.

William Millar, called next, proceeded to give evidence, when objection was taken by Mr. Gordon as to the form of some of Mr. Cunningham's questions, and the jury retired while His Honor gave a ruling, which limited the scope of the Crown Prosecutor's enquiries.

Millar testified also that Mrs. McIntosh had said, after the interview in Mr. Gordon's office, that Hynes' testimony was weak and that the dates must be changed as indicated by the first witness.

Chief of Police Newhall was placed in the box and testified regarding the bringing of Mrs. McIntosh from her home in Cobourg, where she resided at that time, by the Chief of the Cobourg police, after an intimation from himself to the Cobourg Chief that a warrant was out for her arrest, and that police officers from Peterboro would be sent down for her. She was accompanied by her husband and was taken to the Police Station, where she and the Chief and Millar and Hynes were present at an interview. Questioned as to whether the Police Matron was present at this interview, the Chief answered that he had not seen fit to call her at its commencement, "as she is there too often as it is. The thing is overdone."

Chief Newhall testified that he had warned Mrs. McIntosh in the proper manner as to answering questions which would be written down with their answers and might be used later, if the action came to a trial.

Mrs. McIntosh at this inerview said to Hynes: "Did I ever ask you to swear falsely?" and Hynes had answered, "No, Annie, you did not, but you fixed the times and dates, and you knew they were false." Hynes had also said that Mrs. McIntosh had taken him out of Mr. Gordon's office and asked him to change the dates.

Clarice McColl was again called into the box yesterday, and testified briefly as to the untrue evidence given at Newell's trial by Hynes, and that dates had been fixed on that occasion by the witness as about the last of August or first of September.

Accused Called.

Mrs. Annie McIntosh, of Port Perry, the accused, was then called, and examined and cross-examined, by both counsel. She testified regarding a trip made to Peterboro, to see their lawyer, on December 1st, 1923, when she and Miller and James Newell and Albert Batten came in a car while her sister Margaret and Albert Hynes came by the train. She testified having met Miller on that occasion, who said he could give evidence in favor of Newell at the coming trial for seduction, under promise of marriage. She did not remember whether she had paid for Millar's ticket when he went down to her father's home at Asphodel or not but he had been back and forth to her home in Cobourg and to Asphodel around that time on several occasions. Regarding the interview in the chief's office, her chief complaint to Mr. Cunningham's questions was that her husband was not allowed to accompany her up-stairs to the talk with Miller and Hynes and the chief.

The accused wept on several occasions during the afternoon, sobbing quietly when she came out of the box. The jury fixed their collective gaze upon her and Sergeant of Police Thomas attended with glasses of water.

Other witnesses called included Jos. Moore of Dummer, who said that Hynes had told him that he could clear James Newell, and said that Hynes was not at the Newell homestead in Asphodel on night of Nov.29. Andrew Batten, John Newell, the father of James Newell, and William Millar, who reiterated his previous assertions that Albert Hynes was at the home on the night mentioned. He said that he had never seen Hynes before but had noticed him when coming from the driving-shed that night and had asked who he was. He had testified at the previous trial that this was the first occasion he had seen Hynes.

HISTORY WITH A "COCKNEY" TWIST

The Humours of Old Bill.

That most delightful of characters—Old Bill— has found a new and very welcome opening for his talents. His latest exploit is to give us English history, not as "swotted" over in the school history books, but as he sees it through his "cockney" eyes— and the result is diverting in the extreme.

We find him posing as William the Conqueror, writing the Doomsday Book. We see him busily applying "gentle persuasion" to King John to sign the Magna Charta—a new light on an old story, for many of us never suspected that it was Old Bill who really "did the trick" at Runneymede. We are shown Old Bill as the first to sight the Spanish Armada—"within the three mile limit"—and we get him "having it out" with Shakespeare at the court of Queen Elizabeth. The effect is decidedly novel, and highly diverting, the fun being all the more enjoyable because all so clean and harmless.

The story was specially written by Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, who also takes part in the film, and the role of Old Bill is cleverly portrayed by the well-known comedian, Syd Walker.

"Old Bill Through the Ages," as the picture is called, was produced by Thomas Bentley, of Dickens films fame, and will be shown at the Regent to-morrow.

It can be heartily recommended to all—young and old alike—who are longing for something new on the films and a really enjoyable evening.

AT THE CAPITOL.

TWO MILLION READERS OF "WHEN A MAN'S A MAN"

Two million people have bought Harold Bell Wright's popular novel, "When a Mans' a Man." This means that six million people have read it, for book publishers figure three readers to each book purchased.

Today the famous story has been transferred to the screen by Principal Pictures Corporation, and will be shown at the Capitol Theatre, today and Saturday.

John Bowers enacts the role of Lawrence Knight, later known in the Arizona mountains as "Honorable Patches." Marguerite de la Motte plays Helen Wakefield of Cleveland, Ohio, the young lady who is responsible for Larry's awakening to the futility of his indolent life. Robert Frazer is the beloved Wild Horse Phil of the Cross Triangle Ranch, and June Marlowe is his western sweetheart whose eastedn education is fast estranging her from her western environment. Forrest Robinson is the venerable old Dean of the Cross Triangle Ranch, and Elizabeth Rhodes is his wife, Stella. Fred Stanton is the villainous cattle rustler, whose dupe, Yavapai Joe, is played by George Hackathorne.

The other important characters are played by Arthur Hoyt, Edward Hearn, Johnny Fox, Jr., Charles Mailes and Ray Thompson.

"When a Man's a Man" was photographed in the exact locale in which the story was written, Prescott, Arizona, and the real Cross Triangle Ranch of the story will be seen throughout the picture. Harold Bell Wrigth wrote this famous novel while on a camping trip in the mountains of Arizona, and when Principal Pictures decided to film the story, directed by Edward F. Cline, he and his troupe were shipped to Prescott. Many of the characters in the book still reside in the mile high city, and an abundance of technical detail and atmosphere was available to the actors in the picture.

AT THE ROYAL.

"COME ON LOVING CUP," ENGLISH SPORTING DRAMA, WELL RECEIVED AT ROYAL.

All the elements of popular appeal, heart interest, adventure, a thrilling horse race and here and there a laugh makes "Come on Loving Cup" an enjoyable British film. The outdoor settings, taken in the Old Country, are different and refreshing. Some interesting flashes of London and Manchester are shown.

The big race with the girl jockey winning is just as thrilling as any we have seen. We feel justified in saying that "Come on Loving Cup" will be a popular film.

A Buddy Mssenger comedy, "Low Bridge," is good for numerous laughs.

The single novelty that opens the programme has intimate glimpses of all the popular players. We recognize Wm. S. Hart, Marg. De La Motte, Viola Dana, Anna Q. Nelisson and all the big ones. It's an interesting short subject. This programme should be popular with the fans.

IT SHATTERED ALL KINDS OF RECORDS.

"Welcome Stranger," which comes to the Royal Theatre next Monday, is the screen version of the great stage success of Aaron Hoffman. As a play, it ran for two consecutive years in Chicago and New York. In Chicago it broke both box office and consecutive performance records and in New York enough people were turned away each night to fill another theatre.

James Young and Willard Mack adapted it for the screen. The cast includes Dore Davidson in the role that George Sidney made famous on the legitimate stage, Florence Vidor, Virginia Browne Faire, Noah Beery, Lloyd Hughes, Wm. V. Mong, Robert Edeson, Otis Harlan and others.

AT THE GRAND.

MARY PICKFORD IN "DOROTHY VERNON OF HADDON HALL."

Mary Pickford is at the Grand Opera House for the last three days of this week. The beautiful little star is at her best in the romantic historical drama, in which she portrays the heroine of "Haddon Hall." All the whims and caprices, all the little mannerisms and tricks that have endeared Mary Pickford to her audiences for years past are at their height in this picture, which is artistic from start to finish. Photography and backgrounds and costuming are wonderful examplars of the lengths to which moving picture producers go in their desire to make outstanding spectacles. "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is one of those very satisfactory productions that hold the attention from the very first moment and in which not a single item has been overlooked in the completion of a beautiful picture. The cast is super-excellent, but the little star dominates the scene, as always, with her beauty and charm and whimsical caprices.

This picture presents Mary as a lovely little termagant of the 16th century, the heiress of Haddon Hall in Derbyshire, one of the immense Elizabethan manors of an age when the power of the "high, the middle and the low" was invested in the mighty barons of the time. Her father bethroths her in childhood to the heir of Rutland, Sir John Manners, played with ability and grace by Allan Forrest, but complications develop that lead to all sorts of misadventures for the two lovers. Compelled by her hateful parent to promise to wed her causin, Sir Malcolm Vernon, Dorothy becomes involved in a plot to take the life of Queen Elizabeth, a visitor at her father's manor for the wedding ceremonies.

The story evolves itself with the ease and speed that make for an interesting production, and abounds in beautiful scenes and splendid costuming. It is a typical Pickford spectacle, with all the artistry with which Mary Pickford surrounds herself, the madcap little Dorothy scintillating always as the central figure, flying before her lover in a pretended runaway, turning on him and denouncing him to her father and the Queen as a traitor, when she imagines he is making love to Mary, Queen of Scots, and then rushing wildly on her white horse to take him warning of danger. This wild race on horseback is one of the most thrilling episodes of a colorful picture.

The pageantry of the times portrayed has full scope in this production. Here are the enormous castles and formal gardens of the Elizabethan period, here are the unbelievable dresses and headgear of the women, and the silks and satins of the men, here is Queen Elizabeth, a notable figure, and true to historical description, with her cool, aquiline features, her pride and her attendant Leicester. And here too, is the sorrowful and romantic figure of Mary of Scotland, appearing briefly with her beautiful, dark face and tragic demeanor, to involve the hero and the heroine almost in ruin.

It is a beautiful and appealing picture, full of the humorous touches that Mary Pickford knows so well how to introduce, gorgeous in its historic settings and the splendor of the courtly surroundings, interesting in its romantic theme of a handsome youth and a lovely maiden, in fact, a production that no one should miss.

A very attractive feature of the production is the singing of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, who appears in a brief prologue, a charming figure in Elizabethan costume, to sing in soft tones the dainty little song, "Dreams," portions of which she repeats throughout the screening. The orchestra, under Mrs. Foster's leaderships, had a fine overture in selections from "The Bohemian Girl."

CITIZENS, THROUGH CITY COUNCIL, HONOR THE CHAMPION LAKEVIEWS

Ontario Junior Baseball Title Holders for Second Successive Year Guests at Dinner.

A HAPPY AFFAIR

Representatives of Other Ball Clubs and P.C.I. Rugby Team Also Guests.

The banquet tendered the Lakeviews Baseball Club by the City Council at the Empress last evening was not only a suitable recognition of the success of the club in bringing the Ontario Junior Baseball championship to Peterboro two years in succession, but was also a demonstration of the fact that clean sport is appreciated and honoured by representative citizens.

The affair was a most happy success, the menu and other arrangements had been carefully attended to, the proceedings were informal enough to give an air of sociability and good fellowship to the gathering, and the speeches were a symposium of good wishes and appreciation for the Lakeviews and other sporting organizations represented.

Guests of honor in addition to the players and officers of the champion Lakeview Club were:G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.; W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.; Mr. T. F. Matthews, of Toronto; Mr. Walter Oke, Mr. J. E. Sullivan and Mr. Donald Loucks, representing the City League; Dr. J. J. Craig and Jimmy McDuffee, of the Kiwanis Bantam champions; Wm. Prindible and "Casey" Masterson of the Sacred Heart Midget champions; C. E. Curtis and Charles Bradley of the Maple Leafs, Juvenile City champions; Walter Rye and Jack Amys, representing the Collegiate Rugby Club; Edgar Lebarr of the City League umpiring staff.

MaYor Presided.

His Worship Mayor Turner did the honors gracefully as chairman and others present were Nagle Phelan, M. J. Maher, Joseph Crowe, J. A. Fife, Walter Stocker and E. M. Turner, members of the City Council, and City Clerk S. R. Armstrong.

While the well chosen and dainty repast was being done justice to, a section of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon rendered a fine programme. The action of the orchestra in giving its services for the occasion was thoroughly appreciated and Mayor Turner expressed the thanks of the Council and guests to the organization.

After the toast to the King had been honoured it fell to Ald. Phelan to propose the toast "Our Guests." In doing so he congratulated the Lakeviews upon their double capture of the Ontario Championships, stressing the fact that they had conducted themselves in a sportsmanlike manner through the game. He eulogized Mr. L. W. Lebarr as one of the best sports in Peterboro and pointed out how much baseball owed to the Lakeview manager. Ald. Phelan also felicitated the Kiwanis, Sacred Heart and Maple Leaf Clubs, on winning their respective City League series and on their good showing in the O.B.A.A. playoffs, and the Collegiate Rugy team on its fine record during the season just closed.

In response to the toast Mr. J. E. Sullivan, president of the City League after extending his congratulations to the Lakeviews and other teams reviewed the City League season and baseball conditions generally in a most interesting manner advising the city fathers to increase the accomodation for recreation in the city. Mr. Sullivan paid a warm tribute to the work of the umpires who had given splendid service during the season and to whose cooperating much of the success of the year was due. He emphasized the value of clean sport as a bouy builder and character developer, pointing out that the lessons learned in sport had their effect in more mature years.

Sister Sports.

Ald. Joseph Crowe in a reminiscent mood proposed the toast to "Sister Sports," contrasting conditions when he was a boy to the present conditions. Ald. Crowe emphasized the importance of supporting the city teams whether they won or lost, so long as they played fairly. It was his opinion that the city should have more skating rinks and he could see no reason why there should not be a rink at each school.

In response, Mr. Walter Oke, after congratulating the guests of honor, declared that Peterboro as a city should provide recreation grounds for its young people. He reviewed the facilities supplied by Toronto in this respect and remarked that Peterboro was not keeping up to other centres along this line. Even if it were necessary to have a Parks' Commission he felt that the majority of citizens would approve of the outlay for this purpose.

The Presentations.

The presentation of the various trophies and medals followed.

Mayor Turner in the absence of Secretary Joe Walsh of the O.B.A.A. from whom a letter of regret had been received, presented th O.B.A.A. Championship trophy and individual medals to the Lakeviews. Lew Lebarr, Jr., the Lakeview captain receiving them on behalf of the team.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., presented his own trophy, the Gordon Cup, emblematic of the City League Junior Championship to the Lakeviews, warmly congratulating the players on their record and praising the services of Manager L. W. Lebarr and Coach Walter Jackson. Mr. Gordon stressed the importance of sport as a developer of the qualities necessary to win success in life. He especially mentioned Frank Whitehouse of the Lakeviews and Jimmy McDuffee of the Kiwanis as worthy of praise.

The Warne Cup for the City League Juvenile Championship was presented to Charlie Bradley, captain of the Maple Leafs by Mayor Turner in the absence of the donor, Mr. W. B .Warne.

Mr. T. F. Matthews of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro, was present to donate his trophy, carrying with it the City League Midget Championship to the Sacred Heart team, crack pitcher receiving the trophy.

The presentation was accompanied by a happy little speech from Mr. Matthews, who expressed his delight at meeting some old friends and declared his conviction that sport was of great value in its results upon the character of those participating.

Dr. J. J. Craig presented the John I. Allen trophy to the Kiwanis Bantams, the recipient being Jimmy McDuffee, the shortstop of the Kiwanis team who had his leg broken in the game with the Toronto bantams and to whose pluck the speaker paid a warm tribute.

The Spalding medals were presented to the four City League winners, the Lakeviews, Maple Leafs, Sacred Heart and Kiwanis teams by Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., pinch-hitting for Mr. Wm. Duncan of A. G. Spalding and Brothers, who was unable to attend.

Mr. Bradburn's speech included warm congratulations to Mr. Lebarr and his Lakeviews and an appeal for hearty support for Peterboro's hockey team which he declared was going to be a winner this winter and were worth the support of the citizens.

A Popular Player.

The last presentation was that of the special medal donated by Mr. Duncan of Spaldings to the most valuable player in the City League. The medal was presented by Mayor Turner to Frank Whitehouse, the Lakeview pitcher, whose record during the year richly earned him the distinction. The popular southpaw not only pitched remarkable ball but he led the City League in batting and his all round playing, and his deportment on and off the field made him an outstanding figure.

Before the National Anthem was sung Mayor Turner expressed his pleasure at the presence of the guests of the evening and pointed out to them that it was merely an indication of the feeling of the citizens whose representatives the members of the council were.

The evening was a fitting climax to a season that has been crowded full of honors for the Lakeviews

BELMONTS TIE UP THE SERIES

Turned Tables on Quakers by Score of 10 to 5 in Softball Finals.

TWO BIG INNINGS

Belmonts evened up the series last night and made a third game necessary to decide the City Softball Championship when they defeated the Quakers by the score of 10 to 5 in a nine innings contest at the Arena.

The game was fairly fast, but both pitchers were hit hard and often. The Belmonts had a slight edge on the night's play, but the Quakers were always dangerous, and at the end of the third inning were leading 3 to 0. The Belmonts took the lead in their half of the fourth when they got to Carruthers for five hits and five runs. Carruthers grooved them right in the centre of the pan every time in this frame and the Belmonts took advantage of them, while in the next frame the Quaker pitcher could not find the plate at all, and issued three passes and with the aid of two more hits added four more to their score, making the count 9 to 4 in their favor. The Quakers came back in the sixth when they had two men on and Lefty Turner to bat.

After the walloping Turner did on Wednesday night Holyman decided it would be better to pass the Quaker slugger and in an effort to put them far enough away from the batter so they would be called balls, he threw a high one and the runner on third scored. Turner was eventually passed and the next man up struck out to retire the side.

Neither team scored in the seventh but the Belmonts brought their total up to 10 in the eighth when Jobbitt scored on Holyman's single.

In the last innings the Quakers went out in order and the Belmonts were declared the winners and given the right to meet the por.idge crew in the third game.

Win for Holyman.

Holyman did the heaving for the winners and made a good fist of it. He was as wild as his opponent Carruthers but good team play behind him helped considerably. Had the Quaker infield given their twirler as good support as Holyman got the score would have been much closer. The Belmonts were hitting Carruthers fairly hard and the Quaker infield were given an exciting time in several innings. Carruthers fanned five batsmen, issued six passes and allowed 12 hits, while Holyman fanned six, passed six and allowed 13 hits.

"Spot" Stuart looked after the key stone sack for the winners in great shape, while he led his team at bat with three safeties in four times up. Harrison at short and Haskill behind the plate also turned in some snappy plays.

Ash was the outstanding player on the Quaker roster, but Morphet and Turner also played their positions nicely.

GRAIN WAS STOLEN.

William James' Wheat Found in Gauld's Barn, Says Constable.

COBOURG, Dec. 12.— George Gauld of Clarke township, will appear before Magistrate Floyd of Bowmanville tomorrow on a charge of stealing grain.

It is said that Gauld took 20 bushels of wheat and oats from the barn of William James, and that Provincial Constable T. W. Cousans found the grain in Gauld's barn.

Another warrant demands the arrest of the head of the Gauld family, who has skipped out.

A wave of theft seems to have spread over the United Counties during this week, several being reported. Boots and shoes were stolen from Fred Bibbie's store in Brighton; the cash box in William Hoar's garage at Newcastle was rifled, and Harold Newton is being sought by the police for theft of a tire, his partner John Wilson being remanded until Monday.

STEACY AGAIN LEADS 'PONIES'

Kingston Baseball Association Thanked Fans for Support Last Season.

START CAMPAIGN

KINGSTON, Dec. 12.—The annual meeting of the Kingston Amateur Baseball Association was held in the Standard Building with a good attendance. President B. N. Steacey was in the chair. The following officers were elected for the season of 1925:

President—B. N. Steacey.
Vice-president—Leo. Millan.
Secretary—A. C. Givens.
Treasurer—W. L. Kennedy.
Manager—Joe Daley.
Executive Committee — Howard Kelly, William Arniell, John Evans.

Messrs. Kennedy and A. C. Givens were appointed delegates to the Central Ontario Baseball League meeting.

After calling the meeting to order President Steacy gave a short address. He thanked the fans for their wonderful support during the past summer and also extended the thanks of the club to the following: Mr. Howard Dick, the City Engineer and his associates for their splendid co-operation; H. C. Nickle for his timely assistance on several occasions; Joe Daley for his hard work with the team; W. L. Kennedy for efficient adiministrations of the finances of the club, handling of the gates, etc.; Bert. Booth for good service as business manager; William Arneill for his supervision of the grounds and aid on the gates, and F. C. Beaudry for his services as official scorer.

Mr. Steacy also expressed great appreciation for the loyal support given him and stated that he wished to publicly thank the team, who had been a credit to their own club and their own city and deserved a muuh better fate than was meted out to them.

Work is being started at once on getting things in line for the coming season.

It was decided, when Bert. Booth announced his final decisions to withdraw from all offices, to merge the office of business manager with the secretary's work.

President Steacey announced his intention of withdrawing from office, but after a long deadlock during which the meeting refused to nominate anybody else, he was forced to allow his name to head the list of officers once more.

An energetic campaign will be started at once to make the coming season a success.

JUNIORS UNDER SENIORS' WING AT BELLEVILLE

Special Committee to Handle the Minor Team Next Season.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Chas. Hanna M.P., Succeeded by N. P. North as President.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 12.—If the enthusiasm prevails throughout next season that was manifest at the annual meeting of the Grand Trunk ball club, Belleville is in again for a big season of the summer pastime. Charles Hanna, M.P., occupied the chair as president and the meeting moved along harmoniously and all matters were discussed with an open mind.

Mr. Charles Panter and Ald. H. W. Greenleaf were present and definitely announced that the new athletic field would not be ready for operation when the ball season opened but probably could be used in the late season providing the team reached the finals. The Parks Board have decided to grass the infield and if this is done the diamond will have to lie dormant until the grass gets well started.

Another big question was brought up by Mr. Robert Colling regarding the Junior team. Last year Mr. Colling went it on his own, formed a junior team in this city and collected a real bunch of ball players for the senior team in years to come and if the team is well looked after it will not be necessary for tourists to come and help out. His suggestions was to place the Juniors under the management of the senior club with a sub-committee handling their affairs. This resolution was unanimously endorsed and the new officers when they meet have power to select the committee.

Nominations were called for officers for the ensuing year and after balloting the following will guide the destinies of the club:

Hon. Presidents, C. E. Hanna, M. P., J. D. McMillan, Mayor Mikel, M. P. Duff.

President N. P. North, 1st vice president A. B. Collins, Secretary-treasurer, Newton Thompson.

Committee of Management, Walter Gerow, Cyril McBride and a member of the team to be selected. This represents a strong set of officers, who will give their time and energy for the upbuilding of the club

A hearty vote of thanks was moved by M. P. Duff and seconded by Robert Colling to the retiring president Charles Hanna for his work during the past year and Mr. Hanna responded thanking all for the good wishes and that he would be right behind the team although not an active worker.

Newton Thompson reported the financial position as satisfactory but the larder will have to be replenished during the winter and ways and means of raising funds were left to the new executive. Baseball is still in a thriving condition in Belleville.

LADIES' MERCANTILE

Last nights rolling in the Ladies' Mercantile League between the Law Ladies and the Richard Hall Ladies brought the league to a close for the first half.

The Law Ladies, owing to a misunderstanding played two ladies who were not eligible for their team. With these two ladies rolling they took three straight, but when the dummy score was put in place of these two ladies—which was the only right thing to do—the Richard Hall Ladies were returned winners, taking three straight.

Some good rolling featured the meet. Miss Easson had high three with 454 and Miss E. Reynolds was next with 434. High singles included Miss Reynolds 201, Miss Easson 173, Miss Fielding 166.

Last night's games finished the first half of the league and the Quaker Oats were returned winners. Up until last week the C.P.C. Ladies had a strangle hold on the league but the Quaker Oats Ladies' three straight wins from them turned the tables. The games between the Canadian Packing and the Quaker Oats were the most sensational of the Ladies' Mercantile League and it is doubtful if two teams will ever stage such hard fought battles as these two teams put up. It was great rolling.

Veteran Cleveland Pitcher Goes to Washington.

NEW YORK, Dec 12.—Two important deals, in both of which the world's champion Washington Senators figured, emerged from a maze of negotiations Thursday marking the final gathering of baseball clans here.

The Senators obtained Stanley Coveleskie, veteran Cleveland pitcher and strengthened their infield reserve forces by getting Mike McNally, utility man traded only yesterday to Boston by the New York Yankees for Howard Shanks.

Washington gave J. T. Prothro, third baseman, called back last season, from Memphis, in exchange for McNally, while Cleveland gets Byron Speece, submarine ball pitcher, and Carl Smith, outfielder, farmed to Memphis last season for Coveleskie.

A PAIR OF NEW SHOES KEPT PADDOCK IN GAME

Overcame Superstitions and Won after the World Said He Was Through.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

In breaking bread with notables of sports it is customary for the original reporter to ask this question:

"What was your biggest thrill?"

Any reporter who fails to ask this question violates Rule No. 476, section B in Elementary Phases of journalism, and is liable to immediate and definite expulsion from the order.

I asked Charley Paddock, fastest human, this question the other day and the Californian replied without hesitation, "The two races I won at Newark, N.J., last summer in the A.A.U. championships."

And there's a story to that.

Paddock came east from the coast in June this year with five sets of running shoes One of them was a set of brand-new shoes which the sprinter hadn't even tried on. The old ones he had used in previous races and had run well in them.

Paddock Superstitious.

Like most athletes Paddock has his superstitions. Jack Dempsey wore a red sweater the day he knocked out Willard. Dempsey never enters the ring now without a red sweater. Cobb and his three bats are a baseball tradition. Paddock and new shoes—well, he wasn't so sure of them.

In the Olympic trials at Cambride, Mass., Paddock wore a pair of old ones, a pair with a history. In the same shoes he had once run the 100 unofficially in 9 2-5 seconds. Two watches caught him in that time. You know what happened at Cambridge. Paddock performed disappointingly. Wasn't even among the qualifiers but the officials put him on the team anyway.

The scene shifts to Paris. The big tests are at hand. Paddock is in his room looking over a collection of running shoes. The new ones, with unused spikes that glisten, stand out. Paddock picks them up, cogitates, puts them back and finally decides on another old pair.

Felt He Was "All In"

Paddock did no better in the Olympics than he had done in the American trials, and word came across the ocean that the most colorful figure known to the cinder track had run his last race.

"I felt that way about it myself," relates Paddock, "and when I got back to America I was ready to quit.

Here's Charlie Paddock, and the pair of running shoes that enabled him to break records after the experts said he was through.

The A.A.U. championships were on at Newark and I was urged to run. I entered more to be with the fellows than anything else.

"I picked up that pair of new shoes—the same pair I had carried from the coast to Cambridge, then to Paris and all the way back—and decided to wear them. You see I really didn't expect to do anything in the races. I had no superstitions. Any shoes would do.

New Shoes Did It!

"I was simply 'breaking in' a pair of new kicks. I don't know how to explain what followed. I never had a pair of shoes on my feet that felt so light and feathery. I knew when I bent over to toe the scratch that I was due for an eventful afternoon."

Evenful afternoon fully describes it. Paddock won the 100 in 9 3-5 seconds, equaling the world record, and the 220 in 20 4-5 equalling another world record, held exclusively by himself. Loren Murchison and Al Leconey, great sprinters, were decisively beaten.

Now if Paddock hadn't been superstitious and had worn the new kicks in the Olympic games—but that's something else again, as Mr. Kipling was wont to say.

BASEBALL SHOWDOWN.

War Between Ban Johnson and Landis Will Reach Crisis.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—The last scene in the 1924 drama centering about baseball's governing forces will be enacted at Chicago next Wednesday when Commissioner Landis will preside over a joint major league meeting which is expected to produce the final "show down" in his war with Ban Johnson, president of the American league, over Landis' handling of the recent bribery scandals in the National League.

FAVOR LIQUOR TREATY.

U. S. Senate Makes Favorable Report on Anti-Smuggling Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press). — A favorable report was ordered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the liquor treaty with Canada, signed on June 6th last. Treaties with France, Panama and Netherlands similar to the recent treaty with Great Britain were also reported favorably.

The treaty with Canada is designed to aid in suppressing smuggling operations along the border.

"Behold! Her Funeral Pyre!"

CORRIGAN plunged through the door, under an archway of fire.

He heard the maniac shouting incoherently after him—heard him empty his revolver into the inferno! . .

Where the blazing roof showered glowing fragments, he found her—bound hand and foot.

o o o

Corrigan held her in front of him, cantering toward the dawn. She looked up at him through misted eyes. "Corrigan's way," she murmured. "You can't beat it!"

CROSSWORD MANIA BREAKS UP HOMES

Neglected Cleveland Wives Said to Plan Divorces From Stricken Husbands.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.— Homes in this city are now threatened by cross-word puzzles. The innocent little white and black squares have fascinated so many husbands that legal aid organizations are being swamped with requests to solve the enigma or to start divorce proceedings.

This direful state of affairs was disclosed to-day by the manager of one of the legal aid organizations, who said that his office was receiving an average of ten letters a day from wives who have to remain at home these evenings just because their husbands are suffering from "cross-word puzzleitis."

All of the letters correspond in almost every detail. One of them is as follows:

"We were happy until recently. Then my husband became absorbed in cross-word puzzles. Since then he has had no time even to look at me or the children. He no more than gets his hat off than it is cross-word puzzles.

"If I talk to him he gets angry. If we do go out for the evening he takes a magazine or newspaper with him and it is a cross-word puzzle.

"Morning, noon and night it is cross-word puzzles. It is breaking up our home, for I have no time for them. He will either have to give up cross-word puzzles and spend some time with his family or I will obtain a divorce."

KORETZ IS A "WHITE WING."

Swindler Gets Out-of-Doors Clean-Up Job For His Health.

STATEVILLE, Ill., Dec. 12.—Leo Koretz, who has begun to serve a sentence of from one to ten years for swindling in the promotion of a phantom Panama oil scheme in which relatives and friends invested $2,000,000, has been made a prison "white wing." He will police the yard for bits of paper and rubbish.

Warden Whitman assigned him to the job when informed by prison physicians that the fresh air would be beneficial to his chronic diabetes.

Prizes For Queen's Rugby Champions Are Questioned

KINGSTON, Dec. 12.—The Kingston Municipal Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire has written the City Council asking whether in view of the comparatively small grant given to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and in view of the great amount of unemployment and distress in the city, the council felt warranted in spending nine hundred dollars of the city's money in giving presents to the members of the victorious football teams.

DANCING ABOARD SHIP.

The Favorite Diversion of Passengers.

Describing the social aspect of a voyage through the Norwegian fjords, a correspondent says:

"There was dancing every night from nine to twelve, and one afternoon when rain came on the ship's fiddlers were routed out and everybody, or nearly everybody, danced until dinner-time. At Molde the dancers went ashore and danced till midnight at the little theatre just opened there.

Dancing beat all other forms of diversion easily. Nobody touched draughts or chess. A whist drive attracted only four and twenty out of four hundred, and a proposed auction bridge tournament was a washout.

ENGLISHMEN PEDAL BICYCLES WHILE THE AMERICANS USE AUTOS

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The automobile has not yet replaced bicyles in Great Britain, not by a long shot. There are 6,000,000 of the latter in this country, and less than 1,000,000 motor cars. Motor-cycles, which are more popular than in the United States, number 500,000.

The ministry of transport, in making public these statistics, noted that the British are doing a greater export business with bicycles and motor cycles than American manufacturers, who once led the British in this trade.

In 1923, according to British records, Great Britain exported 7,270 cycles while America was sending out 16,000. But the latest figures show 20,000 machines exported from Great Britain and only 9,700 from the United States.

Not all the new hats have high square brims. Lanvin is making a charming soft felt with a rolled brim that fits the head in much the same close manner the cloche used to.

SAMUEL GOMPERS DIED TO-DAY AFTER HEROIC FUTILE RALLY

President of American Federation of Labor Succumbed to Illness.

DEFEATED HOPES.

Rushed From Mexico That He Might Be Home.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, December 13. — United Press. — Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor died here this morning at 4.05 o'clock.

Gompers was taken ill in Mexico City last Wednesday and was rushed to the United States when he insisted if he was to die he wanted to die at home.

He arrived here at 5 o'clock yesterday and although his condition was critical physicians were hopeful that he would recover.

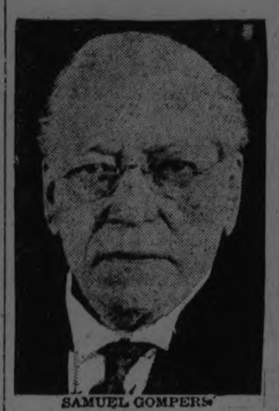
He took a turn for the worse during the night, however, and death resulted this morning.

Saw Approaching Death.

The primary cause of death was acute heart disease, with pulmonary oedema, complicated by advanced nephritis and arterial hypertension.

Mr. Gompers had been improving during the early part of the night, but at 2.30 his heart began to fail, refusing to respond to drugs. Mr. Gompers was conscious much of the time, and was able to talk to his physicians.

Apparently he knew the end was near and called some of his closest friends to his bedside, with whom he talked over his own funeral arrangements.



SAMUEL GOMPERS

As William D. Mallon of Detroit came to his bedside, Mr. Gompers reached for his hand, called him "Bill," and to his handclasp responded with a feeble effort.

Mr. Gompers was told by a physician, shortly after 2.30, that he might not live through the night. The dying man breathed more heavily for a moment, but made no other response.

Immediately after Mr. Gomper's death the members of the Executive Council of the Federation held a meeting to draw up a formal statement and make arrangements for the funeral.

ENLARGE THE UNION.

Bechuanaland and Swazeland May Be Assimilated By South Africa.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, December 13. Canadian Press. — Developments towards incorporating the whole of the Bechuanaland protectorate into the union of South Africa are imminent, the Johannesburg Star is informed.

The matter will engage the attention of the Assembly of the coming session.

Premier Hertzog is said to have told a deputation from the protectorate recently that the time had arrived to consider the incorporation of Bechuanaland and also Swazaland, into the union.

LIQUOR CAUSE OF INCE DEATH

Film Producer Blamed Bad Liquor at Yachting Party for Illness.

LEFT $4,000,000.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 13.—Thomas H. Ince, motion picture producer, who died here last month after falling ill aboard a yacht in San Diego harbor, left an estate of approximately $4,000,000, it was revealed by Charles Fourl, of counsel for the executors.

Virtually all of the estate goes to the widow and three children under the terms of the will.

Enquiries made by District Attorney Kempley of San Diego County showed that Ince connected his illness with liquor. No official investigation into the cause of his death will be made.

What the District Attorney and his investigators have been able to learn of the yacht party and Ince's illness is contained in the following account, according to the Times: ....

The yacht Oneida left San Pedro harbor late on Saturday, November 15, dropping anchor in San Diego harbor early Sunday.

Aboard were William Randolph Hearst, publisher; Elinor Glyn, novelist; Marion Davies and Seena Owen, motion-picture actresses; Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, head of the Cosmopolitan Production, and others.

Ince left the yacht Monday with Dr. Goodman and with him boarded the morning train for Los Angeles.

Patient Taken to Hotel.

Witnesses said the producer at that time appeared to be in distress. Twenty miles out of San Diego, at Del Mar, Dr. Goodman removed Ince from the train, hailed an automobile and took the sufferer to a hotel. Dr. Parker then was summoned, and he in turn, called for the trained nurse, Miss Howard.

When he arrived at the hotel Dr. Parker found Inch in his shirt sleeves lying upon a bed in the room which had been engaged for him.

He helped the patient to disrobe, and, with Dr. Goodman present, examined him. He diagnosed the case as heart disease and prescribed remedies. His questioning of the patient brought out that the latter had smoked a great deal during the previous twenty-four hours, had eaten heartily and partaken of liquor.

Dr. Parker left instructions that the patient should rest, and when he called again that night Ince appeared much improved.

He planned to see the patient again the next day, but was informed in a note left with the hotel clerk by Mrs. Ince, who had been hurriedly summoned from Los Angeles, that his services no longer would be required.

Mrs. Ince later called in Dr. Ida C. Glasgow, of Los Angeles, who took charge of the case.

Among those interviewed by the District Attorney, two, Dr. Truman A. Parker and Miss Jessie Howard, a trained nurse.

Dr. Parker was called to attend the producer when the latter was at Del Mar, Calif, en route to Los Angeles, after leaving the yacht. He is quoted as saying that Ince talked of having partaken of "considerable liquor aboard the yacht."

Says Bad Rum Caused Illness

Miss Howard, according to Kemply, said Ince told her his illness was caused by "bad liquor." In saying that, she said, he was seized with a coughing spell, which brought up traces of blood.

BANK PRESIDENT DIDN'T CONSULT THE DIRECTORS

Gough and Daly Protested That They Were Ignored By Haney.

LETTERS SHOWN.

Home Bank Placed in Dangerous Condition by Haney's Loans.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—The trial of R. P. Gough, Home Bank director, in the County Criminal Court will probably be concluded by Tuesday next. Major A. E. Nash, accountant and chief Crown witness in the Home Bank trials, was on the stand all day on Friday. When the court adjourned he was being cross-examined by W. N. Tilley, K.C., counsel for the defence. The examination will continue Monday, after which counsel will address the judge.

Major Nash's evidence is largely a repetition of the evidence he gave in earlier trials, and is of the statements made by the bank to the Government, both annual and monthly. He shows that certain items carried under certain headings were misleading.

The feature of the trial yesterday was the submission of two letters by the defence, written by the accused and H. J. Daly in 1918, protesting that M. J. Haney, then president, was making loans and transacting big business without the approval of the board. Mr. Gough said that he was elected as a director to protect the interests of the shareholders and that as such, demanded his right to know everything that was going on. Mr. Daly declared in his letter that a certain loan made by Haney without the board's approval had placed the bank in a precarious position.

The letters were written on the same date, May 13, 1918. Mr. Gough's was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Haney,—On thinking over our conversation of Friday morning I feel that the board should take such steps to make sure that the matters I complained of cannot occur again. My personal relations with you have been so cordial with you that this is in no way a criticism of your motives. But when I found that you, as chief executive, had made investments covering large amounts and had made transactions in stocks and large loans which were not even considered by the board or known by it, and not reported until the moneys were advanced, such as the purchase of locomotive stock, the credits of $150,000 and $120,000 (reported in the minutes of April 22 and May 6) and other transactions of a like nature, I was astounded for it was to attend to matters like this that the shareholders elected directors, and they were never asked to consent to our turning over our duties to any officer.

Without Directors' Consent.

"It did cut me personally for I felt also that directors should feel to each other as partners and for you to ask me to join you on the board and then to find out that you ran things as though I was not a member. I could not stand that.

"I accept in the fullest measure your promise that hereafter no matters of policy or any matter of business will be decided excent by the board. But now we know that it is possible for an executive to put things through without the consent of the directors, it is our duty to the shareholders to give them the protection they think they have, and so I would ask you to have all by-laws at once gone over and such amendments made as may be needed to make sure that no further executive or any officer, no matter how good his motives or his judgment, can commit us to any stock purchase or any large loan or anything of im-

CITY OPPOSES ACTION OVER FLOODED CELLAR

Kitchener Contends It is Not Liable for Damaged Goods.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.—(By Canadian Press).—To what extent is a municipality responsible for the flooding of a cellar during a rainstorm?

This is one of the diverse questions before the Supreme Court of Canada, which reserved judgment Friday in the action of the city of Kitchener, Ont., versus the Robe and Clothing Company and the Standard Paving Company, third party.

The factory of The Robe and Clothing Company had its cellar flooded during a heavy rain in Kitchener. The company sought to hold the town responsible for the resultant damage on two grounds; insufficient capacity of the sewage system and the presence of a mound of debris placed in front of the factory by the Standard Paving Company in re-paving the street.

The Ontario courts held the city responsible on the latter ground, because the debris blocked the water flowing down the sidewalk. The town claims in the appeal that this was not the primary cause of the damage, and, if it was, the town was not responsible for the act of the contractor, or if so liable, it has its remedy through action against the contractor as third party.

HIGHT LETTERS TO SWEETHEART READ AT TRIAL

Written When Pastor Was In Jail on Charge of Poisoning His Wife.

WERE INTERCEPTED.

Hight Squirms as Clergymen Tell About Confessions He Made to Them.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Dec. 13. — Forgotten relics of their plum orchard romance came back Thursday to Elsie Sweein and Lawrence Hight.

The musty mementoes, two love letters, were flaunted before them in open court, where they are on trial for poisoning Elsie's husband and Hight's wife.

Hight penned the letters when a prisoner in the county jail at Nashville, Ill., and addressed them to "My Dearest Sweetheart," then held in the Salem jail.

One was written before and one after he confessed that he had plotted the double poisoning to further the love that had flourished because "his wife was cold and Elsie was warm and affectionate."

Thinking of Her.

This pastor with a poker face was thinking, the letters indicated, more about "dearest Elsie" than of punishment for murder.

Witness this, written September 23:

"My Dearest Sweetheart,—How are you to-day, sweetheart? It is 10 o'clock now and I am still thinking of you as I left you. You must get some rest and get to feeling better. Don't you write anyone where I am.

"Say, we ought to get the same lawyers. You write me about this as soon as you can. I surely hope you are better by the time you get this.

"Be good, dear; I will be thinking about you all the time.

"I have a nice place here—only three others in the jail, while there were thirteen at Mt. Vernon, and they were so tough. It is quiet here.

"Take good care of yourself. Good-bye with love.

"L. M. H."

Stopped Another One.

Sheriff intercepted the letter, copied it, and turned it over to State's Attorney Thompson, who warned him to watch for more. Four days later the Sheriff stopped this one:

"How are you to-day, dearest Elsie? Again I hope that you are feeling better. Brace up, be brave, dear, and do the best you can. You cannot know how much I wish I could see you. You must eat so you can gain some strength.

"I have read all the papers. I know you never would say some of the things you are quoted as saying. I hope to see you at the Court-House when the trial is on.

"Be true and take care of yourself. I am well and have a nice place, and they are good to me. With all my love.

"L. M. HIGHT."

Through these documents the State hopes to establish the deep affection Hight held for Mrs. Sweetin, as the motive for the poisoning.

The letters were the crowning jolt of a day-replete with blows for the defence. Hight had lost his fight to bar from evidence the confession he made to a committee of ministers. Four clergymen had taken the stand and told of the pastor's romance.

"Brother Hight," as they referred to him, squirmed in his chair like a school boy, nervously fingering his chin and Mrs. Sweetin shaded her eyes and wiped them with a handkerchief as the court crowd snikered at the revelations.

FRENCH EXPECT DEBT TO BE CUT IN PROPORTION TO REPARATIONS

Yield From Germany Reduced From 68 to 20 Billion Marks—Should Be Considered in Estimating Capacity of France to Pay Her War Creditors.

CHURCHILL STIRRED UP QUESTION.

PARIS, Dec. 13. — The French have become very sensitive on the question of the inter-allied debts since the reduction in their reparation claims, which they assert has come about largely through British and United States influence and have cut the amount they might expect from Germany from 68,000,000,000 marks to about 20,000,000 marks. The feeling in official circles is represented as being that if the conciliatory attitude taken toward Germany is to be repaid by interference whenever France has a chance of obtaining any compensating financial advantage it is too much to expect that France will bear it with equanimity.

Premier Herriot, whose disposition since he took power has been conciliatory to all foreign questions is representing as holding that while France, now as always, considers a debt is a debt and must be paid, there are nevertheless abundant reasons for recalling that the war debts differ in character and that special circumstances between different sets of the allies makes different conditions of settlement not only reasonable but in some cases necessary.

Summing up the present status of the debt question, Le Temps Friday says:

"When the time comes to proceed to a reasonable settlement the negotiators will be obliged by force of circumstances to take into account the yield of reparations under the Dawes plan in estimating the capacity of France to pay. It would be profundly unjust to seek to give precedence to inter-allied debts over reparations."

Coolidge's Attitude.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—President Coolidge was represented yesterday as being opposed to any plan for submission to the world court or any other tribunal of the adjudication of war claims against Germany under the Dawes plan. His position also was said to be unchanged concerning the war debt fund to the United States by France and other powers.

Mr. Coolidge is known to be convinced that the United States position regarding claims collection is perfectly understood by foreign governments interested and that the right of collection is establishing beyond question by treaty agreement.

The president's position that there is no need of referring the subject of claims collection to a tribunal for adjudication is understood to be based on the belief that whatever differences may exist between the United States and Great Britain can be adjusted by regular negotiations conducted through representatives of the two governments.

Senator's Comment.

High officials of the Government served informal notice upon Great Britain that interference by that Government in negotiations for the settlement of France's war debt to the United States will not be tolerated here.

Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, addressing the Senate, denounced the attitude of Britain as set worth in the speech by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the British Exchequer, in which it was bluntly stated that France would not be permitted to pay its debt to the United States unless similar payments were made to England. Reed exclaimed:

"This great nation cannot afford to tolerate such interference by Great Britain or any other nation. It is our business to proceed with our negotiations with France as we see fit. If England has a claim against France, let her prosecute it and settle it in her own way. She must not interfere with any plans that France may have regarding her debt to this nation."

Divergent Views.

LONDON, Dec. 13.— The allied war debts continue to hold first place in the news, and editorial columns of the London papers, which unanimously support Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill's announcement that if the continental nations begin paying their debts to the United States, they will be expected to make proportionate payments on their obligations to Great Britain.

Comparing the published views in the United States and France on the war debt question to the one almost universally held here, some of today's papers conclude that they represent three distinct attitudes which eventually will have to be brought into line with each other, perhaps by an international conference.

The Morning Post declares the country is coming to the conclusion that the problem will be solved only by frank, honest consultation among all the parties concerned and by willingness to form a general pool.

RUSSIAN WOMAN TELLS PLAN TO SHOOT KRASSIN

Waited For Hours With Revolver Outside Embassy in Paris.

WAS ARRESTED.

Soviet Ambassador Formally Received by President Doumergue Without Pomp.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Mary Dickson, a Russian woman, widow of an American, who was arrested at the Russian embassy, confessed yesterday she had intended to kill the Soviet ambassador, Leonid Krassin. The women had been standing in front of the building for hours when the detectives began questioning her. When she confided her purpose to them they arrested and lodged her in the St. Lazaire prison. Besides the revolver she had 12 cartridges in her possession and she will be prosecuted on the charge of carrying concealed weapons, it was stated. She had been in Paris about a month and described herself as a literary woman.

The police kept the fact of her arrest secret until late Friday.

TROTZKY IS ILL.

Soviet War Minister Retires to Caucasus For Health.

MOSCOW, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press).—The departure of Leon Trotzky, the Soviet War Minister, for the Caucasus has given rise to the usual speculation regarding his political status and future.

Reports from abroad declaring that Trotzky's trip for his health really means exile are characterized in official quarters as wholly unfounded and as on a par with extravagant stories circulated last year when, after his retirement to Sukum on the Black Sea to build up his health, it was alleged that he had been displaced in the government.

A correspondent of the press was informed last night by high authority that Trotzky's physical condition is so unsatisfactory to his doctors that it is likely they will insist that he remain at the health resort for at least six months.

OFFER TO GREB.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, announced last night that he had received a cabled offer of $50,000 from Jimmy Johnston in London to meet 'Tiger' Flowers, Atlanta, Ga., negro, in a bout next June, involving Greb's title.

The first, according to Greb, is to be staged either at the New York Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium. Greb said he is taking the offer under consideration.

LEAGUE NEEDS ADHERENCE OF UNITED STATES

Former Premier of France Believes American Women Will Prove the Final Factor.

A PEACE MEDIUM.

Better Three Statesmen Than Three Million Soldiers To Europe.

ROME, Dec. 13.—The league of nations can only become truly great when the United States adheres to it in some form or other declared Aristide Briand, former premier of France, to press correspondent's last night.

In his talk with correspondents M. Briand, like Senor Guani of Uruguay and M. Unden, Sweden, in the formal session, referred to the great hopes pinned on the work of the law commission. He showed himself a steadfast advocate of the Geneva peace protocol during a frank discussion of world political conditions; but he expressed the readiness of France to consider any powers looking to perfection of the protocol which he described as a powerful medium for the prevention of war. "The only possible hope for the future is for the nations to go before Judges," said M. Briand.

This he declared, is what the protocol provides, and he added, "if there is any country in the world which is ardently devoted to such a method of settling a conflict it is the United States."

Asked concerning the so-called Japanese amendments touching upon the league council's power to examine into disputes which have arisen out of democratic problems, M. Briand remarked that President Wilson found it appropriate during the great war to intervene and ask the European powers to state their war aims. No one, the French states man added, deemed this extraordinary, and no one objected because all understood the request was based on a desire to help humanity and stop war.

The only idea of the protocol, in the opinion of M. Briand was to offer mediation. He asserted that it was not intended to interfere in democratic matters. Any case of world conflict, he declared, naturally was of concern to the leagues of nations which was devoted to maintaining peace.

Growing Stronger

M. Briand affirmed his belief that the league of nations was growing stronger every day. Even if it did not do big things every day it justified its existence alone as a meeting ground for the representatives of governments, who often are able to settle in a few minutes of conver-

LONDON GROPED IN STYGIAN FOG

City in Darkness Since Tuesday Night—Safe Cover For House-breakers.

STREETS DESERTED.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—London is emerging from a long night. Since Tuesday evening the city has been wrapped in a dense fog which is estimated to have cost $100,000 for each hour in street, shop and office lighting and in loss of business.

Not within the memory has London been shrouded in another $5,000,000 gloom. Oil flares have been burning at every important traffic crossing. Numerous street accidents drove the city's millions to the subways as the safest means of travel.

Theatres lost thousands of dollars nightly because it was not safe for people to be on the streets.

The fog extended over Southern England. All train services have been heavily curtained.

The fog has caused untold inconvenience in delays to or the stopping of shipping and all the transport lines, except the underground system, and the Londoners the personal afflictions of smarting eyes or the disarrangement of the bronchial tubes. The only persons who have appeared to derive some small comfort out of the situation have been American and other foreign tourists. To them sightseeing under such novel conditions, in darkness and the soot-laden atmosphere, has proved interesting.

Race meetings at many places have had to be abandoned, the ferry service across the River Thames have been stopped and all the Continental air services suspended.

The police took special precautions but with fog so thick that one could not see twenty feet away burglars could work almost without impunity. Porch and drain pipe climbers have taken £10,000 worth of jewels fro West End mansions during the week.

PRIZE WHEAT GROWING BETTER YEAR BY YEAR

J. C. Mitchell of Algoma, Alberta, Declared World's Champion Wheat Producer.

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Prize wheat is growing bigger and better year by year claims J. C. Mitchell of Algoma, Alberta, thrice declared the world's champion wheat grower at the Chicago live stock show is on his way to the Old With him is Mrs. Mitchell who saved Country on a demonstration tour. the coveted honor for the family this year by spectacular rescuing the crop from threatened destruction by rain. Each year makes a difference, he said, when interviewed at the Canadian Pacific headquarters this morning, exhibits which came 15th and 20th now would have won first prize twelve years ago.

The secret of bigger grain he said is in selecting the grain, only by picking out the biggest and best is the grower able to produce something better than other growers. This selection takes time but is eminently worth while. The select wheat is not put through a machine by A R. Mitchell but is flailed by hand or tramped by horses, while in England Mr. Mitchell hopes to meet a Professor Boffin of Cambridge who has originated the finest winter wheat and now expects to concentrate on spring wheat and rustless varieties.

SEND GREETINGS ON A C.N.R. TELEGRAM

Canadian National Christmas Telegraph Blanks Made Their Appearance To-day.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Attractively decorated and printed in seasonable Christmas colors the new holiday telegram blanks made their appearance on the Canadian National Telegraph counters throughout Canada today. The design decorating them is fully in keeping with the Christmas spirit, and shows a typical Canadian Winter scene, while the borders of holly and mistletoe form an attractive background. These forms will be used entirely for the sending of Christmas greetings.

A feature which the Canadian National Telegraphs is introducing this year is the sending of cable greetings to Great Britain and Ireland at a special holiday rate. Twelve messages conveying Christmas remembrances have been prepared and the sender is permitted to select any one of these. The cost of any message selected will be $1.00 from Ontario and provinces east and $1.25 for Manitoba, the west and Pacific Coast

The message give a wide field of selection and some run as many as twenty-five words. It was necessary to limit them to the dozen owing to the small charge made. To facilitate transmission at this low rate no alterations are permitted in these special messages.

These cables will be accepted up till six o'clock on the evening of December 23rd, and will be delivered in the United Kingdom and the Free State on special ornamented holiday blanks. Holiday greetings for Continental Europe will also be accepted on the same basis and subject to mail delivery from London and must not be filed later than December 21.

BANK EMPLOYES LIE ON FLOOR WITH CLIENTS

While Armed Robbers Loot Vaults of $50,000 in Sack.

CLEAR AWAY.

Nanaimo is Scene of Daring Raid—Car and Launch Used.

NANIMO, B.C., Dec. 13. (Canadian Press).—The Royal Bank of this city was held up just about closing time, 3 p.m., yesterday, by between six and eight men, who escaped with $50,000.

Two men watched the doors, leaving their car with the engine running at the curb.

Another of the gang with two guns herded the customers and employees to the back of the bank, compelling them to lie down on the floor. Others of the gang rifled the safe and tills and secured, it is alleged, a sack containing money for miners' pay.

The robbers are endeavoring to reach the United States side of the international boundary in a speed boat, according to a long distance telephone message to the Canadian Press. The motor car in which the robbers made their escape has been found abandoned near the boat harbor, six miles from Nanaimo, and two and a half miles off the main island highway. The boat harbor is an abandoned landing stage now seldom frequented.

Police boats are searching and combing the waters of the gulf, craft having been despatched from Nanaimo, Vancouver, Victoria and other places.

The United States police have also been notified to be on the lookout for the robbers.

RUSH OF GRAIN BOATS IS OVER

Season of Navigation Closed Without Any Rush of Traffic.

STORAGE HEAVY.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 13.—The end of the season of navigation came without any rush of grain boats to the head of the lakes, and with considerabiy more grain in store here than there was last year. In spite of the storm early in the week all the grain boats scheduled to arrive to clear Friday got away before midnight, their last trip taking out a little over three million bushels. During the last week of navigation approximately twelve million bushels went down the lakes from here, as compared with about sixteen million last year during the same period.

It is expected that when the stocks on hand after the last boat has gone are compared with those left here at the same date last year, there will be about thirty million of carry-over for the winter, as against twenty one million last year.

In addition to the storage capacity of the elevators, there were here during last winter, 3,331,972 bushels in storage afloat and to-day there are six boats here which will, between them, take on about 1,720,000 bushels which is almost exactly half. But owing to the short crop in the west it is not expected that there will be the same pressure on space as last winter.

It is possible that a few odd boats may arrive here yet though none are reported as coming up. Three other boats, are here but their intention is not yet declared and they may either take a chance of clearing or be added to tonnage here available for winter storage.

WOMAN'S AMBITION FOILS STATESMEN

Frau Stresemann Would Have Her Husband Become Chancellor.

(By Carl Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent).

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The ambition of a woman is blocking settlement of the German Cabinet crisis, according to gossip in political circles.

Frau Stressemann wife of the Foreign Minister, has long wanted her husband, who heads the Nationalists, to obtain the post of Chancellor.

Dr. Stresemann himself is ambitious to head a government but the complicated situation resulting from the National elecions makes it practically impossible for a cabinet of the right to be formed.

Chancellor Marx received the leaders of the Socialist party to-day. The latter have declared they will not support a government headed by Dr. Stresemann and the latter, realizing that his tenure of office would be brief with out such support is not anxious to be jockeyed into a position where he seems to have used strength of his party to obtain the Chancellorship only to lose office shortly thereafter by a vote of lack of confidence.

Dr. Stresemann is reported willing to accept the post he now occupies—that of foreign minister —in a new coalition cabinet.

Conferences which Marx has held with leaders of various parties, for the last forty eight hours, have not materially cleared the tangled situation, politicians are still juggling with various combinations

SCOTT TO HANG; SENTENCE GIVEN

Pleaded Guilty, Changed to Not Guilty, Tried to Blame Brother.

JURY DECIDES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press).—The jury, after 45 minutes' deliberation, last night found Russell Scott, former Canadian financial wizard, guilty of the murder of Joseph Maurer, 19-year-old cigar clerk, during a hold-up last April, and fixed his punishment at death on the gallows.

The jury took two ballots. They were given the case at 10.45 o'clock last night.

Scott was indicted with his brother Robert, but the latter was never apprehended, and during the trial the defence made an effort to fasten the shooting on the missing brother. At one time Scott pleaded guilty but was allowed to withdraw the plea at the tearful entreaty of his attorney, after the Judge indicated that he would sentence Scott to be hanged.

The youthful former Canadian financier was near collapse last night.

OTTAWA, December 12. — The crop of bankruptcies in the Dominion registered in this week's Canada Gazette is somewhat higher than usual. The total is 53 ,out of which the Province of Quebec has 25, Ontario has 18, Alberta has 6, British Columbia 2, and Manitoba and Nova Scotia, 1 each.

Four Foot Wild Cat Is Shot In New Germany

GUELPH, Dec. 13—(Canadian Press).—Within a stone's throw of the centre of the village of New Germany, the first lynx that has been seen in this section of the country for a considerable time was shot yesterday by William Halter of that village. The wild cat tipped the scales at 32 pounds and was four feet long from tip to tip.

OBITUARY.

W. GAUCHER.

CAMPBELFORD, December 13. —The funeral of the late W. Gaucher was held on Friday afternoon. The service at the house at two o'clock was conducted by Rev. G. C. Clarke, B.A., of Christ church, Campbellford. Though the family attended the Methodist church at Meyersburg they are members of the Anglican church.

Mr. Clarke read for Scripture readings Psalm 90 and the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians, from the 20th verse. He chose his text from the 121st Psalm, verses 1 and 2: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth."

He spoke of the Resurrection from the dead. Life is a time of preparation for the world to come. The 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians is a most beautiful passage. If you ask me "Why did God permit all this suffering, not only of our young friend, but the sufferings of the parents in seeing him suffer?" The only answer anyone can give is "We do not know." If you should ask me "Does God care?" I have a permanent answer "He does care." If you ask "How do I know that he cares?" I will point you to the cross of Jesus Christ. By His suffering on the cross for us He shows that He does care. The one who is gone from us was only 16 years of age when the accident befell him and he had spent ten years of suffering and sorrow in traveling about trying to get a cure for his hurt body. He has been for eight and nine months at a time in the hospital.

The burial took place in the Mount Pleasant cemetery at Campbellford. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Ed. Hay, Neil and Allan Johnston, Robert Fox, Alex. Gordonier (a brother-in-law) of Belleville, and Ernest Stevenson of Hastings.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bound, Mr. and Mrs. John Jones and the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church at Meyersburg, each sent flowers.

While all realize that death brought a release from suffering, all those who loved him will miss him, and the sympathy of the community goes out to the family and relatives.

MRS. ALBERT J. SANDERSON.

OMEMEE, Dec. 12. — The sad death of Hattie Pogue, beloved wife of Albert J. Sanderson, of Omemee, occurred on Wednesday evening at her home here, and came as a shock to her immediate relatives as well as to the community at large. The deceased lady had been in good health until less than a week previous to her death when she developed a severe cold and not until Monday evening was her condition thought to be serious. Medical aid was summoned from Omemee, also from Peterborough, and a trained nurse was in attendance, but nothing could be done to prolong her life. Pneumonia had set in, followed by spinal meningitis, and death came suddenly on Wednesday evening.

The funeral service was held on Friday afternoon from her late residence, conducted by her pastor, the Rev. J. A. Black, interment taking place in Emily cemetery.

Many floral tributes were placed on the casket by kind friends and loved ones.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother is her sorrowing husband and heart-broken family, Mrs. Clarence MacArthur of Washago, Mrs. H. Jackson of East Emily, and three small children, Martha, John and Willie at home, also three sisters, Mrs. W. Lang of Omemee, Mrs. A. Flemming of Hill Head, and Mrs. J. Henderson of Cobourg, and four brothers, Mr. Percy Pogue of Lindsay, and Arthur Vincent and Burton of Ops, to all of whom the sincerest sympathy of the community is extended.

LEAGUE NEEDS

sation delicate matters which formerly required six months of diplomatic correspondence.

Recalling his experiences at the Washington conference, M. Briand said he had the impression in Washington that there was a kind of embargo on the league of nations. He thought this Washington atmosphere could be broadened to encircle the world and declared if the United States was convinced that the covenant of the league must be revised before the United States would enter the league, then all the powers certainly would agree to study the suggestion. The belief was expressed by M. Briand that time would satisfactorily settle the position of the United States toward the league and that the women of the United States would play a mighty role in this settlement.

"American women who lost sons in the great war,' 'declared M. Briand, "know that it is better to send three statesmen to Europe than to send three million soldiers."

portance until the board first authorires the same."

R. P. GOUGH.

The letter from H. J. Daly to Haney itemized his protests as follows:

"Dear Mr. Haney,—Regarding the management of the affairs of the bank and the points which have been under discussion for the last few days I wish to submit the following:

"First, I find that investments were made without reference to the board, and after the transactions had taken place the board was asked to approve of such investments, and I am sure that some of those investments would not have been approved had they been consulted before.

"Second, I find that it has been the practice to loan large sums and to call for the board's approval after the money has been advanced. I also understand the bank loaned some moneys on a basis of participation in the profits. If this is so every case should be laid before the board for their enlightenment. Furthermore, no such transactions should be entered into without first consulting the board.

Advance Not Justified.

"Third—The advances to the Reynolds Company are not justified, that is, the amount is altogether out of proportion to the amount invested by the borrowers.

"Fourth—The liquid position of the bank is not at all satisfactory. In fact, the recent advances to the Whalen Pulp and Paper Co. have put the bank in a very precarious position.

"Fifth—A general manager should have been appointed long ago.

"Instead of advancing large sums we should retrench to the extent of positively refusing to take on any new borrowing accounts. Furthermore we should immediately turn into cash every available security.

"All the above matters were discussed at a recent meeting and Mr. Gough promised to go into the whole matter with you, but in view of the recent loans to the Whalen Company, I am impressed that it is not the intention to change the policies referred to."

HIGHT LETTERS

West Frankfort, who was appointed to represent the pastor prisoner in proceedings against him in the church, developed into the prosecution's star witness.

It was he who gave the most absorbing details of "Brother Hight's Memoirs."

It was like this, the minister said, from his recollections of the defendant's utterances:

"Brother Hight got a case of love at first sight when he beheld Mrs. Sweetin walk down the church aisle. They could not divorce their mates and marry because that would mean he would be unfrocked. So he bought the poison."

When they began keeping trysts, frequently in the moonlit plum orchard, they made their appointments with the utmost secrecy. The witness continued:

"He told me he would write a note and hide it in an apple, so that he could pass it to Elsie without being seen.

"After Wilford Sweetin was dead, Brother Hight told me, Elsie began to chide him."

Her Love Greater.

Her words were quoted thus:

"You don't love me as much as I love you, because you haven't done as much for me."

The Rev. Otto Hoarsley, the Rev. J. S. Cummins and the Rev. E. O. Allen added corroboration.

The Rev. E. O. Connett told of visiting Hight in jail and advising him to confess if he were guilty. Connett said:

"I told him it would be the best thing for him in the life to come before God. I was advising him as to his soul and did not mean he would gain any earthly advantage from an admission."

Sheriff May produced a letter addressed by Hight to his congregation. It ran:

"Dear Friends,—I am very sorry for what I have done. I have asked God to forgive me, and now I ask you. It is not justice I want, but mercy."

The plump Mrs. Sweetin, who has gained fifteen pounds since she went to jail, so far has been shielded from the brunt of the State's case, as none of Hight's admissions were made when she was present.

The prosecution, however, expects to connect the poisoners by direct testimony.

makes the dressing as good as the fowl

The new "Quaker Dressing" is just as delicious and just as wholesome as the bird with which you will fill it. The big plump Quaker Grains, roasted with the other savouries, add a toothsome flavour that will please every palate. The wholesome nourishment with which Quaker Oats is so plentifully stored makes "Quaker Dressing" just as valuable a food as the meat of the fowl itself.

"Quaker Dressing" will make your turkey and other fowl this year taste just so much better than last year. It will add new zest and appreciation to the dinner.

MORE CIVIC RINKS.

The suggestion made by Ald. Crowe at the civic banquet to the Lakeview Baseball Club on Thursday that the school premises of the city should be community playgrounds both in summer and winter, and that there should be skating rinks at every school in Peterborough, is worthy of consideration.

The city has not enough free rinks, and Ald. Crowe's plan would provide one for each section of Peterborough at a minimum of expense, inasmuch as a supply of water would be available and convenient places for storing hose and equipment.

There is room at practically every school for a rink, and there is no doubt of the popularity of such a policy both with the youngsters and with their parents.

Money spent in providing facilities for the younger generation to indulge in wholesome, invigorating exercise under proper conditions should not be regarded as an expenditure, merely as an investment from which a fine return may be confidently expected.

Peterborough has made some progress along this line, but could go much further without being in danger of overdoing the thing, or of being accused of extravagance in the handling of public funds.

Many citizens will hope that Ald. Crowe will endeavor to "sell" his plan to his colleagues around the Council board.

MUNICIPAL FINANCING.

Yesterday the Examiner argued the desirability of reducing municipal taxation, in spite of the oft-repeated assertion of members of city councils that the thing cannot be done.

The Citizens' Research Institute lists some improvements that could be made by many municipalities that would help in the desired reduction.

The following questions should b eof interest not only to the Council but to citizens generally:

1. Is the civic budget passed in January?
2. Does the budget make an allowance for uncollectable taxes?
3. Does the amount of money which the municipality has to borrow from the banks, in anticipation of taxes, decrease from year to year?
4. Are the tax arrears decreasing?
5. Does the city centralize its purchasing?
6. Do the so-called "Outside Boards" cooperate with the municipality in purchasing?
7. Has your city cut down the number of civic departments to a minimum?
8. Has it provided adequately for co-operation between departments?
9. Does it employ all civic employees on the basis of experience and ability?
10. Are promotions and salary increases granted on the basis of merit?
11. Has a thorough survey ever been made of the organization and personnel of the civic departments?
12. Is a capital budget prepared each year as well as a current budget?
13. Are capital expenditures planned over a period of five years?
14. Is the word "uncontrollable" used in your city for purposes of classification only and not for the purpose of explaining why decreases are not forthcoming?
15. Is your city council a small body elected at large for overlapping terms?
16. Are the civic estimates of your city prepared and printed in such form that they show the comparative figures for several years, analyzed not only as to costs of functions and departments, but as to objects of expenditure, such as salaries and wages?
17. Do the estimates of your city state the reasons for increases asked?

If these things have not been done, not one has the right to say that the taxes of the municipality cannot be reduced.

Whether or not a reduction is possible cannot be ascertained until every step has been tried which is obviously necessary for economy and efficiency.

POLITICS AND DEMOCRACY.

Because President Coolidge intends journeying from Washington to Chicago in an ordinary Pullman car, taking his meals in an ordinary diner just like any ordinary American, a number of newspapers are pointing to it as an evidence of genuine democracy. But is it? asks the Ottawa Journal. What on earth is there in the canons of democracy that should induce a man holding the high office of the Presidency of the United States to use an ordinary Pullman if he could derive more of comfort in a private car provided by the public? If President Coolidge prefers an ordinary Pullman, well and good. But if, on the other hand, he preferred a private car, would he be any the less a democrat? And would there be an assault upon the democratic principle?

Democracy implies but one thing: the wisdom and right of the people to govern themselves. It doesn't imply, surely, that after a representative is chosen, that representative shall deliberately subject himself to discomforts that it would be easy for him to avoid.

A lot of nonsense is talked about Cabinet Ministers and private cars. As a consequence, some of the best men in public life, sensitive to public criticism, deliberately avoid comforts and accommodation to which they are justly entitled. Two years ago, for example, Mr. Fielding, while Finance Minister, and despite his great age, travelled in mid-winter to Halifax in an ordinary Pullman. He returned to encounter heavy illness. One would hardly envy the mentality that would suggest that Mr. Fielding did the right thing, because he had shown himself a real democrat.

There are people who think that democracy must be necessarily uncouth. It is a foolish belief. And its very prevalence, the idea that public men must somehow cheapen themselves to be good democrats, reacting on politicians, is in large measure responsible for the growing lack of public respect for persons in positions of authority.

CONTROL OF THE POLICE.

If there was any evidence needed to show the danger of having the control of police departments given to municipal councils, it is supplied by the testimony given in the Montreal police investigation and by the declaration of the retiring Crown Prosecutor that the police force in that city should be removed absolutely from aldermanic interference.

The experience of Montreal has been precisely what the Examiner has always pointed out in opposing elective police commissions.

Pelty patronage, the pull of the ward politician, have combined to demoralize the police department, and the conditions have grown so bad that a witness at the probe swore the other day that the chief qualification for admission on the force was having a friend on the Board of Aldermen.

The Montreal Star declares that "the most honest and efficient nucleus in the world cannot accomplish anything when it is overlaid by an element that is neither honest or efficient, and for this condition of affairs the petty meddling of our tin-pot 'city fathers' is probably largely to blame."

Where pressure can be brought to bear on aldermen to intereede for offenders or to use their influence to cause the police to shut their eyes to certain conditions, it is idle to expect a police department to be as immaculate and efficient as the department in charge of law enforcement should be.

The present system in Ontario cities may have its faults, but they fade into insignificance when compared with the evils of the Montreal method.

"REALLY TRUE."

The Examiner is in receipt of a delightful little volume containing fourteen short poems by a former well-known resident of Peterborough, Alice Roger Collins, whose pen has been responsible for some most valued contributions to Canadian verse.

Her new volume is entitled "Really True," taking its name from that the title of one of the fourteen poems, but the keynote is found in the last verse of all, "Greeting," in which the poetess says:

"O friend, across the world today
I send you greeting fair!
Do not these little lines of mine
With costlier gifts compare?
But if within this book so small
Some thought for love you find,
I'll rest content in hoping that
'Twill keep me in your mind."

The music and grace of Alice Roger Collins' former poems and the love of the beautiful that shines forth from every line of her earlier works are even more noticeable in her newest effort. The tiny volume contains some gems of thought most musically and delightfully expressed. Among them, a favourite is sure, is the verse entitled "Silence," which ends as follows:

"All these sounds I love to hear,
But
Night draws near,
And I am tired.
So
Draw the blind—Turn out the light—
Close fast the door—
Thank God for night!
How beautiful is silence."

"The Cricket," another short verse, is described as reminiscence of Stoney Lake, and all lovers of that charming spot will understand why.

"Every one asleep—
All the lights blown out—
What is that I hear outside?
'Peep-peep!' 'Peep-peep!'

Old Bull Frog has gone to bed,
Loons have ceased to cry—
Even the winds have said good-night—
But why,
'Peep-peep!' 'Peep-peep!'

Just a little Cricket
Singing in the night.
He must know I'm lonely here,
He must think my heart needs cheer;
So keeps on with all his might:
'Peep-peep!' 'Peep-peep!'"

The sentiment of the poem, "Things That We Love," may perhaps prove the most appealing of all.

"Things that we love—
A book, a poem,
A little faded bud flat-pressed,
A clipping from a paper with a sentiment we like expressed,
A note, perchance with love aglow,
A dull-hued dress of years ago—
Things that we love."

"Really True" is a treasure-trove of verse, daintily printed and bound, and should be in much demand as an unusual Christmas remembrance.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Although the cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards totalled over 11,300 this week, almost all were sold out by Thursday, and more export and good butchers would have found a steady market at this week's advance in prices. Within three weeks prices on medium to choice butchers are up nearly a dollar a cwt. Export cattle have advanced a strong half dollar, and common butchers are about that much higher in the same time.

Rogers and Maybee had difficulty in getting all the heavy steers they needed, and in one purchase of five loads they had to advance the price to $8.15 a cwt. For a small number of local butchering the price touched $8.25. Export heifers did not bring above $6.75; export short keeps were $6.25 to $6.50; cows, $4.75 to $5.50, and heavy fat bulls, $4.25 to $5.25 a cwt. The new exporting firm with H. P. Kennedy as general manager, are starting in to buy for export next week, and the commission houses express doubts that Ontario shipments will be sufficient to accommodate the both exporters.

All the abattoirs were out for a full supply of beef cattle this week. The supply of extra choice handyweight butchers were quite limited, and a bunch of polled Angus, over 1,000 lbs. each, brought $9 a cwt. To fill up for the best beef trade, a large number of baby beeves have been marketed, the extreme top of these being $11.50, and prices ranged from $8 a cwt. up. Real good handyweight butchers were $7; medium quality, $6.25 to $6.50; medium, $5.50, and common butchers, $4.50 a cwt. To help out the supply, one packing house brought in 300 butchers direct from the country this week.

This week's supply of cows consisted largely of fat cows siutable for export and canners. The largest supply of the latter ever on the market was in this week. Export cows were firm close to either side of $5 a cwt A few good butchers cows sold at $4 to $4.50 and medium quality $3.25 to $3.75 a cwt. Canners eased slightly with the big supply. The best of the canners brought up to $2.50 and the poorest $1.50 a cwt. A fair-sized trade was done in stockers and feeders at steady quotations, but a few loads were left unsold on Thursday. Backward springers are not wanted but otherwise the trade for milkers is about an average.

Calves remain remarkably steady and the supply of the good kind is not sufficient. Choice calves have sold from 11 to 12 cents a pound all week; good calves are 10 cents; medium 8 to 9½ and common 5 to 7 cent. Good quality grassers are bringing 4 cents a pound.

Lambs have held strong although a weakness developed late on Wednesday, but this was pretty much confined to lambs over 100 lbs. each. The consuming public does not want the heavy lamb and the packers are only following up the line of trade when they almost refuse to handle the heavy lamb and the packers are even at a respectable discount. Real light fancy lambs are 13½ to 14 cents; others less choice and heavier are 12½ to 13 cents, while the real heavy lambs are not better than 11 cents and may be lower next week. The sheep market is steady at 7 to 7½ cents for choice butchers.

The plan of the packers to get this week's hogs at $8.50 a cwt. f.o.b. did not work out as despite a good sized run the quotation jumped 25 cents a cwt. twice during the week and some sales were made a little over $9 a cwt. A shorter hog crop in the States is not a factor to hold prices down in this market.

GOUGH PROTESTED HOME BANK SYSTEM

Letters Entered By Defence Show That He Complained With Daly.

TORONTO December 13.—It developed at the trial of R. P. Gough, a Home Bank Director, yesterday, that in the spring of 1918, the accused and the late H. J. Daly had made vigorous protests against the manner in which the business of the bank was being conducted.

Both on May 13, 1918, wrote letters to M. J. Haney, the then president, charging that he had not done the right thing in making loans and transacting other big business without the consent of the board.

Mr. Daly claimed that some of the transactions put through by Mr. Haney would never have received the approval of the Board if they had been submitted to it.

Mr. Daly in his letter made the definite statement that advances at that time to the Whalen Pulp and Paper Company had put the bank in a very precarious position and urged such stringent retrenchment that no further loan acounts should be opened by the bank.

The letters were put in by the defence in the Gough trial just as the court adjourned at noon.

A GRAND MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Mrs. Avila Noel, Haut Lameque, N.B., writes:—"I can highly recommend Baby's Own Tablets as they have worked wonders in the case of my baby. I always keep them in the house and would not feel safe without them." What Mrs. Noel says concerning Baby's Own Tablets is just what thousands of other mothers say and feel. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and stomach, thereby banishing constipation, colic, indigestion and a host of other minor ailments of little ones. The Tablets are absolutely guaranted to be free from opiates or narcotics or any of the other drugs so harmful to the welfare of the baby. They cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

January shipment. The market for winter wheat flour was without any new feature to note.

In sympathy with the strength in oats at Winnipeg, local prices for Canadian Western grades were advanced 1½ cents per bushel.

There was no change in prices for Ontario grades, but the tone was firm. Ontario malting barley was quoted at $1.06, No. 3 grade at $1.05 while No. 2 white oats sold at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents, and No. 4 grade at 59 cents per bushel, ex-store.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were advanced $1 per ton. There was no change in rolled oats.

A fairly active business was transacted in eggs in a wholesale jobbing way and the tone was steady. There was no further developments in the butter situation. The feature of the cheese market was the demand from foreign buyers for supplies. Early makes were quoted at 18 3-4 to 19 cents per pound.

The demand for crop beans was quiet and prices were quoted at $2.65 and $2.75 per bushel.

THIRTY-FOURTH ANNUAL CONVENTION IN FRAZERVILLE METHODIST CHURCH

Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Education Council Attended by About Sixty Delegates.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Townships of Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Education Council was held in the Frazerville Methodist Church on Monday, December 8th, the afternoon session opening about 2.45 p.m. and the evening gathering at 7.30.

In spite of unfavorable weather and bad roads, about sixty delegates were present during the afternoon, many of them driving a considerable distance to attend, and at night the church was fairly well filled, the combined choirs of the Frazerville and Springville churches leading the service of song.

In the unavoidable absence of the president (Mr. A. E. Sanderson), the past-president, Mr. James Seymour, occupied the chair, Rev. R. M. Paterson leading in the opening devotional exercises.

But few reports from departmental superintendents were received when called for by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Hubert Gardiner, of Mount Pleasant, but among those responding were Rev. R. M. Paterson, who stated that one teacher-training clas had been held during the past yeas, Rev. A. H. McConnachie had conducted this class of ten members at his church in Centreville, Sunday evenings being th time chosen for meeting. Five of those taking "The Pupil" had w itten on the examination and passed with good standing. The class was frequently augmented in numbers by others interested n the study, but not willing to become regul r members.

Miss Emma McIndoo, of Fairmount, reported rece ving replies from only seven out of the fifteen Sunday Schools communicated with, but from these $150.00 in missionary funds had been raised.

Mrs. R. M. Hootan, Fairmount, superintendent of the Home Department, found two schools with this important section in good running order—Millbrook Methodist, which has forty members enrolled, Rev. J. Wilks being in charge, and Fairmount school, with three taking advantage of the opportunity of studying the lesson regularly at home.

Mr. Bruce Elliott, head of the temperance work in the two Townships, reported communicating with thirteen schools and urging unremitting effort to sustain the O.T.A. during the recent plebicite. Every polling booth in the district gave substantial majorities for the Act when the vote was taken.

Rev. J. W. Gordon, M.A., B.D., of St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro, was the first speaker, delivering a most inspiring address on "Showing Your Friends the Whole Bible." Sharing with friends anything in which we ourselves find pleasure gives added enjoyment, was the speaker's opening thought, and this delight is found in the highest degree when we share the Bible with our friends. Several reasons "why I like to talk about the Bible," were given, its fine literary style being first mentioned, with Psalms 39, 126, 60, Job 14th chapter, the 62nd and 66th of Isaiah, and other portions quoted as examples. The description of the death of Absalom, and its effec upon his father, for sheer dramatic power, excels anything Shakespeare has written.

Again, the Bible is a progressive book, since a study of its pages shows how certain things are seen to grow in the natural order, "first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." There is a rising moral standard through the ages, for instance, from the time of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," until Christ gave the objective, "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

Mr. Gordon is giving a series of talks on the whole Bible to his Sunday evening congregations, and in this connection reads the entire sixty-six books through each week. The new delight which each reading brings was urged as a reason for recommending the plan to his listeners, especially as the qualification to speak upon certain issues is lacking unless the whole Bible has been read, for "you cannot settle any great moral question by quoting verse or section only."

The frankness of the Bible about the people who have been used of God to convey His will to men adds to its attractiveness; Jacob, for instance and David, whose characters have a dark side, but who stood high in moral qualities for the age in which they lived. There is continually a suggestion that every new age has some new golden thing to make known, as when Christ says, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye are not able to hear them now."

The Bible shows us the kind of men, such as Elijah, Jeremiah, Moses, Paul, Amos, that God can use to do mighty things for Him, and it also reveals the wonderful patience of our Creator and Redeemer. It is an optimistic Book, holding out the hope that God will receive any who, in true repentance and faith, turn to Him, "What mighty things God can do with stubborn, lustful, ugly, human nature."

There is no place for a grouch in the Bible. It has a peculiar way of showing up what is in the heart like a man with a lantern, and you see yourself in all your pettiness, meanness, and undesirableness, with grace offered sufficient for every need.

In conclusion, the teachers present were urged to bring to the lesson a knowledge of the whole Bible, thus making their work easier, and more effectually reaching the great objective of having the truth imparted firmly sent home.

Rev. R. T. Richards, of Cavanville, spoke on "Evangelism in the Sunday Schools," dealing with his topic in a very convincing manuer, and defining the subject as "telling the good news so many will respond by believing, accepting, and fulfilling."

Three classes need evangelising (a) Non-Christian people in so-called heath en lands; (b) Non-Christians in Christian lands, including with these the large percentage of people who attend church not at all; (c) the followers of Jesus who need a progressive development in Christian living; (d) the boys and girls in the homes, the Sunday Schools, and the community.

The old-fashioned type of evangelist is rapidly passing out of the life of the churches and the modern definition would be "one who spreads the evangel, or carries the message of Jesus." Conversion is necessary, and there are varying types in the New Testament, from the call of Matthew, and Zaccheus, the dramatic change of heart in Saul, of Tarsus, to Timothy, who was "brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and knew no distinct hour when he came into vital toech with God.

Evangelism is bigger than revivalism, for the latter concentrates for two or three weeks to accomplish results which should be the natural outgrowth of the year's steady work. The appeal sometimes made during a series of revival services that men accept salvation for the sake of personal gain, was never used by our Saviour. Conversion, giving the heart and life to God, is the hardest, and yet the easiest, thing in the world, and is but an introduction to the richer, fuller light, vigor, usefulness, hope, bliss and dignity promised the children of God.

Evangelism gives a place for a distinct experience based upon three fundamental truths—1, The Fatherhood of God; 2, God is Love, and this includes, at times, discipline, chastisement; 3, God requires a life of service. Results cannot always be measured by statistics; the church's work may be smothered by numbers; the development of life is the important thing.

Mr. H. Gardiner presented the treasurer's report, showing $99.59 as the amount raised last year, a figure below the objective in view, with $5.76 on hand. All schools were requested to pay in their assessment of five cents per member at as early a date as possible.

On motion of Mr. T. W. McIndoo, seconded by Mr. J. O. Ball, the secretary was instructed to send a letter of sympathy to the president and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sanderson, in the sad bereavement which has recently entered their home through the loss of their only daughter, the late Miss Velma Sanderson.

The Springville Presbyterian Church united with the workers at Fraserville in taking the convention under their combined auspices, and the ladies of the former congregation served a most enjoyable supper in the Orange Hall at the conclusion of the afternoon session.

Rev. G. I. Craw took charge of the devotional period in the evening, and the nomination committee reported the following officers for 1925:—

Honorary president, Mr. A. E. Sanderson; president, J. H. McGill, Frazerville; vice-president, W. Dawson, Frazerville; secretary-treasurer, Hubert Gardiner, Mount Pleasant; Supt. Temperance Department, Ray Finlay; Supt. Missionary Department, Miss Emma McIndoo, Fairmount; Supt. Teacher-Training Work, Rev. R. M. Paterson; Supt. Primary Department, Mrs. Jas. Douglas, Cavanville; Supt. Home Department, Mrs. R. M. Hootan, Fairmount; Supt. Boys' Work, F. N. Alcorn, Millbrook; Supt. Girls' Work, Miss Pearl Burnham, Millbrook; Supt. Young People's Work, Bruce Elliott; Supt. Adult Department, Mr. William Finney

Vocal solos by Miss Daisy Murray and Miss Marian Clarke added much to the enjoyment of the evening session.

The address on "Our Task," by Rev. A. J. Langford, of Trinity Church, Peterboro, brought out strongly the responsibility of the home for the religious education of the children, while urging the opportunity for co-operation between the Sunday School and the home in carrying on this fundamental work.

What is the primary function of the Sunday School. Teaching the Bible? Better expressed in the active principle of assisting in unfolding and developing the religious life of the child, and training for efficient Christian service. The Christian leaders of the future, a personal experience of fellowship with God is essential.

The proper use of the opening worship period in the Sunday School was dwelt upon at some length, the thought of "opening exercises" being pushed aside and genuine, reverent worship taking their place. The leader will need to come in a worshipful spirit himself, the individual teachers also, for "like teachers, like scholars," and you will surely "get back what you expect."

"Here are boys and girls who are to be linked up with God," and that means more than mere instruction—it implies reaching the life, moulding it, and training the will, until the choice the choice to do right comes voluntarily. The real test of a teacher's work is, how much have you helped your boys or girls to become what they ought to be?" There are certain laws by which a child lives, grows, and matures, and the real teacher will know these laws, realize the enormity of the task of developing a personality, and bring his, or her, best endeavour to the work. God becomes very real to such a teacher, and the pupils also reach out for this personal experience, while the thought of "every lesson worked over into life habits" touches teacher and scholar alike.

Positive teaching is infinitely better than negative, giving the boys and girls a chance to "express the life that is in them" acceptably in the sight of God and Man. Hard? Yes, "but you are trying to do something that is not foreign to child nature, or to God."

"Personal consecration can be supplanted by no other thing in the teacher's life if glorious results are to follow in the glorious work.

The reminiscences of a trip to the World's Sunday School Convention at Glasgow, given by Mrs. A. P. Williams, of Stirling, were deeply interesting. The convention motto, "That the world may know that Thou hast sent Me," found illustration in the fact that fifty-four different countries were represented at the "Welcome Meeting" in St. Andrew's Hall, and 2,810 delegates in all attended the gathering which convenes once in four years.

Thirty-four national and international Sunday School associations are federated in the World's Sunday School Association, and there are fourteen full time and four part time secretaries employed.

The city of Glasgow held a civic reception when the delegates were received by the Lord Provost and his council, wearing their robes of office, and many distinguished men, both from England and Scotland, including Lloyd George, were present, either in their official capacity, or as guests.

The convention exhibit was a most interesting and educative feature of the big gathering, the Palestinian section furnishing numerous object lessons illustrating familiar Bible customs and truths.

The pageant, tracing the history of Bible instruction from the time of Abraham to the present day Sunday School, with five hundred characters taking part, presented a sight, and gave information in a way that impressed the facts upon the mind so they will probably never be effaced for years to come.

The next World's Convention is to meet at Los Angeles, California, in June, 1928.

Rev. Mr. Langford dismissed the convention with prayer. Cavanville will entertain the gathering next year, Millbrook's turn not coming again until 1926. The Sunday Schools of the two townships take the convention in rotation, the schedule having been drawn up last year arranging the places of meeting until 1930, when a fresh list will be made.

Cavan Centre reported that their Sunday School, which has been closed for some time, will re-open after the New Year, with Mr. Fred Staples as superintendent.

Various problems connected with the efficient carrying on of Sunday School work were discussed, and much helpful information gained, during the "round table" conference conducted by Rev. G. I. Craw just before the supper hour.

NEW MEMBERS ADDED SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Central Home and School Association Held Regular Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Central Home and School Association took place on Thursday evening in the kindergarten room of the school, the president, Mrs. E. H. Howson, in the chair.

After the reading of reports of the secretary and treasurer, and discussion of other business, an excellent programme was rendered, including vocal solos by Mrs. A. A. Perrin and Marjorie Bentley, a reading by Clara Patterson, an instrumental selection by Jean Howson, followed by a very interesting talk on "The Canadian Exhibit at Wembley," given by Miss Williams of the staff of the King George School, and a teacher brought out from England on the exchange of teachers' system.

At the conclusion of the programme, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered all those taking part, and pleasure was expressed at the presence at the meeting of so many fathers of pupils. A social half-hour followed.

This month the flag was won by Miss Armstrong's room. Three new members were added to the Association's roll at this meeting.

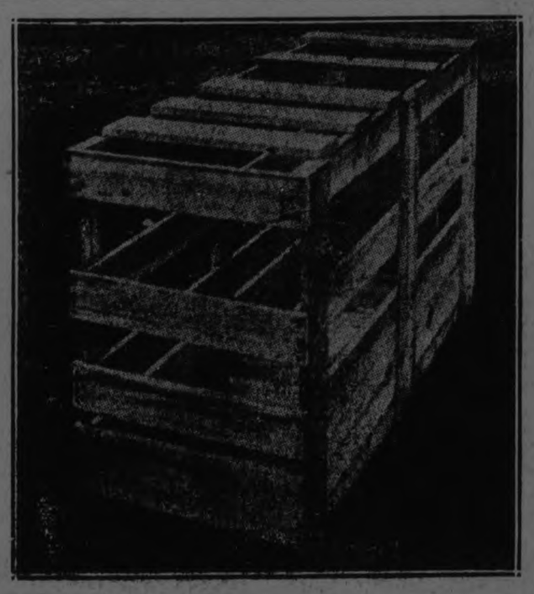
How To Build a Shipping Crate



THE COMPLETED CRATE

Steps Taken.

These are the steps in the simplest method of crate construction:

I. Build the floor first.
1. Cut the two skids 2 inches by 2 inches.
2. Cut the floor boards.
3. Nail the floor boards squarely across on the skids.

II. Build each side separately.
1. Cut four uprights, two for each side.
2. Cut enough slats for both sides.
3. Nail the slats on the uprights proper distances apart.

III. Nail the sides onto the floor by nailing the uprights to the skids.
1. Remember that the slats are o the inside of the crate.
2. Drive the nails so that the heads will be on the inside and clinched on the outside of the crate.

IV Cut the top and end slats.

V. Nail the top and end bars, spacing properly.

VI. Build the end gate.

Details.

Here is how to build a crate for a 100-225-pound hog:

Cut a piece of 2 by 4 to a length of 4 feet 4 inches. Then rip to make the two skids. Cut the floor boards 20 inches long. Nail the floor boards to the skids with two or three 8-penny nails in each end of the boards.

It is well to leave cracks from ¼ to ⅜ inches wide between the floor boards. This allows for shrinkage and swelling which accompanies weather changes and wetting and drying.

The bottom board of the sides is of 6-inch width. The rest of the slats on the crate are 4-inch. Cut three uprights for each side, each 3 feet long and lay them on the ground.

In placing the slats on the uprights the top slat is nailed even with the ends of the uprights.

Good Uprights.

Measure the thickness of the floor plus the skid and place the bottom slat this distance from the other end of the upright. This will make the bottom slat rest on the floor when the crate is assembled.

The second slat is nailed on 1 inch above the bottom slat. Sixteen inches from the floor nail the third slat.

Four 8-penny nails where the slats and the uprights cross one another give good strength to the side. The nails should be long enough to go through and clinch well on the outside of the crate.

Steps I and II of the building guide have now been covered. The lower ends of the uprights are next nailed to the skids with 3 to 5 nails for step III. Remember that the slats are on the inside of the uprights.

One bottom board 3 inches wide and another bottom board 6 inches wide are now cut 1 foot 10 inches long. There are five 4-inch slats of the same length—three for the closed end, one for the top at the gate end and one above the gate. These slats are now nailed in place, completing step V.

The spacing of slats at the front end corresponds with the spacing of the side slats, except that the second slat is 2 inches above the bottom slat to allow ample breathing space for the hog.

Four cross pieces for the top are 20 inches in length and are spaced 4 inches apart on the front half of the crate and 10 inches on the rear half.

Two 6-inch boards 2 feet 11 inches long, nailed together with a 2-inch cleat, form the door on the open end of inches long, nailed on the outside of the door, and is placed so that it rests 2 inches above the bottom board.

Also nail a 1 by 4 piece (12 inches long) 1 foot 3 inches above the cleat to hold the top of the door together. The gate uprights fit into a notch cut in the top cross-piece.

Care of Crates.

The durability of livestock shipping crates will be greatly increased if proper care is given the crate when not in use.

Tests conducted by the Forest Products Laboratory show that the holding power of nails is decidedly decreased with alternate wetting and drying of wood. To prevent this, crates should be kept inside covered sheds when not in use.

Following each trip, crates should always be cleaned out. Whether stored indoors or out, crates should never be left sitting on the ground.

WORKING PLANS FOR THE HOG CRATE, DESIGNED TO CARRY A HOG WEIGHING FROM 225 TO 500 POUNDS. CRATES FOR LARGER OR SMALLER ANIMALS ARE BUILT LIKE THIS, EXCEPT FOR DIFFERENT DIMENSIONS AS SHOWN BY THE ACCOMPANYING SPECIFICATIONS.

Crates for shipping sheep and cows are made almost like the hog crate. For the cow, the crate of necessity must be larger and more firmly built. For this purpose stanchions should be nailed across the sides, so as to insure strength and sturdiness.

HEBRIDEAN EMIGRATION IN CANADA

Delegations Report to Minister of Immigration and Colonization.

FARMING ADVICE.

It is the Part of the Intending Settler to Learn. at Start.

The complete report of the delegation representative of the crofter and fishermen of the Hebrides which, headed by the Very Rev. Canon Macdougall, spent several weeks in Canada for the purpose of visiting those Hebrideans already settled in the Dominion, and making as comprehensive a survey as possible with a view to stimulating the movement from the Hebridean islands and broadening its scope, has been presented to the Canadian Minister of Immigration and Colonisation.

The tenure of the report is all that could be desired and augurs the best possible for the future of the movement to Canada. The delegation "viewed with a great deal of pleasure the prosperous condition of relatives and acquaintances who had settled in Canada." The delegation was composed of men of outstanding intelligence with the best interests of the Hebrideans at heart, and their report on conditions is, therefore, of interest as a purely impartial and unbiased view. Their conclusions on the possibilities of settlement, whilst reported strictly with an eye to their own people, may be broadly applied to prospective settlers from the British Isles, and more particularly from Scotland.

Of Nova Scotia the reports has to say, "It was evident that there were here opportunities for both fishing and farming. Undoubtedly Scottish settlers would feel very much at home here. The opportunities appear good, and our delegates have no doubt that a new settler would very soon be in a way to make a comfortable living." Of New Brunswick the same report states, "There can be little doubt that a good living can be made by any of our people who would select this province for settlement."

The next visit of outstanding interest to the delegates was that paid to the Hebrideans established in Alberta, with Red Deer as its centre. . . . They visited Evarts, which is a Barra Settlement, and a complete answer to anyone asserting that Barra men will not make farmers. The splendid condition of their stock and the evidence of energetic activity were most gratifying. The delegation had not yet met with anything that was so pleasing to them as the location and evident success of this young Hebridean settlement.

"Next day the delegation visited Ohaton, where a number of Uist and Benbecula men are, with not quite the same opportunity, making an equally successful effort. These men are in the country only one complete year, while the Evarts men are three years in Canada. Other settlers of this year's parties were visited. They all realise the opportunities awaiting the worker."

"From all that we have observed," goes on the report, "and we have conscientiously and scrupulously gone into conditions, we consider that our people will do well for themselves in Alberta. Those who are on land of their own are, without doubt, satisfied, and seeing in front of them a bright future. From their own assertions and our observations, they are here in much better condition than they were at home. There is every chance for the worker, and room for many more."

The report concludes, not inappropriately, with a little advice which applies generally to all contemplating farming settlers. "It is essential, in our opinion, that intending settlers, even should they be in possession of considerable means, should pass at least one year working for a Canadian farmer, thereby acquiring much needed experience and a little cash. It is much better to acquire one's experience at the other fellow's expense, than to be disheartened by the inevitable setbacks that inexperience will lead to.

"It is the part of the intending settler to learn, and our people should make up their minds before leaving home, that to be successful in the new country, they must be as apprentices—able and willing to learn. They will find, as our people already in the country acknowledge to have found, very great kindness on the part of their neighbours."

Wrapping & Tying Packages

Thank goodness we are now using a little imagination in tying up our Christmas packages, and are no longer bound by the hackneyed white tissue paper and red ribbon with lonely greeting card beneath the bow-knot. Although it is certainly true that white tissue paper has a lovely crisp fresh look and makes a pleasant background for colored ribbons or strings.

Do let us get away from what an art teacher used to call "Merry Christmas colors," the everlasting red and green. There are many fancy papers on the market now-a-days with holly sprigs and Christmas designs of various sorts. Then there are the interesting wood fiber effects in the Japanese papers. It would seem a good idea to tie up these patterned papers with plain string or ribbon, and use seals sparingly. Christmas seals are very attractive now-a-days and are made in all sorts of odd sizes, some of gold embossed like metal, and some of white with silhouettes in black, as well as many others in colors.

Making Attractive Packages.

Dor the dainty gifts to a woman friend what could be prettier than a white tissue paper package tied in pale blue ribbon, with a cluster of organdie flowers in pastel tints for a decoration? The flowers would make a lovely little additional gift really, for she could use this tiny bouquet later.

Gold cord makes a very distinguished looking appearance on a white package and its regal note could be further emphasized by seals of black, or of black sealing wax.

That brings us to sealing wax. My, what fun the children can have with a box of varie-colored sticks! One can well imagine a grown-up too, might enjoy the fascinating occupation of dropping hot wax on a package all neatly tied and ready to send.

Let us suppose a box is wrapped in a plain color, say bright blue, and tied with a blue string. Why not drop the sealing wax daubs in groups of three? Try three at each end and three on the top, each group of three on the top, each group of three different colors,—a good selection being, lavender, apple green and pink.

My, my, one would just hate to open such an attractive package and break the pretty seals!

Tassels Add Distinctiveness.

Then there are tassels. A perfectly joyous group of tassels are easily made for the ends of the Christmas cord. Use colored twine, or colored heavy crochet cotton or better still, bright yarns. Make flat seals of the wax and while hot drop the end of the yarn into the wax, adding another daub of hot wax on top.

Besides these wax seals, wax beads can be made, inserting the string while the beads are being formed or stringing them later, after they are cold.

And as for beads, a string of large kindergarten beads of glass, or the square, round and cylindrical wooden ones will give you material for many tassels at the ends of your yarn or cord.

Here again an entirely different material is being used to delight the eye and afford amusing opportunity for the imaginative one to use his skill. Let me prophesy that the person receiving this package will,—well he ought to laugh aloud when he sees it. If very sober he will smile at least. How can he help smiling when there on top sits a wierd animal composed of gum drops? Long thin gumdrops on toothpicks make legs, fat round ones make bodies and his head has ears of the tiny ones. Eyes are made of cloves. And when you remember that one leg is pink and another yellow and son o, well, you see he's a very delectable sort of a creature.

Animal and Manikin Novelties.

The number of variations that may be made of these gumdrop animals is one of the attractive features of this idea, the more weird, and unnatural they are, the more amusing.

Then there are manikins to be made of the same material. These can be constructed with toothpicks or strung on colored cord. Tassels of these little gumdrop men will finish a Christmas package well, at least a b't unusual. They ought to be highly acceptable especially to children. As to whether gumdrops will travel well in the mails, that I cannot say. It would have to be a matter of experiment.

At any rate, there are many packages that are delivered personally at Christmas time and on these the gumdrop people, and the gumdrop animals can carry a light-hearted Christmas message.

SOME AILMENTS WHICH TROUBLE POULTRY OWNER

Impaction of the Crop is in Many Cases the Result of Eating Indigestible Food.

HOME TREATMENT.

Swelling of the Suborbital Sinus is Generally Caused By a Bad Cold.

Bumblefoot, or enlargement of the ball of the foot and surrounding structures, is the result of injury with subsequent infection. The commonly recognized causes are bruising resulting by jumping from high roofs, particularly on the bare floor, roosting on angular objects, injuries from briers, thorns, glass, nails and similar objects.

When the swelling at the ball of the foot reaches the point that the interior is filled with a cheese-like mass, it is time to open it. This can sometimes be determined by the swelling on the under side of the foot showing a scab or small opening at the centre of the swelling. When the enlarged area seems to contain this cheese-like material it is opened by making two incisions crossing one another in the form of a cross. The cheese-like interior should be removed as much as possible.

Usually it is not possible to completely remove this the first time. The cavity should then be packed with a piece of cotton rolled into a compact roll between the thumb and forefinger after having saturated the cotton with tincture of iodine. The foot should then be covered well with cotton, between the toes, above and below and on the lower part of the shank. This treatment is repeated every few days until the cheese-like material is removed and healing has started to take place from the bottom. The bandage is then left off and the wound permitted to take care of itself.

Swelling of the Suborbital Sinus, or the cavity below and in front of the eye, is a condition which frequently develops with the advanced stage of a cold. The cavity is connected with the nasal passages by a tube-like structure. Swelling of this sinus is first due to a semi-liquid secretion. This secretion soon becomes cheese-like. When reaching the latter stage it is impossible to remove the contents by massage. It is then necessary to make an incision over the enlargement in a direction parallel with the beak, remove the cheese-like material as much as possible, and then fill the cavity with a piece of cotton saturated with tincture of iodine.

It is essential that the cotton pack be used since otherwise the skin will heal first. The cavity should be handled as above described every two or three days until all foreign material is removed and healing from the bottom takes place. The cavity can then be left without a pack and permitted to heal naturally. Some fowls affected in the above manner do not show serious difficulty even though not treated, but the probabilities are that treated fowls will do better.

Impaction of the Crop is, in many cases, the result of eating indigestible material such as dried grass or indigestible foreign subjects such as cockle burrs. The indigestible material becomes lodged in the second material becomes lodged in the second portion of the esophagus as it leaves the crop, with the result that no food material is permitted to pass through the crop. It frequently occurs that a fowl shows an enlarged crop with a considerable content that does not pass on in the usual manner when the collection in the crop is not due to stoppage of the second portion of the esophagus. In these cases the crop content does not pass down because of general debility and which is shown by the action of the fowl. Fowls affected in this manner often are distinctly emaciated and weak. Operation in these cases is not indicated. With typical impaction of the crop there is usually no general debility shown and the fowl exhibits a ravenous appetite. In well developed cases as much as a quart of food will be found in the crop.

Simple impactation cases can be satisfactorily treated by filling the crop with water, followed by manipulation of the crop and forcing the water and part of the contents out through the esophagus and mouth. Filling the crop may be repeated a number of times, and is readily done with a hot water bottle and rubber tube or a funnel attached to a rubber tube.

Small amounts of food and drink may be given 24 to 36 hours after the operation for a few days, and then full feeds may be given, increasing gradually. Some prefer to feed moist mashes for a few days in preference to hard grain.

PROPER WAY TO MAKE A GARDEN

Digging is Classed as the Hardest Job While Making a Garden.

PLANTING BULBS.

By M. S. REYNOLDS.

If asked which is the hardest job in the garden for an amateur to do, I should say—digging. By that I do not mean that it is extra hard work; anyone who has tried knows that it is not easy, but the correct way to dig a piece of land with manure or many weeds on it, is by the trenching method and few amateurs can do it from start to finish.

Trenching.

To commence, take out a trench at one end of the land to be dug, deep (directions for single trenching, not double). If manure is spread over land, or many weeds are on it, scrape manure or weeds into trench. That means that you scrape a piece about eight inches wide alongside the trench nearest to you; that stuff must go at the bottom of the trench. Dig spade in six or eight inches from trench towards you and with a twisting motion turn the spadeful completely over into the trench.

Start at one end of the trench. When you get to the other end start back on another spit, always scraping manure or weeds into trench as you progress. Weeds or manure left on the surface are wasted. They must be buried for prospective plants to benefit. At the end you should have a trench left. Fill in with earth from ground to form first trench.

That is the correct way to dig. I can hear you say, "What is hard about that?" Well, I am willing to bet that Mr. Average Amateur Gardener completely loses sight of the trench inside six feet. Remember, a good trench should be in frout of you at all times while you are digging, or you are not doing the job correctly.

At this time of the year many new gardens are made and others are altered. If you are doing the latter, try and get some new shapes to your flower beds. Get away from the usual square, round or oblong; try something fresh.

Borders for Beds.

No flower bed is complete without an edging of some kind, such as arabis, aubretia, violas, violets or pinks. The latter is really pretty. The silvery leaves form a pleasing sight at all times of the year. Now is the time to form a nice edging of pinks. They are amongst the easiest plants to grow. Break some pieces froT the old plants; they do not need to be rooted. Plant each tuft of pinks about six inches from the grass edge. Tufts should be placed about one foot apart. Put about six pieces of pink to a tuft. They spread rapidly and soon encrouch on the grass if not controlled.

For the benefit of readers who intend to move perennial plants, do not be afraid to leave clumps of perennial plants uncovered while altering flower beds. Put them in shaded places; do not let them get dry, and they will be alright for three weeks or more.

Care must be taken with roses; they dry out very quickly and must be heeled in, or you take the risk of losing them if they dry too much.

I want to try an experiment, but I cannot get the seed required. Perhaps some reader will supply me with the information. Does any reader know where I can get some seeds of the cascara segrada (rhamnus purshiana)? The trees grow in some places in B. C., it is 15 to 20 feet high when full grown, leaves dark green, serated, veins prominent, seed pods are black, having three sides. I am prepared to buy the seed.

Potted Bulbs.

If you potted any Roman Hyacinths, or other bulbs for Christmas flowering, they should be taken from the basement, or frame at once; take the pots indoors into the heat, water sparingly for awhile until flower spikes show.

When buying plants for the garden, the amateur should use every care to make sure that plants will grow where they are wanted. For instance, it is not much use buying a plant which requires plenty of sunlight, if it is required for a border facing north.

Competition Results

Results of the story competition will be announced on the Farm Page next Wednesday. The prizes will be mailed on Monday.

In the meantime, remember that there is another competition open and entries must be in by the end of next week.

KEEP IN DRY PLACE

Dried fruit should be kept in a dry place and soaked thoroughly before using.

WRAP IN NAPKIN

You can keep sandwiches fresh for a day or more if you will wrap them in a dry napkin, then in a towel wrung out of cool water, then put in the fireless cooker.

Splendid Gift To Department of Agriculture

We cull the following from a Scottish paper:—We understand that Messrs. James Kilpatrick, Craigie Mains, and Messrs. J. and R. Cocker, Hill of Petty, Fyvie, Scotland, are jointly donating to the University of Saskatchewan, at Saskatoon, the yearling colt, Craigie Fyvie, out of sympathy for the losses the University of Saskatchewan have sustained with previous purchases. In 1920, Dean Rutherford, of the Department of Agriculture in the University of Saskatchewan, visited Scotland and purchased two of the best yearling colts of that year. These were Craigie Enchanter, from Mr. Kilpatrick, and Bonnie Fyvie, from Messrs. Cocker. Unfortunately, the former died not long after reaching Canada, while the latter later developed characteristics which have led to his being unable to obtain a licence under the Horse-breeding Act. He had been breeding well, but his most promising progeny have recently succumbed to swamp fever. It is hoped that Craigie Fyvie, which these gentlemen have so generously donated, will prove more than compensation for the losses sustained. Craigie Fyvie was bred by Mr. James Symington, Kerse Park, Hollybush, Scotland, and is sired by the champion horse, Craigie Litigant, out of the grand breeding mare, Nell of Kerse, by Montrave Mariner.

Doesn't that sound like the stale old joke that all the fat comedians put over on us every year?

Wheat In Shipment

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A non-inflammable and non-explosive fumigant has been discovered by specialists of the U.S. bureau of chemistry, for the destruction of weevils in wheat during shipment.

It leaves no objectionable odor in the grain and is said to be as effective as the highly inflammable and explosive carbon disulphide which has been used heretofore.

The fumigant is a mixture of four volumes of ethyl acetate with six equal volumes of carbon tetrachloride. It was discovered after tests were made with more than 100 organic compounds and various combinations.

Chemists say the new fumigant kills practically all the grain weevils when used at the rate of 40 pounds to 1000 cubic feet of air space. It costs about 10 cents a pound.

The cost of fumigating a box car loaded with grain is figured at less than one cent a bushel.

Savings resulting from this process, it is estimated, will mount to about $420,000 annually.

AN ONTARIO FAVORITE

It is a significant fact that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal has more readers in Ontario than any other paper of its class. Ontario farmers and other folk take the Family Herald and Weekly Star year after year because it gives by far the greatest value obtainable anywhere. The market news and prices in the Family Herald are the most complete and up to date available and it retains the services and contributions of the foremost agriculturists in Ontario. The magazine and news sections are brimful of the choicest reading for each member of the family. This year the Family Herald will give away ten thousand dollars in prizes, a beautiful calendar and picture and other valuable rewards to subscribers. A catalogue of rewards will be sent free of charge to any address. No words can do justice to the excellence of the Family Herald.

That was when the poet Ovid wrote that "married life isn't worth the living."

$785,000,000 TO CHANGE THREE GOVERNMENTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 13. — With only one week left in which to prepare for a number of large settlements, involving a total of more than $785,000,000, the American money market and banking machinery when into full gear yesterday. During the week cash payments will be made on the $100,000,000 French Government loan, recently floated; the British Government will pay $68-500,000 in interest and $23,000,000 in amortization on its war debt to the United States Government; $400,-000,0000 in cash or kind will be paid out by the United States Government on its maturing paper; $200,-000,000 in cash subscriptions, and security conversions totalling a great deal more, will be received from institutions and individuals who recently subscribed to the new Government loan. In addition a tremendous sum of money running high into the millions will be paid out by corporations in the form of dividends on stocks or interest on bonds.

The French transactions is scheduled for tomorrow, when subscribers to the $100,000,000 loan will pay cash for the bonds to J. P. Morgan and Co., acting as agent for the French Government. These bonds were sold at 94, indicating that $94,000,000 would have to be paid in cash. This sum, minus commissions and similar charges of France and soon after the $100,-000,000 Morgan bank credit, set up will then be placed to the account for the stabilization of the franc, will draw to its close.

The other major operations fall due on Dec. 15. One of the most interesting of these is the British debt payment. This will amount to $91,500,-000, consisting of semi-annual interest and amortization on a debt of about $4,500,000,000. The British Government has already provided for this heavy payment, and it is expected to meet the charge through payment in gold.

The British Government purchased many millions of dollars' worth of Liberty bonds below par, some of which were tendered in payment on Britain's debt during 1923, and others were believed to have been sold in American markets at a profit, the proceeds used in turn in buying sold for payment on the debt. This payment will be made through J. P. Morgan and Co., fiscal agent here for Great Britain, which will surrender to that amount of gold to the Federal Reserve Bank, which will act as agent for the United States Treasury Department.

Another Government transaction exceeds even the French and British settlements in size. The United States Government on Dec. 15 will call for payment of $20,000,000 in cash by subscribers to the recently offered 4 per cent loan, and in addition will accept maturing notes which in turn amount to nearly $400,000,000 in exchange for a portion of the new 4 per cent bonds.

Bankers said yesterday that a combination of big financing operations for three Governments falling due at the same time that corporation were moving balances around to take care of year-end interest and dividend payments, would have created wild confusion in the American pre-war money market. With the establishment of the Federal Reserve system and the recent growth of American banking facilities, however comparatively little strain on the banking machinery was expected.

WARNS EAGLE TO STAY AT HOME

America Has All It Can Do to Attend to Self and Canada is Happy.

SAYS G. P. GRAHAM.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Those who have studied the question closely "have arrived at the conclusion that it was a better for the world that the elder King George was a blunderer," declared Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Canadian Minister of Railways, in an address before the annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, yesterday.

"Great Britain has sufficient territory" he said, "and her boundaries are so far flung that to keep in touch she must be able to handle all conditions of men. Occasionally some dear soul on this side of the line will suggest that it would be well if Canada became part of Uncle Sam's territory.

"Forget it."

This great eagle of yours has its claws full, and his wings are extended to the limit to cover is own territory.

The Canadian people are happy udder their present system, for under it they have the complete management of their own affairs and have all the guidance, help and protection of the British Empire."

Mr. Graham discussed life insurance only briefly, declaring he had had only a brief period in that business during which he had "Lost many pounds of flesh", endeavoring to navigate a company through the waters of its early career. The main theme of his address was the relationship between Canada and United States and the common interests of the two countries.

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 11 (Special).—The excitement over the inquest called to inquire into the circumstcnces of the death of the late Donald M. (Pete) York, former dealer in sporting goods, tobaccos, cigars, etc., here, has now apparently all died out. The first sessions were crowded, and many stood throughout, so anxious were they to hear the evidence submitted. Many rumors were also rife on the streets which, apparently, were practically groundless. There were many adjournments of the inquest at which a vast amount of evidence was taken. The jury has returned the following verdict:

We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of Donald M. York, find that he came to his death on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4, at or near his lare residence, corner of Chapel and College Streets, Cobourg, and that his death was caused by a diseased condition of the heart, aggravated by acute alcoholism and over-exertion.

The average price of butter for the season, 33c, was one- half cent better than last year, when it was 32½. The amount of butter manufactured in 1923 was 170,952 pounds, over 21,000 pounds less than in 1924, when 192,222 pounds was manufactured During the year 1924 $50,947.28 was paid out to patrons, besides a bonus of $1,494.26. The average cream test for 1923 was 33 per cent., and for 1924, 34 per cent.

MANY ROBBERIES LONDON, ENGLAND

Criminals Aided in Their Escapes by Heavy Fog.

LONDON, Dec. 13. —(Canadian Press).—Motor bandits early in the morning raided the post office in St. Pancras district and escaped with mail bags, variously estimated at from 16 to 100. The raid was made while a large extra staff of postal employees was dealing with the heavy Christmas traffic. The exact value of the loot is not known. Scotland Yard forces are using special wireless equipped car to track down the robbers.

This is only one of numerous incidents in the crime wave of considerable proportions which has recently been sweeping London and the surrounding country, causing the police authorities great trouble.

Reinforcements of police and detectives seem unable to intimidate the criminals who, during the past few days, have been aided in making their escapes by an extremely heavy fog.

The majority of the burglaries have been committed by "cat burglars" whose particular exploits include the climbing of drain pipes to reach rooms on the first and second floors of buildings.

ECONOMIC POLICIES.

Russian Government Has Not Yet Determined Her Line of Action.

MOSCOW, Dec. 13. — (United Press.) — "The Russian Government's economic policies have not yet been definitely determined," M. Smilga, the vice-chairman of the State Planning Commission told the United Press, in an interview yesterday.

"The government intends to do everything it can, consistent with its general policies, to promote trade," he said, disclosing plans for a revision of the domestic commercial policy which now prevails.

According to M. Smilga a new code will be drawn up by which it will be possible for private enterprises to carry out their activities on a greater scale, thus aiding in increasing the circulation of goods and the promotion of additional production by the state industrial enterprises.

SAYS DRESS SUIT EASE COMES IN 200 YEARS

Savant in 'Etiquette Heredity' Even Advises Royal Graces in the Background.

VIENNA Dec. 13. — Any man who wears evening dress is likely to appear ill at ease unless his forefathers for at least 200 years have been accustomed to life in court circles or to participation in other social functions, in the opinion of Professor Will Jacobson, writing on "Etiquette Heredity" in the Vienna Journal.

Men of humble parentage who have reached the evening dress stage may de ive some of the people some of the time, avers the professor, but keen observers of human nature will always be able to note certain little characteristics which indicate plainly to them that the subject's ancestors somewhere were plain people who always wore everyday clothes.

Women, being cleverer than men in the matter of dress, he concedes, are better able to hide "the awkward characteristics of their ancestors."

No formal appeal has been made by Peter Smith against his sentence but W. N. Tilley, K.C., the special crown prosecutor has notified Smith's counsel, T. H. Lennox, K.C., that he should be present, as the sentence of his client is to be reviewed before the court.

"The present order of society is doomed. The handwriting is on the wall."
—Says British Labor Leader

Civilization Doomed!

But Millions Now Living Will Never Die!

Viscount Grey says: "I think it is certain that if there be another such war again civilization will never recover from it.'

That another war is brewing in Europe is a foregone conclusion. It will have a marked effect upon the future history of the world. Not only are the nations and governments of earth in turmoil and confusion, but the religious leaders are also involved in a controversy which threatens to split the church from end to end. Modernists and Fundamentalists are at open war, and the church member who seeks peace in the house of God is further confused and discouraged by ecclesiastical wrangling. Truly we live in a day when they say: "Peace, peace," and there is no peace. God's Word, properly understood, is a rock of safety in the troubled sea of human strife.

For a clear, logical presentation of events of history and prophecy, and for a message of hope and encouragement by a keen observer of world conditions.

MARMORA LADIES' AID MET TUESDAY

Final Arrangements For Chicken Pie Supper Made.

MARMORA, Dec. 13.—A special meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church was held at the home of Mrs. R. O. Jones on Tuesday evening.

They made final arrangements for the chicken-pie supper to be held next Monday evening, Dec. 15th. The supper is to be held in the Maloney and Forestell Block, instead of the Town Hall as both township and village councils meet that day, in the Town Hall.

The canvassers reported on their work and final arrangements made.

Women's Institute.

A very interesting meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Chas. Nickle.

The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting and reported on the rummage sale. The receipts were $62.92. Expenses were $3.50. $75 was voted to the Library Board. Some plans for raising money were discussed.

In answer to the roll call, each member told her favorite Christmas hymn or carol.

Each member of the programme committee was to give a Christmas legend. Mrs. Clare read a Russian legend called 'The Lost Christmas.' Mrs. Bowen read an article on the origin of Christmas. Mrs. Bowen read "Various legends of Christmas"

This was followed by a musical contest. Mrs. Thomson played a few bars of some eighteen Christmas and well-known hymns. Those present were to write the first line of they hymn on paper previously numbered.

This did not prove to be as easy as it might look to be and the highest number correct were twelve.

The next item on the programme was one which furnished amusement. It was the drawing of the silhouettes of the different members.

These were drawn on large sheets of papr, which will later be blackened and used in a contest next month.

After singing The Maple Leaf a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Those present were: Mrs. Bowen, Mrs. Bleecker, Mrs. Clare, Mrs. W. Grant, Mrs. (Dr.) Thompson, Miss Muriel Jones, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Doupe, Mrs. Donnelly, Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Pinar, Mrs. F. Wells, Mrs. B. Osborne, Mrs. Marrett, Mrs. Nickle.

A young son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gaudineer on Saturday, December 6th.

Dr. Thompson was in Belleville on Tuesday.

Miss Bessie Sweet spent Wednesday at Deloro.

Mr. F. S. Pearce was in Belleville on Thursday.

The children of the Methodist Sunday School are busy practicing for their Christmas entertainment on Friday, December 19th.

TO HELP TRENT WATERWAY ALONG

Unique Exhibit to be Presented at New York Show.

LIFT LOCK THERE.

The approaching Motor Boat Exhibition which will take place in New York early in January is already securing some attention, and there is every indication that the show this year will be the greatest yet held. Many large manufacturers of motor boats and marine engines have signified their readiness to assist in the show with large exhibits and other associations are also taking a hand in an endeavor to develop the tourist trade. Among the organizations that will assist in the work will be the Trent Waterway Association and one of their first moves will be to see that a really excellent Canadian exhibit is at the Fair from 2nd to 10th of January next where the attendance of paying sightseers run from 75,000 to 100,000, most of whom are looking for a place to go next summer to fish, to loaf and to get away from the heat of the cities and who will go by rail, by motor cars or motor boats. We want them around here and we will have to plan to get all we can of the tourist trade.

Remember there are lots of places where tourists can go and do besides Midland and these parts. To the New York Fair Ontario province will send 10 maskinonge and 20 black bass which will be in glass water tanks for the public to see the kind of fish to be caught along the Trent waterway and on the Georgian Bay. After the exhibit the fish all alive will be placed in the New York City Aquarium with labels on showing where from, as a standing exhibit. The Dominion Government will have a man on hand with maps and a chart of the Trent District, stuffed fish, birds, etc., and the Imperial Tobacco Company of Montreal have loaned their 3 foot high electrically worked model of the huge Peterboro Lift Lock. In addition to this it is hoped the C.P.R. and the National Railway will have on hand folders boosting this district.

Now boost for the Trent waterway as a plan to bring tourists this way to spend their money.—Midland Argus.

BACK THE FREE STATE.

British House of Commons Will Guarantee $150,000,000 Loan.

LONDON, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press)—The House of Commons has agreed to a financial resolution upon which a bill will be based authorizing the treasury to guarantee the principal and interest up to 30,000,000 pounds on any loan issued by the Irish free State for completion of the plan of land purchases. This is a measure arising out of the Anglo-Irish treaty. A similar bill had been introduced by the recent Labor government.

TOO WEAK TO WALK.

The Sad Condition of a Brandon Lady—How Relief Came.

"I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams 'Pink Pills," says Mrs. Annie Treherne, Brandon, Man., who tells of her new found health as follows:—"Some years ago I had an attack of pneumonia and it left me in a terribly weakened and run-down state. I was unable to walk for a long time as I had practically lost the use of my legs, and had to be carried upstairs, for I had not the strength to go myself. I became despondent over my condition for I had tried many remedies, which failed to help me. While in this wretched condition a lady friend urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and I procured a supply. After taking the pills for a while I could see that I was growing stronger, and I gladly continued their use until I had fully regained my old-time health and strength. Now if I feel at all run down at any time I at once take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never fail me. I can therefore warmly recommend them to others who may be run down."

There is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to improve the blood and bring back strength after acute diseases such as fevers, pneumonia, influenza, etc. Given a fair trial they will not disappoint you. You can get the pills from your druggist, or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE BATHLESS PUBLIC.

BERLIN, Dec. 13. —(United Press).—The former Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg, the paradise of the "Junkers," boast of the unique distinction of having not one establishment where one can get a hot bath. Up to 1920, the little town of Strelitz had a bath for the Court society, but since there is no longer a reigning prince, the Strelitz nobility decided that there was no longer a necessity to have a bath and the building was closed. Even in the university town of Rostock, it is most difficult for a student to get a bath. A girl student advertised for a bath in the local paper, only to be told by the editor that a "Kultur person's" needs are fully satisfied by using a washbasin.

NEW YORK GIRL SEEKS HEALTH IN MANITOBA

Party From Auburn Will Make Dog Team Tour to Hudson Bay.

THE PAS, Man., 12. — Canadian Press. — The bracing air of northern Manitoba wil be tried out as a health restorer by a party of young women from Auburn, N. Y., who will arrive here on December 30th, to make a dog team tour of the northern wilds along the shores of Hudson Bay.

In search of health and physical development, Miss Florence McIntosh and two girl friends have arranged for three picked dog teams together with competent guides to take them on the lengthy tour.

The time of the year chosen for the outing is the extreme coldest of the northern season, and it is claimed by physicians that such a sudden shock to the unaccustomed physical system will produce the desired restorative results.

Some of the best-cared-for and fastest racing dogs of The Pas dog derby brand will be at the disposal of Miss McIntosh and her young friends in this novel and healthful undertaking.

POSTAL ZONING PLAN FOR CHRISTMAS MAIL

New Plan Will Enable Mailers to Send Their Parcels in the Right Time For Christmas.

A new "mail early" system has been devised by the postal authorities of Caanda this year to prevent gifts arriving at their destination after Christmas. This new zoning scheme is the compilation of a list of mailing dates set opposite the various Provinces of Canada and the United States, the dates indicating the time before which parcels must be mailed to ensure Christmas delivery.

The experience of the last couple of Christmas seasons has been that the public is beginning to realize the benefits of early posting of cards and parcels, but this year a still greater attempt is being put forward to stress the necessity of early mailing in order that congestion may be avoided. The new system to be tried this year constitutes the separating of Canada into districts, with a mailing date for each. According to the table compiled parcels for delivery by Christmas should be mailed before the following dates:

Addressed to the United States not later than Monday, Dec. 15th; to British Columbia not later than Dec. 15th; to Alberta, not later than Dec. 17th; to Saskatchewan, not later than Dec. 17th; to Manitoba and Maritime Provinces, not later than Dec. 18th; to the Province of Quebec, not later than Dec. 19th; anywhere in the Province of Ontario not later than Dec. 20th, and for delivery in this city and vicinity, not later than Dec. 22nd.

STUDENTS EXHIBIT SOME REAL TALENT

Spare Time Artists Will Profit by Their Studies.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(Associated Press).—Latent talent in the arts is being brought out of hundreds of men and women in all walks of life here who are devoting their spare time to the study of its various branches. A dealer in rubber shoes is showing proficiency in illustrative work, while the secretary to the president of a large steel mill, his instructor says, easily could make a living with pen and brush.

The director of one of Chicago's largest art academies has made a study of his spare hour students and their vocations to determine if there was not grou..' to believe there was a profound increase in the arts and if their appeal was not deep and broad. He found that a large majority were in school because of personal interest in special subjects or for general culture.

Some of the students are grandfathers, some are grade school students. Virtually every trade and profession is represented, from bell boys to university professors. Their class work, usually 15½ hours a week, is carried on without interfering with the students' regular occupation.

"Many of these students have taken up art work for the pleasure doing constructive study, knowing they will profit by ot one way or another some day," the director declares. "Old and young, they all take their work very seriously, deriving real pleasure from it and broadening their cultured sense."

Mrs. Wm. Walker, Webbwood, Ont., writes:

"I was sick for several months with my stomach, I had pains in the back, and how I used to dread wash day, for my back would pain so that I couldn't lie down when night came. I also had gas on my stomach, and my appetite was so poor that sometimes I did not care whether I ate or not. The doctor gave me medicine, of which I took a number of bottles without benefit. ODDFELLOWS CELEBRATE IN PETERBORO

(Contributed.)

The officers and members of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, together with numerous visitors, left the Lodge-room Monday night at 8 o'clock and proceeded to the C.N.R. station in procession, headed by the Orange Association Brass Band, where they met their Lindsay guests, who had come to assist in the celebration of the forty-second anniversary of the resuscitation of Otonabee Lodge, and then paraded back to the hall.

The Degree team of Lindsay Lodge, No. 100, after their arrival at the Lodge room, were invited by Noble Grand Hugh Robertson to take charge of the floor work, when two candidates were instructed in the work of the Initiatory Degree by the Degree team in charge of Degree Captain W. J. Brown.

At the close of the Degree, in which the team excelled, they received the hearty applause of the large membership present for the occasion.

Past Grand Master Rev. Walter Cox, representing Grand Master J. S. Anderson, who was unavoidably absent owing to a previous engagement, then proceeded to make the presentation to Brother M. M. Mowry, P.D.D.G.M., of an Honorable Veteran Jewel—only attained after 50 years continuous membership, and for which he had qualified; also a Veteran Jewel to Brother A. A. Ringer for 25 years' continuous membership.

Adjournment was then made to the dining-room, where a sumptious dinner had been prepared by Golden Link Lodge, No. 80, Daughters of Rebekah. The Follis orchestra were present and played during the meal, and received merited applause for the splendid programme rendered.

During the evening Bro. Mowry noted that there were only three of the charter members living who, on Dec. 8th, 1882, were active in opening the Lodge, viz., Brother John Mathieson, who was present, together with himself and Brother G. J. Early, of Cannington, who, through illness, was unable to be present; also that there was only one present, in the person of Brother P.G. W. F. Green, Rec. Sec., of the thirteen who joined on the night of opening.

Letters of regret at inability to be present were read from Grand Master J. E. Anderson, General A. E. Ross, Deputy Grand Master, P.G.M. J. A. Tully, and a number of others.

Bro. R. R. Ford, P.D.D.G.M., read the address from Otonabee Lodge to Bro. M. M. Mowry.

Bro. Alex. Dick lead the singing, with Bro. Martin Chenall presiding at the piano.

The committee in charge of the event were Past Grands R. J. Craig, chairman, E. H. Bartlett, R. J. Murduff, Henry Turner, E. J. Hotston, W. F. Green, secretary.

The address read was as follows:—

"To Brother Marcello Mowry, P.D.-D.G.M.

"Dear Brother Mowry:—Your brethern of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, Independent Order of Oddfellows, desire to heartily congratulate you on the completion by you of fifty years membership in the Order.

"You were one of the band of Oddfellows who, forty-two years ago, showed your keen interest in Oddfellowship and in the progress of our Order in Peterborough, by uniting in the necessary action to revive the charter of Otonabee Lodge and to resuscitate the Lodge, and your success in that action resulted in the re-establishment of the Lodge as an active and vigorous branch of the Order, which, in the many years that have passed since then, has grown and developed and has done a great work in attending the sick, consoling the bereaved, and in assisting to bury the dead.

"During the years since the revival of the charter, you have been a zealous member of this Lodge, an earnest worker, and one who could always be relied upon to do his share in the work of the Lodge. You have held the highest offices in the Lodge, to which your brethren were glad to advance you, and you earned the promotion by your unswerving loyalty to the Lodge and the principles of the Order, and you gave in all the offices you occupied efficient service. We take great pleasure in recognizing the valued services given so willingly, and, in appreciation of same, ask you to accept this Honorable Veteran's Jewel as a slight recognition of your splendid record.

"We hope that you will long be spared to assist us with your counsel and advice and to take part in the work of the Lodge.

"Signed on behalf of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I.O.O.F.

"W. F. Green, P.G., Secretary."

At the dinner, Bro. H. Turner, P.D.D.G.M., acted as chairman. The following was the toast list:—

The King.

The Grand Lodge—Proposed by Bro. Geo. Lacheur, P.G. Responded to by Bro. Past Grand Master Rev. Walter Cox, representing Grand Master J. E. Anderson, Lindsay.

The Veterans—Proposed by Bro. R. R. Ford, P.D.D.G.M.; responded to by Bro. M. Mowry, P.D.D.G.M.

The Visitors—Proposed by Noble Grand H. Robertson, Otonabee Lodge, No. 13. Responded to by Bro. W. E. Kelcher; Degree Captain Wm. J. Brown, Lindsay Lodge, No. 100.

The Rebekahs—Proposed by Bro. Rev. Walter Cox, P.G.M. Responded to by Mrs. M. Watts, Past President, Rebekah Assembly.

IRISH STUDY SUGAR MAKING.

SCOTTISH PASTOR CALLS UNION DIVINE COMMAND

Right Rev. D. D. Cathels, Moderator of Assembly of Church of Scotland, Says Lack of Church Union Sore Reproach—A Source of Weakness and Wastefulness.

'CANADA SETTING EXAMPLE TO WORLD."

One of the most powerful pronouncements in favor of church union has just arrived in Toronto from Scotland. It is from the pen of no less a personage than the moderator of the assembly of the Church of Scotland (the established church of Scotland) the Right Rev. Dr. D. Cathels, of Hawick, who had written to Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, minister of Old St. Andrew's Church.

In view of the fervent protests of certain anti-unionist orators that they are determined to be loyal to their mother church, the Church of Scotland, and that they will cling to her through thick and thin, this ardent epistle of the head of the great Scottish church is regarded by unionists as being most significant. It is packed with importance. For not only does Dr. Cathels, the present head of the church that John Knox and his associates founded back in the troublous times of 1590, give his blessing to the new union of three denominations in Canada, but he announces with joy that there is a goodly prospect of a union of the Scottish churches.

An Example to World.

"You are setting an example to the whole Christian world," writes Dr. Cathels to the Toronto pastor, referring to the Canadian union movement. He declares that the divisions of the church are its reproach. They cause weakness and wastefulness. And he remarks that it is a strange mentality that would perpetuate the present state of things in order to retain non-essentials.

Dr. Cathels has given Dr. Sclater permission to use his letter as he sees fit, and the pastor of St. Andrew's is having it printed and will send a copy to every member of his congregation.

The full text of the Scottish moderator's letter is as follows:

"The Manse, Hawick, 18-11-24.

"Dear Dr. Sclater: It was a great pleasure to me to have a letter from you. Our meeting in St. Andrew's manse here is very vivid in my mind, and I can never forget how greatly my son, and those who were with him, valued your services when you were chaplain at Queensferry. And he and they are only a few of the many who hold you in grateful remembrance for what you meant to them during your ministry on this side.

The Divine Command.

"I am profoundly thankful that you are taking an active interest in the union of the Canadian churches. One knows the difficulties that beset such a movement and one has to make allowances for those who hold back from it. There is an innate conservatism in all of us, and often this makes us hesitate to change the conditions to which we have been accustomed. Not all the children of Israel, doubtless, were eager to obey the divine command to go forward. But the time inevitably comes when that command is seen to be imperative. It has come to us here in Scotland, and because it is heard with open ears, and responsive hearts, we are on the eve of the consummation of many hopes and prayers in the union of our Scottish churches. It has come to you in Canada, and you, I most earnestly trust, are on the eve of even a wider union than we are.

"If we are proud of our Presbyterian churches, surely Methodists and Congregationalists have good reason to be proud of theirs. Their loyalty of the essential things of our common faith has been as noble, and as steadfast, as that of any church in Christendom. And, after all, the things on which we differ are of very small account in comparison with those on which we agree. Surely in the presence of Christ, our Lord, it is not the intensity with which we hold to "ways of administration"—which never can be regarded as of eternal significance—that determines our relation to Him, or our values in His sight. That is what all of us are coming to see more and more. All over Christendom that is being widely, and still more widely, recognized. And that is what is giving irresistible force to the movement for closer union which is so active in the world to-day, and especially in Scotland, and in Canada. Nothing but good can come of this. What else but good can come to Christian men and women who are seeking the fulfilment of their Lord's Prayer that they all may be one: as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they may be one in us: that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me?

"Frittering Away Our Time."

"No one can think the present state of things a happy one. Our divisions are a sore reproach to us. They are a source of weakness, and of wastefulness. And they are utterly unnecessary on any grounds of reasonableness. Instead of presenting a united front in the conflict for truth and righteousness which we are called upon to wage, we are presenting a sadly divided front, and wasting our resources, and frittering away our time. That is indisputable; and it is a strange mentality that would defend it. And just as strange is this mentality that would seek to perpetuate the present state of things, and would not gladly see the end of it, because it is unwilling to sacrifice some old and non-essential things in the interest of the things that are essential and of eternal moment. Surely, in the providence of God, we can conserve all that is best on our non-divided churches for the church that is to be, without lamenting the loss which, in the past, has emphasized and intensified our disunity from our fellow Christians.

"Here, in Scotland, we are watching your movement with intense interest. You are setting an example to the whole Christian world. You are seeking to demonstrate to that world how brethren can dwell in the unity of a common faith, and in undivided loyalty of service to one living and eternal Lord. That is a great and brave enterprise, and in the blessing of God—the God and Father of us all—cannot fail you.

"May all good be with you.

"Ever yours sincerely,

"D. CATHELS."

The undersigned members of St. Paul's session make the following declaration:-

We have carefully and prayerfully considered the Basis of Union and as a result are satisfied that it is a true statement of the evangelical doctrines held in common by all the great denominations, that it is in harmony with the teaching of our Confession of Faith, and, as such, is founded on, and agreeable to, the Word of God.

In view of this we heartily recommend to the members of our congregation that they vote for Union and thus all go with the Presbyterian Church in Canada into the United Church.

AUTO DEATHS AND SUICIDES INCREASE

Death Rate From Auto Accidents For First Ten Months of 1924 Was 15.7 Per Cent Per 100,000.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(United Press.)—The death rate from automobile accidents, including both adults and children, for the first ten months of 1924 was 15.7 per cent. per 100,000, as compared with 14.8 per cent in 1923 and 10.8 per cent. for 1920. On this basis, the number of deaths from automobile accidents in the United States in 1924 are estimated at 17,750, against 16,450 last year.

These figures were presented to the Eighteenth Annual Convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here to-day by Dr. Oscar H. Rogers, Chief Medical Director of the New York Life Insurance Company.

Life Insurance death claims for the first ten months of the current year reflect marked improvement in the health of the people of the United States during 1924, according to original statistics presented by Dr. Rogers. Notwithstanding the normal average increase expected in population during 1924, the life insurance mortality records indicate that there will be 30,000 fewer deaths this year than during 1923, when the total deaths in the United States amounted to 1,360,000.

Automobile accidents and suicides are practically the only causes among adult deaths that show an increase in rate over 1923. Noteworthy reductions are recorded in influenza and typhoid fever. In typically children's diseases, an increased death rate is indicated in meningitis, diarrhoea, enteritis, and scarlet fever, while there has been a substantial falling off in measles diphtheria and whooping cough. Referring to auto fatalities Dr. Rogers said:

"This is an alarming state of affairs and means should be found to remedy it. The argument has been advanced that the number of accidents is by no means keeping pace with the number of cars in use, but this is quite beside the mark. If a man is knocked down in the street by an automobile, it does not benefit him that the number of cars in the street is larger than it formerly was. It is the one offending car that counts so far as he and his family are concerned.

"The remedy lies in greater care in the issuing of automobile licenses, so as to eliminate persons temperamentally unfit to drive a car. Beside that, adequate punishment should be meted out to all persons guilty of inflicting injury upon others by careless driving."

Dreams

Columbus dreamed of a voice saying: "God will give thee 'keys of the ocean'."

With this encouragement he continued his plans, which resulted as everyone knows in the discovery of America.

Such encouragement through dreams has come to many, the nightly wanderings of the sub-conscious mind have often supplied the force which has made successful seemingly imposible endeavors.

Interpretations.

If you dream of a fountain, prosperity and health will be yours.

If an elephant comes through your dreams, someone will do you a very good turn.

Even the family physician is an omen of fortune and health, a rise in life, if he comes into your dreams.

A dove, if seen on the wing, means peace is coming to you and if the bird is at rest, happiness in domestic affairs will be yours.

Success of something which seems a failure is quite likely if you are eating pecans.

While to eat or pick strawberries foretells good fortune for all, especially lovers.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Do you know how much sleep your child should have?

Most parents, like the Manns of Anytown, do not have any particular schedule. The child goes to bed as early as they can get him and sleeps as long as they'll let him.

But medical men have studied out the question and here is a chart you can jot down and refer to if you wish to run the family life on schedule.

Children from 4 to 5—To bed at 6 o'clock and up at 7 a.m.—13 hours sleep.

From 6 to 7—7 p.m. to 7 a.m.—12 hours.

From 8 to 9—7:30 p.m. to 7 a.m.—11½ hours.

From 10 to 11—8 p.m. to 7 a.m.—11 hours.

From 12 to 13—8:30 p.m. to 7 a.m.—10½ hours.

From 14 to 15—9 p.m. to 7 a.m.—10 hours

From 16 to 17—10 p.m. to 7 a.m.—9 hours sleep.

Animal Pictures Fascinated Four Year Old Boy; He Burned To Death Still Thumbing Beloved Book

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Vividly colored pictures of elephants, lions, zebras and other animals appealed to the mind of four-year-old Nathan Eisenblatt. He would sit for hours and gaze into the thumb-worn picture book that his mother had given him.

Yesterday he was turning the pages with his usual childish enthusiasm. His mother, Mrs. Molly Eisenblatt, was standing outside in the hall of the apartment, No. 631 East Eleventh street, talking to Mrs. Rosie Foreman, a neighbor.

Suddenly the mother exclaimed:

"There must be a fire in my apartment!"

Smoke was streaming through the half-opened door. The mother started into the apartment, but Mrs. Foreman restrained her and gave the alarm of fire. The hysterical mother was carried forcibly to the street by neighbors.

When the firemen found Nathan, the charred picture book in his hand, he was dead.

THE TELEPHONE GIRL

Did you ever try sitting all day in one place and still try to keep up your nerve? It's something that brings to your system a trace of the something that makes patience swerve.

The sitting, alone, ought to be quite enough to make anybody go sour. But, think of the 'phone girl, whose duties are tough as she waits on us hour after hour.

All day there's a buzzing, and little lights flick on the board, and she dare not forsake it. Complaints rattle in; it's no wonder she's sick of the job, though she sits there to take it!

In all of your life have you ever heard tell of a person just perfect—now truly? If you listened all day to the telephone bell it's a cinch that you'd too be unruly.

300-MILE FLIGHT COST $1.25.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—(Associated Press).—F. Botsch, a South German aviator, recently made 300 miles in three and one-half hours in a ten horsepower glider fitted with an auxiliary "tomtit" motor. The cost of the trip was $1.25 for oil and gasoline, which is said to be a record for Germany, at least.

The same journey to a town in Thuringen by rail would require 16 hours and travelling third class would cost nearly $8.

MIRRORS TEACH FAIR SEX SAFETY LESSON

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13. —(United Press).—Chewing gum slot machines, weighing devices and show windows now act as sidewalk boudiors for the fair sex and soon trolleys may be equipped with mirrors, too.

It may seem a far-fetched idea to involve the powdering of one's nose with the correct method of alighting from a street car, but it's being done in Berlin and accidents have been cut down to a remarkable degree, according to the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

Accident suits began to pile up on a Berlin street car company because many men and women did not know how to alight from trolleys. An erudite German student of psychology hit upon the mirror idea. Mirrors were installed at car exits in such a position that passengers had to face forward to see themselves, as they prepared to leave. As a result of their vanity, they alighted correctly.

"CORRIGAN"

BY EDMUND SNELL

I—CORRIGAN'S WAY.

The little coasting steamer Haufah, Dutch-owned, made leisurely for the patch of green which showed on the horizon like jade in a sea of lapis-lazuli. The first mate, a truculent brigand, in dirty whites and canvas shoes broken at the sides, was getting a motley collection of dark-skinned natives below hatches; protesting Malays with strange bundles; Japanese girls, broad-featured and giggling; Chinese coolies, some with flimsy boxes resembling violin-cases, others with nothing at all, because they had gambled away everything they had started with except a strip of rag at the loins; a tall Sikh with curling beard and effeminate swagger; Tamils, coal-black and wearing gold ornaments in their lips, noses and ears; chattering like a monkey colony, clutching their entire worldly possessions, thesy warmed below decks to remain, wedged like sweltering sardines, until the vessel chose to put to sea again. The Dutch mate, the stump of a black cheeroot stuck in the corner of his great mouth, hastened their movements with none too delicate prods of an iron bar.

Irene Matheson, reclining in a long cane chair on the narrow first-class deck under a patched awning, raised her eyes from the book she had been reading. There was a wealth of pity in her soul for these helpless creatures, formed like men and women, yet herded together like beasts of the field. Suddenly she gasped and leaned forward. Something that the ship's officer had done sent a shudder through her slender frame. In dumb protest, she looked at the broad white back of a man who stood by the rail. She could not see his face, but she thought that his sun-burned neck was unusually red and that the big brown hands which gripped the rope barrier had tightened their hold. It was as if a chord of sympathy had passed between these two. The slim girl in the chair felt that the silent message her brown eyes had flashed into space had come to rest in a highly sensitive receiving station encased in a suit of immaculate duck. The shoulders of the man she knew as Corrigan twitched. Her eyes widening with suppressed excitement, her tiny hands clutching at the sides of her chair, she saw him vault with the ease of an athlete on to the deck below. Half-a-dozen strides sufficed to cover the distance between him and the mate. She saw the iron bar descend pitilessly on the head of a native woman who had tried to secure a portion of her personal effects that had fallen as she staggered through that gaping hole, and then—Corrigan's great fist shot out and the first mate fell heavily, the bar rolling into the scuppers. Feeling like a fair spectator in a Roman arena, Mrs. Matheson clapped her hands.

The mate, crawling painfully to his feet, heard it and threw a malevolent glance in her direction. Swearing horribly, he reached out for the belaying-pin. Corrigan, who was bending over the injured woman, caught his eye. The fat fingers that groped for the bar ceased their fumbling, and the little pig eyes of the Dutchman quailed suddenly beneath a steely gaze that spoke volumes. Mrs. Matheson had never heard Corrigan's voice. During the whole of the three days from Singapore, she had remained silent as the Sphynx, gazing ceaselessly out to sea like a man weighed down by a brooding sorrow. Under this sudden call to action, the spell was broken.

"Leave that alone, my friend," advised Corrigan in measured tones. "You've gone a bit too far for my likin'."

The mate gulped down something in his throat, shrugged his shoulders and remembered his position on the boat. Perhaps it was that he caught sight of the captain on his way from the bridge, for he stooped and picked up the bar, and Corrigan hit him again.

The skipper, his eyes ablaze, confronted the master of the situation.

"What does this mean?" he demanded in very good English.

Corrigan, square-jawed and clean-shaven, rose to his full height. He stood like a colossus, his hands resting easily on his hips, between the fat mate holding his bruised jaw and the Dusun girl, the white man's handkerchief knotted round her head, on which showed an ever-increasing patch of blood.

"I regret having to interfere with the discipline of your ship, Captain Lemburg," he said, "but to a humane man the situation explains itself."

The captain, broad and bearded, his white-topped cap cocked over one eye, his arms over-long, like a giant ape, thumped his great chest until it resounded like a drum.

"I'm captain here, Mr. ——," he shouted.

"Corrigan's my name," put in the other calmly. "When I see a man hit a woman, black or white, the niceties of marine etiquette are lost on me. I see red. However, as it appears I owe you an apology—I give it; but I give no guarantee not to repeat my action in a similar case of brutality."

The skipper choked down his wrath.

"I see," he said, thickly. "You will also apologize to Mr. Vanop." He jerked his head toward the mate who kept on feeling at his face as if to make sure his chin was still where Nature had originally placed it.

"Not on your life, my dear Lemburg," Corrigan assured him, turning on his heel to indicate that the affair was finished. "That's my way. In Perak, where I come from, they call it Corrigan's way—and you can't beat it, Captain; I give you my word!"

He dropped on one knee by the side of the native woman, and the skipper, with a look at the broad back that suggested that it presented an enigma which, to him at least, was absolutely insoluble, ordered the first mate aft. He clapped down the hatches himself, leaving the injured woman and Corrigan the sole occupants of that portion of the ship, and went to the bridge to bring the Hau-fah safely into the still waters of Labuan.

Corrigan came to the first-class deck, slipping something into his pocket, and disappeared into the cool recesses of the corridor in search of a clean handkerchief. Irene Matheson met him at the door of her cabin. The tune that he had been whistling broke off abruptly at sight of her. His face assumed that mask-like expression it had worn throughout the trip. Mrs. Matheson hesitated.

"Mr. Corrigan," she said, the words forming themselves with an effort.

'Hullo!" He started as if something had struck him as if the sound of a woman's voice jarred on his nerves.

"Oh—I just wanted to say—to thank you—for what you did. I think it was absolutely splendid."

He crimsoned beneath his tan.

"Oh!—That!" He relaxed somewhat and faced her squarely. "I've been so wrapped up in myself, you know that I forgot for the moment you were there. Women haven't treated me too kindly in this world. I suppose I've been out in the wilds too long; I've lost polish—and women-folk haven't a lot of use for the unfinished article. But there are some things I can't stand—and that was one of 'em."

"I know," said Mrs. Matheson, sympathetically. "Perhaps some woman are exacting, but there are times, Mr. Corrigan, when they look round for a man; times when there are wrongs that only a real man can right. I wanted you to hit that man."

Corrigan gasped.

"You wanted me to?" he stammered. "I've orgotten a lot o th ngs n these weary years, Mrs. Matheson; but I sort o remembered when I was hal way through wth t, that I was guilty o a breach o etiquette; I eit I was do ng someth ng that sn't done. I mean, I suppose I ought to have checked my pr mt ve mpulses unt l you had retured to your cabin."

Irene Matheson flushed. Unw ll n ly, she ound hersel compar ng th s man w th the husband she was go ng back to.

"The pr mt ve woman n me called aloud or all that was pr mt ve n man," she sa d s mply, "and ound t I'm nfin tely grate ul to you, Mr. Corr gan." She held out a sl m hand and Corr gan, stepp ng orward mpetuously, took t n h s brown paw.

"Are you go ng ashore?" he nqu red, lett ng h s blue eyes rest or a moment on hers.

"I you w ll take me," she repl ed, look ng down.

He ound her ten m nutes later, talk ng to the brown g rl on the ore-deck. As he approached them, he saw that a paper parasol had appeared rom somewhere, and the scarcely percept ble breeze wh ch blew rom the shore brought to h m the unm stakable scent o Eau de Cologne.

They crossed the gangway together on to the somewhat r ckety land ng-stage. He called back to a stoop ng figure on the sh p's deck:

"How long we got here?"

"Twenty- our hours at least, s r," was the reply.

"Thanks."

They had got beyond a group o prosperous Ch nese merchants when the first mate looked up. He shook h s fist a ter them and swore venomously. Presently he a med a k ck at a nat ve hand, and chuckled hoarsely to h mse l. He surveyed an enormous watch w th a rusted n ckel case and a cracked d al on which the sun and moon played an mportant part. He stuffed it back in his pocket and looked anxiously up at the bridge. The skipper was engaged in earnest conversation with the Chinese super-cargo.

* * * * *

Corrigan and Irene Matheson strolled past the single row o Chinese shops, stopping every now and then to examine the wares displayed or sale in one o the most sleepy settlements on the earth's sur ace. The tropic sun blazed relentlessly down from its realm of infinite blue.

"Who is your husband, Mrs. Matheson?"

"Mr. Matheson!" she smiled back at him.

Corrigan grinned.

"Of course," he said. "I know all that. But what's he do, I mean? Ought I to know of him?"

"I think you should," she said huskily, stirring up the soil with the end of her parasol. "Hope-Matheson is his full name."

"Hope-Matheson!" echoed Corrigan. "Hope-Matheson!" He was searching in his brain for something that would account for the familiarity of the name. Suddenly he started. "Good God!" he muttered under his breath.

They turned in at the door of the freshly painted Rest House, and sat down at a table by the window.

"It's cooler in here," said Corrigan, and felt for his cigarettes. The tips of his fingers touched something which lay at the bottom of his side pocket, something the existence of which he had forgotten entirely. He brought it out and placed it on the table in front of her. It was a cat, carved in bone, with a broad, round head and a tail like a jug handle. The features had been dabbed on in paint, there was a red line running round the neck and patches in red and gold on either side of its body. The whole affair was no bigger than the nail of his index finger.

"What do you think of that?" he demanded, grinning broadly.

She picked it up and let it balance on the palm of her hand.

He did not notice a queer light that flashed suddenly into her brown eyes, nor that the image shook as she held it. He was shouting something in Malay to the Chinaman behind the improvised bar.

"There's a story attached to that," he said, swinging his chair round to her side. "You know I patched up that brown girl on the boat? Well, I didn't want to take the thing, but she made me have it. She told me she could read the future like a book. She declared that there were only two cats like that in existence—and the other one——"

He paused uncomfortably, feeling that her eyes rested on his own.

"Do go on, Mr. Corrigan," she implored him. "It sounds frightfully thrilling."

"The other one is in the possession of the girl I'm destined to marry. Sounds pretty good rubbish, doesn't it? I've ordered you soda, sugar and lemon-juice, with plenty of ice. Will that do?"

"Perfectly, thank you." She regarded him for a moment in silence. "Then there is hope for you, after all, Mr. Corrigan," she said.

He laughed aloud. "Yes, but what a hope, Mrs. Matheson!"

"If I ever come across her," declared Irene Matheson, "I'll be sure and let you know!"

"Thanks. I'm sure you will."

The boy placed a tray between them.

Her brows wrinkled. "I wonder if you'd come?" she said, musingly.

Corrigan stirred the fluid in his glass.

"Of course. I'd rely on you to judge—if she were—well, in any way suitable," he retorted slyly.

"It's a tall order, you know," she told him, "but I'll promise to do that, too. Would you really come, do you think?"

"From the ends of the earth!" declared Corrigan, bringing both fists on to the table—"at your re ommendation!"

A shadow crossed the doorway and Corrigan looked up to see a man, enormously tall, with a small head perched ridiculously between massive shoulders. He stooped as he entered and stood, with folded arms, gazing down at them, swaying from side to side.

Mrs. Matheson sprang to her feet.

"John!" she said faintly. "I——"

Corrigan rose slowly. He thought he had seen the short, thick-set form of the first mate of the Hau-fah, stationary in the roadway beyond the newcomer. He half guessed who the stranger was, and sensed that he had been drinking.

"Mr. Corrigan, this is my husband," said Mrs. Matheson. He saw that she was white to the lips and trembling. In the pale, twitching face under the topee he had forgotten to remove, Corrigan found sufficient evidence to tell him the reason of her fear and why he had been counselled to steer clear of Hope-Matheson.

"So sorry to disturb this delightful—er—tete-a-tete," said her husband, dropping into a chair by the door. "I must apologize too, Irene, for my lateness in coming to meet you. Didn't wait very long for me, did you?" He sat there, grinning inanely. Suddenly he remembered his hat, looked round for a hook, and eventually threw it on the floor. "Suppose you and Mr.—er—thingumbob here—were too occupied in each other to think about your loving husband?"

"Corrigan is my name," said the other for the second time that morning. He did not look at the girl, but knew instinctively that she was shamed and humiliated.

"Irish?" inquired Hope-Matheson, without any particular interest

"Not so you'd notice it," retorted Corrigan curtly.

Hope-Matheson lurched suddenly to his feet.

"Look here," he shouted, "I've had about enough of this. If I were completely—sober, Mr. Corrigan, I'd break every bone in your body."

"If you weren't hopelessly drunk, Mr. Hope-Matheson, you wouldn't be so damned optimistic!" said Corrigan between his teeth. "I've had to give one of your friends a few lessons in politeness this morning already!"

A gentle touch on his sleeve checked him. He fingered his coat-collar as if it choked him.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Matheson," he said quietly. "It's my confounded spleen. It always gets me like that." A grateful look in her eyes tried to tell him that it was just Corrigan's way—and she admired it, awfully! "Now, Mr. Hope-Matheson," he continued, "whatever our Dutch friend has presumed to tell you, I can assure you, on my honor as a gentleman, that to-day is the first on which your wife and I have even exchanged a word. She didn't understand you were meeting her here, or she would have waited." He held out his hand, but the other man didn't appear to notice it.

"Come along, Irene," he said impatiently. "The boat may be putting out any moment." He stooped and fumbled for his hat. The Chinese boy shuffled across the floor and picked it up for him.

"They told us twenty-four hours," said Irene Matheson. 'Is there really all this hurry?"

'Yes," said her husband abruptly, and stood back from the door to allow her to pass.

'Good-bye, Mrs. Matheson," said Corrigan.

'We shall see you on the boat," she cried.

"I'm afraid not."

Irene Matheson's heart stood still.

"Oh! but I thought——"

"I've decided to stop here for a while. I'll come on by the next boat. I'm sending up for my barang."

She came back and shook hands with him across her husband.

"Ever so many thanks," she said, 'and good luck."

Hope-Matheson pushed out into the road, fury in every line of his white face.

"From the ends of the earth," whispered Corrigan—and she was gone, her face flushed to the roots of her hair.

Corrigan fished out some notes to pay the boy, and caught sight of the absurd Chinese cat she had left standing on the table. He picked it up and held it to the light.

"If she had your double, you little devil," he declared, "I'd——!"

The image of Mr. Hope-Matheson dried up the remainder of the sentenc "I don't know what I'd do," he concluded truthfully.

* * * * *

The red sun was dropping over the horizon as the white motorboat with striped awning swept through palm-girt islets toward the harbour.

"Jesselton," said Raikes, the owner of the boat, throwing aside an Overseas Edition that was hopelessly out of date.

"Ah!" said Corrigan.

"Guess, I shall start back to-morrow."

"As soon as that?"

"Must. Duty calls! Not like you sahibs, you know, that can wander the world's surface at will. Got to keep our noses to the grindstone!"

"Does anyone work in Labuan?" inquired Corrigan, innocently.

They crept in under the long white jetty and, leaving Raikes' men to shift for themselves, made their way toward the clubhouse on the hill.

Corrigan sat by the veranda rail, staring into the night which throbbed with insect life. The chair opposite him was temporarily vacant; Raikes was bending over a table, yarning with a trio of old acquaintances. Sounds of riotous laughter came from the billiard-room, the bar emitted one continuous stream of tobacco smoke, a babel of voices, the merry clinking of glasses; a cracked piano thumped doubtful music from an adjacent bungalow. Corrigan caught snatches of conversation, the tag-ends of club stories, fragments of time-worn choruses. Suddenly he sat up, listening keenly.

"It's a damn shame," someone was saying. "Wonder she went back to him."

"Boasts he made her come. No end of a strong will. Been livin' away in Singapore for ages."

"Drinking himself to death," put in a third voice. "Came into my office from the last boat; we're his mates, you know. He was pretty blotto at eleven in the morning. Told me some rambling story of his wife and another feller at Labuan, I think it was. Swore he was going to make her pay for it."

Someone whistled softly.

"He'll kill her. I know Hope-Matheson. I've had the pleasure of working for him. He's a hell of a brute when he's roused—and there's not a man living dare tackle him. I saw him lay out a big coolie with the flat of his hand."

A group of men moved away from the window by Corrigan's elbow, still talking. Beads of perspiration stood out on Corrigan's forehead. He bent his arms till the great muscles threatened to burst his tunic.

Suddenly, as he sat there, something came from the outer darkness and fell on to the table. He picked it up gingerly and turned it over and over between his fingers. It was a crumpled blue envelope with a hard substance which felt like a pebble, wedged into one corner. He smoothed it out and read, in a trembling feminine hand: "—— Corrigan, Esq."

He tore open the envelope and drew out a single sheet of foreign notepaper.

"For God's sake, come to me," he read. "Be prepared for anything.—Irene."

There rolled on to the wooden surface before his startled eyes—the image of a Chinese cat, the exact replica of the one that still rested in the bottom of his pocket.

Corrigan's guide had disappeared. He fastened his pony to a post and saw, through the vast forest of mature rubber trees, the bright lights of a house. Close on twenty-four hours had elapsed since he had received that tragic S.O.S. He prayed to heaven he had got come too late. He smiled grimly as he strode up the steep path, glancing ever to right and to left, with the wariness of a man who is accustomed to walk in strange places alone. Corrigan had no room in his mind for consequences. Cost what it might, he had come to steal the wife of the man none other dared tackle. "From the end of the earth," he had promised her, and Corrigan never broke faith.

Presently he halted and listened intently. There was a noise going on up there that puzzled him. As he started forward again, he knew, rather than saw, that someone was coming toward him. He darted behind a tree, as the dim outline of a swart native swung into view on the path ten yards above him. Corrigan could just make out a conical hat and something the man carried over his right shoulder. He had heard in Perak gruesome stories of Borneo head-hunters. "When you see a native carrying a sword on his shoulder—take no risks," he had been warned. Corrigan took no risks. He sprang on Hope-Matheson's henchman like a tiger, and knocked him senseless with the magazine of his revlover.

As he emerged into the open land beyond the trees, a gust of smoke swept from a veritable furnace, choking him. Horror-stricken, he saw a circle of fire, and in it, like a grim set-piece, the fast-consuming headquarters of Hope-Matheson.

Above the sound of crackling wood and the crashing of falling timbers, he thought he heard a man's voice, singing. The wild song, borne on the breeze that fanned the flames until the roof of dried sago-leaves burst into a sea of leaping fire, grew louder and louder, and, presently, the great form of the planter lurched into view. Like a man in a dream, Corrigan watched him feeding the flames from a petrol can, the very surface of the metal container flecked with tongues of light.

Corrigan caught him by the arm and swung him round to face him. The madman clutched at his coat, but Corrigan got there first. He held a blue barrel under Hope-Matheson's nose.

"Out with it, you hell-hound," he shouted, his head thrust forward. "What have you done with her?"

The planter's glassy eyes surveyed him from head to toe.

"D'you know who you're talking to?" he demanded, drunkenly, waving one arm like a pump-handle. "Because, if you don't, I'll tell you."

Corrigan, beside himself, struck him several times in the chest.

"Quick," he almost screamed. "Where is she?"

"She—Oh!—Irene?" A cunning look came into his eyes. "You're a trifle too late, old son," he said. "Behold! Her funeral pyre!"

"My God!" cried Corrigan, and plunged in through the doorway, under an archway of fire. He heard the maniac shouting incoherently after him, heard him empty his revolver into the inferno. He found a bedroom. It was unoccupied, but he dipped a towel into a water jug and knotted it behind his head. In a third apartment, where the blazing roof showered glowing fragments, he found her, bound hand and foot. The terror faded from her eyes as she recognized him, even before he had torn the towel from his head. He soaked it again and fastened it round her, then bore her, like a doll, through the tottering ruin into the outer air beneath the stars.

The roof crashed in behind him and a furnace, in which no living thing could survive, roared to the heavens.

Corrigan, gulping for breath, carried her beyond the zone of the conflagration. He cut her bonds, drawing the rope gently from the raw wounds it had made at her wrists and ankles. With the moistened towel he extinguished those portions of their clothing in which the fire had taken hold.

Presently he stood back from her, his hands on his hips.

"I might have guessed you had that cat," he said simply, for all the world as if nothing unusual had happened. "She wasn't a fortune-teller, that Dusun girl; she was a thought reader! I believe now that I loved you when I first set eyes on you, only circumstances had made my blind. She gave you that little bone thing while I was in my cabin!"

Irene Matheson nodded. As she looked up at him, resting on both her hands, Corrigan thought he had never seen anyone so beautiful in all his life before.

"She was a thought reader, Corrigan," she said. She had never heard his other name.

Suddenly she screamed aloud and pointed wildly into what was left of the house.

Corrigan looked. He saw a small head on giant shoulders hang for a moment, twitching convulsively, grotesquely, in the very centre of the inferno—then pitch forward into the blaze.

* * * * *

He held her in front of him on his sturdy pony, cantering toward the dawn.

She looked up at him through misted eyes. With that firm arm supporting her, she felt as though she could never be tired again.

"Corrigan's way," she murmured, echoing something he had once said. "You can't beat it!"

RAILROADS MUST WIN THE PUBLIC

Need Billion a Year For Ten Years and Can Only Get it by Holding Confidence of Nation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13 (United Press).—"Everything to-day points to long-continued prosperity on the part of the American people," said President Charles H. Markham, of the Illinois Central Railroad, at to-day's session of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

Speaking on the subject of "Our Common Carriers and National Expansion," Markham predicted renewed interest in railway securities by the life insurance companies whose holdings in that class of investment, he said, had dropped from 35 per cent. of their total assets in 1911, to 22 per cent. at the beginning of 1924. The total of railway securities held by these companies is about two billion dollars.

"The injurious effects of the recent Great War are beginning to wear off, and all lines of business, including agriculture and the railroads, are ready to make a new start to levels of industry that have been as yet untouched," said Markham. "The settled conditions that were in evidence prior to the war are to be resumed. Farm prices are becoming more stabilized. A national election unaffected by the heritage of the war has just been decided. A national policy of encouragement of business has been determined upon. In every way, I believe that we are safe in looking forward to an era of good times in which every one will share.

"The part the railroads must play in this advance is the one great railway problem facing us to-day—that of the ability of the railroads, under private management, to take care of the future transportation needs of this great nation.

"The railroads are back in a way, where they began nearly a century ago, faced again by the need of catching up and keeping up with the country. The mark we must shoot at is high. Our railway freight traffic, we must remember, has increased the tremendous amount of more than 800 per cent. in the last forty years and has more than doubled itself in the last twenty. It has incresed at a rate well in advance of the population increase, because the requirements of our own people and of our foreign trade have been developed to a marked degree by the unprecedented inventions and advance in civilization of recent decades.

"Owing to inadequate rates and uncertainty as to the attitude of the public, our American railroads in recent years have not been able to make adequate investment preparations for the future. More than a billion dollars was borrowed and spent in 1923 to make up for some of the more noticeable defects, but these expenditures did not entirely offset the postponement of needed expenditures that had been forced upon the railroads in the past, much less place the railroads in a position to go confidently ahead. If railway traffic increases in the next ten years only half of what it did in the last ten years, it has been estimated, an expenditure of approximately 800 million dollars a year above the ordinary maintenance will be required steadily for the next ten years to keep pace with the growth of business. I would not be at all surprised to see railway business increase more than that estimate in the next ten years and an investment expenditure be required of at least a billion dollars a year. It will take confidence on the part of railway management to spend a billion dollars a year, and it will take confidence on the part of investors to lend it.

"The American people, in the election just over, have reaffirmed their belief in the principle of private ownership of the railroads. They do not want the government to run the railroads, because that would throw upon taxes the burden of railway financing. Since the future existence of the railroads is, therefore, definitely intrusted to their private owners, the task of obtaining the investments needed for future expansion falls squarely upon the shoulders of the railway managements themselves. The investments are not to be commandeered; they are not to be taken by legislative enactment from the public treasury; they must be invited, they must be wooed and won by constructive means. Railway investment must be made attractive.

"The key to the future for the railroads is to win the public, just as their key to disaster in the past was to lose public confidence. The railroads, by bitter experience, have come to realize this, and I do not believe that they will ever in the future stray away from the path of full, fair dealing with the public. An important part of every railroad's work in the future will be the cultivating of public confidence. The railroads have had nothing to lose and everything to gain by going to the public with their problems.

CONTENTS OF COBALT ORE.

To the uninitiated, ore is just ore. If it happens to contain bright specks at once the supposition is that it contain gold or silver. To the metallurgist, however, every species of ore presents its own special features, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior. In the case of Cobalt ores from the Cobalt district of Northern Ontario, when this field was first developed the silver was looked upon as the only content worth developing. Cobalt ore, however, provides a number of metallic substances, each of which is very valuable in its own special field. From the ores of the Cobalt field are extracted arsenic, silver, copper, cobalt, cobalt oxide and cobalt salts with a small iron content. The demand for arsenic for the protection of the cotton crop of the southern states intensified the production of this insecticide. Formerly arsenic was recognized as a nuisance in any ores of which formed a part. Cobalt oxide is used as an alloy in the manufacture of high grade tool steel known as stellite. Cobalt itself is the ingredient of many compounds which provide the beautiful blue colors in porcelains, pottery, glass, etc. and it is especially valuable in producing that pottery so dear to the heart of the connoisseur of china, Old Sevres blue.

PARIS IS PLANNING TO DRIVE ALL CROOKS FROM THE COUNTRY

Enrollment and Control of All Visitors Involved — Will Make Worry and Expense for the Tourists.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS.

PARIS, Dec. 13 (United Press).—Alarmed at the increase of undesirable foreigners in the capitol since the war, vigorous steps are being taken here for the enrollment and control of all visitors.

Regulations announced in the "Journal Official" are so exacting that tourists will be greatly annoyed by complying with them, while tourists' agencies and shop keepers fear that the laws will discourage travel and injure business.

The Ministry of the Interior has ruled that all visitors remaining more than fifteen days in France, as well as thos who come to work or reside here, must make formal application within 4 hours of their arrival for an identity card. The application will consist of the usual certificate of domicile, signed by a landlord or hotel official, four full-face photographs and documentary proof of name, names of father and mother, nationality, profession, and names of all children under fifteen years of age.

Two documents will be prepared by the local police commissioner, one to the Prefecture of Police and the other to the central records bureau of the Ministry of the Interior. Usually a passport will suffice to cover these points. Two French sponsors must appear if the foreigner is to remain in France more than two years.

It is compulsory for landlords, boarding house and hotel keepers to report Cithin forty-eight hours the arrival of foreigners. All identity cards more than three years old must be renewed, which means that thousands of old foreign residents must flock to headquarters and get new cards.

All this is even worse than it sounds. The system of issuing identity cards is most cumbersome and visitors usually have to wait hours in line. Very often two or three days are required to comply with all the red tape. No special provisions have been made to speed up the machinery. For foreigners who do not know the language, the task of getting an identity card is formidable. Cards now cost twelve francs, but it is proposed to raise this amount, perhaps to fifty francs. Incidental costs, such as photographs, taxicabs and interpreters, made the tedious task an expensive one as well.

The new regulations will not go into effect for some weeks, because new cards must be printed and other provisions made to handle the applications. The feelings of the tourist have not been taken into consideration at all, and agencies are trying to have some better arrangements made. It is pointed out that France's revenue from first-class tourists, which totals millions of francs every season, will suffer heavily because people will get out of town earlier than they might otherwise do to avoid the bother. Up till recently, visitors could remain here two months before applying for a card.

France seems to be following the precedent of the United States in its desire to control inmigration. The Ministry of the Interior has explained that the new decrees have been passed to reach certain undesirables and to control the influx of certain grades of foreign labor. To obtain this end, it is held, all foreigners must be subjected to the revised system.

France, as the United States, maintains the right to control its visitors, and there is much justification for her attempt to rid the country, and particularly Paris, of undesirables. Since the war thousands have been attracted here by the exchange rate and comfortable living conditions.

The night life offers all sorts of opportunities for crooks and dissolute characters and moasures of repression have long been considered.

BITS OF HANDY WORK FOR GIFTS

Timely Suggestions for the Thrifty Lady at Christmas.

USEFUL GIFTS.

BY MARJORIE HOWE DIXON

One hears so much of the personal touch—and among the gift suggestions for this year, the personal touch is more than ever emphasized. Even the powder pufis and the tiny bells for milady's dresser have been transformed into persons of great charm and delicacy.

The use of dolls in gift making has become so general that one may buy several sizes, from the larger ones with wire skirts, to act as telephone shields and lamps, to the very tiniest Dutch head to fasten to the handle of a powder puff.

Among the larger dolls are those of the French variety used as cushion tops, spreading their ruffled and voluminous skirts over the cushion itself. Then there are the sinuous and wicked-eyed French acrobats made on wire and stuffed with cotton, who can twine their legs, muffler fashion about their necks with no effort whatever. Their ability in this direction far exceeds that of mere human beings.

A bell for milady to call her maid is a pretty conceit, especially when its demure head wears a lace bonnet and its skirts are gay ribbons all gathered and ruffled and edged with black lace.

Powder puffs, too, come in for special attention. A Dutch lady with a sweet cap had all her skirts flounced with scolloped blue ribbon —with tiny threads of silver running through them. Underneath was concealed the fluffiest of powder puffs.

Similar in general design was a dainty Miss designed for the baby. Narrow white lace on pink ribbon made her pretty skirts, while her merry face painted on white silk peered out from a cunning lace bonnet tied beneath her chin. Another pretty gift to a baby was a white silk pussy, to hold satchet. Cotton filled with sweet fragrance filled the funny little kitten, whose face was painted. Its body ended in a long, slim tail of silk bound by heavy silk thread.

And speaking of kittens, these favorite toys of the tiniest person, one will find kittens of all kinds among the stamped—ready-to-be embroidered sets. Children can make many of these, and rabbits too. The designs are simple and easy to execute and not too difficut for small fingers.

An older girl might enjoy making a pretty lady of crepe paper on a half pint mayonaise jar. Any small glass jar with a screw-on lid will do. She will need a small spool of copper wire, some fresh clean cotton and some crepe paper in dainty color. Lavender and green are pretty together. A pink dress, with green and lavender ribbons has its charm too.

First she may make a cotton body covered with white crepe, and wire this firmly to the lid of the jar. A round head can be wired from the body and the extension of the two ends of wire will make arms. These are wound with cotton and covered with white, too.

Paints will be needed for the face, and the hair is made of the cotton sewed in place. Now to dress the lady. First the girlie must gather a strip of crepe paper and wire it to the jar itself. This is an underskirt. The lady then has made for her an overskirt attached to the body so that the lady herself may be unscrewed from the top of the jar. Tiny ribbons of the crepe paper will make pretty decorations for the dress which should be kept in the general period of the hoop-skirted eighteen-sixties. The completed result may be used either as a candy jar, or as a container for tiny guest-powder-puffs.

A more elaborate piece of work requiring more materials and time, too, will be the composition of an entire dresser set in black satin edged with gold lace. If one did not care for the lace, narrow pink and lavender ribbon could be substituted, for the edging.

Two cardboard trays would be usable, one for pins and the other for the nail things—the buffer, nail file, etc. A covering of isinglass over the inside lining of satin is practical if one cares to go to that expense. The edging is the same for all the dresser appointments. A case is made for the talcum powder can of the satin, and a round box is covered for face powder. These are decorated with flat boquets of silk flowers, primly tied with ribbons. The hand mirror, too, rejoices in its flat boquet, as does the back of the hair brush. The satin and edging further decorate the comb. A fat round pin cushion with ruffled edges may be added to this set if desired, or a pair of scent bottles to lend their quaint charm.

It is suggested that an old dresser set might be completely renewed by this decorative treatment, in case one was fond of the old set, and desired to keep it in use. The general effect is very handsome and will be sure to please the recipient.

CALENDAR HAS PLACE IN CASE

Witnesses Say They Consulted Almanac in Fixing Dates For False Testimony.

PERJURY CHARGES.

A Christian calendar figured to some extent in the second trial which opened yesterday afternoon of Rex vs. Newell, on the charge of subornation to perjury of the witness Albert Hynes.

Hynes, the first witness called by the Crown Prosecutor, A. B. Cunningham, brought in the 1922 Christian Calendar in the Newell home at Asphodel, as having been consulted in an effort to fix a date which would be feasible when he was called on to give testimony in the trial last year of James Newell on the charge of seduction, under promise of marriage of Clarice McColl of Norwood. James Newell, the accused, called later, remembered such a calendar as being in the house.

The evidence submitted yesterday by various witnesses called was practically a re-substantiation of previous testimony given at the first trial. Both Hynes and Millar, the principal Crown witnesses in the action, affirmed once again that no inducement had been offered them by anyone to testify in this case. A good deal of contradictory testimony was once more introduced as to whether or not Hynes was at the Newell homestead in Asphodel on the night of November 29th. Mr. Gordon asked Hynes if Margaret Newell, to whom he had been paying attention at the time, had not given him "the gate" when his evidence with regard to Clarice McColl was made public after the trial of her brother. The witness replied that for some time previous to that he had not been paying particular attention to the young lady. Later:

Mr. Gordon: "Do you know that this man may get years in the penitentiary from what you remember:"

Hynes: "Well, I've had two years ahead of him!"

William Millar, a youth with a small mouth, crinkled red hair and a forehead crossed by line lines, whose rather unmoved demeanour in the box is in sharp contrast to the mien of Hynes, a boy evidentally suffering mentally and physically from the effects of his misdeeds, admitted under questioning that he had a record of four convictions in the police court. He said that rehearsals of what the two youths were to testify at the trial of James Newell, when they gave false testimony against Clarice McColl, frequently took place in the drive shed of the Newell homestead, when questions such as might be asked them in court later were carefully asked and answered. James Newell, he said, was present at thees times, and "laughed at the jokes."

Millar was for some time employed by the McAdams family, Mrs. McAdams being a sister of James Newell and living near her father's home in Asphodel.

Clarice McColl was once more in the box and testified briefly once more as to the falsity of the evidence given by Miller and Hynes at the trial of Newell, and G. W. Hatton the Crown attorney, was put in to swear to the indictment.

The case was in jeopardy momentarily yesterday afternoon, when it was nearly being taken from the jury on account of a legal difficulty raised by Mr. Gordon, who brought up the objection that proper identification of the prisoner as the man who was the one charged in this trial, had not been made. The judge ruled that the trial proceed.

James Newell was called, and, under questioning by Mr. Cunningham, admitted that on the Sunday which had been set in the testimony as the occasion when Millar was with Miss McColl, he had accompanied her and two other friends in an automobile to the house of his sister, Mrs. McAdams, and had been with her the major portion of the afternoon and evening, with the exception of about one hour. Newell reiterated his previous testimony with regard to his own lack of foreknowledge of any evidence which might be given at his trial by Hynes.

Leslie Would of Asphodel, a neighbor of the Newells, was a new witness yesterday, but his vagueness as to dates of visits to the home threw no light on the question as to whether Hynes was or was not at the Newell homestead on the night of November 29th.

Joseph Moore caused a little digresion in the rather solemn nature of the proceedings and sent a gust of laughter through the court, when he persisted smilingly in refusing to implicate himself in the question as whether he was at the Newell homestead on certain occasions for the purpose of seeing Margaret Newell, or whether he just went to see the old folks and the family.

Albert Batten was the last witness called, and the defence rested its case, with "No reply," registered by Mr. Cunningham. The jury was dismissed for the night with the customary warning, to be on hand this morning for final consideration of the case.

ARTICLE No. 10

That auction and its attendant rules are not yet standardized throughout the country is well illustrated by the following request for decision from one of the writer's California correspondents. "During a game of auction the other night, one of the players threw his hand on the table and demanded a new deal, claiming that he had neither an ace nor face card. Another player claimed he was wrong as he should have waited till the trump was declared and then if he had neither 'ace, face nor trump,' he could have claimed a new deal. This point has caused considerable discussion and difference of opinion so please decide it for us." Needless to say, a player must play the cards as dealt and the fact that they are all under a ten spot is no reason for a new deal. There never has been such a rule and it is rather surprising to have it advanced especially in such an up-to-date State as California. It is a good example, however, of the wide-spread popularity of auction even among those who are not familiar with the ordinary rules of the game.

Another correspondent has asked about the proper scoring of "tiger clubs," a bid that the writer has never heard of. On investigating the matter, however, it was found to be a bid that was played in various parts of the West and generally scored as twelve points per trick. The principle, of course, is analogous to the old "royal spade" that was scored at nine points per trick while a "spade" was scored at two points per trick. The "Tiger club," however, has not proved popular and has now been abandoned practically everywhere. Such fancy bids should not be encouraged. They only tend to complicate and make the game more puzzling. No game can become popular and remain so unless it remains stable and conventional. Auction as now played is difficult enough to be interesting and yet not too difficult to make it unpopular, so don't encourage any fancy frills. Let well enough alone.

It is really remarkable how much interest the readers of these articles have taken in the test hands submitted last week. It goes to show that auction has become the national game and is now the king of indoor sports. Hail to the king!

Answers to Last Week's Test Hands

Hand No. 1

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — A, 8, 7, 5, 2
Clubs — J, 7, 4
Diamonds — A, 9, 7, 3
Spades — A

No score, first game. What should Z as dealer, bid with the foregoing hand? The proper bid in this hand is one no-trump, rather than one heart. The latter is a major suit and if bid, partner will support the suit if possible. That is the danger, for the suit is too weak to justify a supporting bid by partner. The hand contains three aces and is a sound no-trump bid, even with the singleton spade.

Hand No. 2

Hearts — 6, 5, 4, 3, 2
Clubs — 4, 3
Diamonds — 3, 2
Spades — 7, 4, 3, 2

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump and A passed. What should Y now bid with the foregoing hand? The proper bid by Y is two hearts. It is the weakest kind of hand but offers a better defense with hearts trumps than at no-trump. In the actual play of the hand, Y did bid two hearts and made two odd, while at no-trump Z would have gone down three tricks.

Hand No. 3

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — 4
Clubs — 10, 6
Diamonds — K, Q, J, 7
Spades — A, K, Q, 7, 5, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one spade, A two hearts, Y two spades and B and Z passed. A bid three hearts and Y and B passed. Z bid three spades, A four hearts, Y doubled and B passed. What should Z now do with the foregoing hand? Z should bid four spades. The fact that Y has helped the spade bid and also doubled four hearts would make it practically certain that Z could score four spades, game and rubber. On the other hand, it doesn't look from Z's hand that he and his partner can beat the four heart double more than a trick or so. Never give up a certain game and rubber unless sure of at least 300 points penalty.

Hand No. 4

Hearts — A, 7, 2
Clubs — K, 10, 8, 7, 2
Diamonds — Q, 8, 4
Spades — 8, 7

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one spade and all passed. What should A lead from the foregoing hand? A should lead the deuce of hearts. A lead from an ace and only two little cards against a declared suit is always sound, especially if the hand offers no other lead that is sound. The club lead is bad because if made will probably cause the loss of the king.

FARMERS NEED RAIN.

Water Problem Serious in Dummer Township—Fox Hunting Good.

WARSAW, Dec. 13.—The rain on Monday was more than welcome. The farmers are becoming uneasy about the water problem. Much more rain is needed. The ground was so frozen the water did not sink in. Some hope still to finish their ploughing.

Mr. Foster drew his last load of milk for the season to Peterboro on Saturday.

Fox hunters are having good sport. Most of them are quite successful.

A steer belonging to Mr. Wallace Anderson disappeared from a ranch near White Lake. He hoped to find it among the cattle on some other ranch, but no one has seen it.

Friday is the last bank day before the taxes must be in on Dec. 15. For Warsaw section, they are a trifle lower than last year. They are a consideration all right.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dewart, Indian River, were in the village on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bell moved to their new home in Norwood on Tuesday of last week. Mrs. Baskin accompanied them.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Darling and family moved to the farm lately owned by Nathan Bell, last week.

Miss Florence Batten is visiting her aunt in Essex.

The bazaar held by the ladies of the Methodist W.M.S. on Thursday evening was, considering other attractions, a success. There was a nice display of knit and fancy goods, aprons, and other useful articles, besides candy and apples. The basement was prettily decorated. The hot potatoes and sausage were good, and there was abundance of pie, biscuits, buns, etc.

The programme was not long, as three of those who were to have taken part were absent. It included:—"Little Old Granny of Mine," by Mrs. Charles Foster; "He Lifted Me," by Rev. F. G. Weir; song by little Eileen Miles; a recitation by Dorcas Lloyd, and a recitation by Wallace Anderson, 'David and Goliath."

Not the least of the entertainment was created by a boy who saw his little brother and another little fellow sitting in a conspicuous place and misbehaving. The older brother, with a very determined tread, marched from his own seat to where the little fellows were, took little brother by the arme and put him in another seat, sat down beside the wee lads and kept them quiet.

On Thursday evening the South Dummer U.F.O., numbering about thirty, met at Ernest MacDonald's home.

On Wednesday evening the Warsaw U.F.O. met in the Town Hall for their annual business meeting. Reports were read. New officers were elected:—President, Rufus Payne; vice-president, David Miller; secretary-treasurer, Harry Morgan; delegate to convention, David Miller—substitut if needed, David Payne.

Mr. Weir and Mr. Currie have organized a class of "Trail Rangers." The meetings are held on Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock. Last Saturday vening Dr. Munro gave the boys a very interesting talk, and ended by reminding them to be "good sports."

At the Sunday Evening Service, Rev. F. G. Weir outlined the plan or system of the teachings of Pastor Russel. Some people had desired that he should discuss the system. Quite a lot of literature from the International Bible Students is coming into the village and surrounding district.

HER NERVES SO BAD SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

Mrs. Grace Kitchen, St. George, Ont., writes: "After having a severe attack of pneumonia I was left in a weak and run down condition. My nerves were so bad I could not sleep nights, and in the day time I had terrible fainting spells, caused by my heart being weak. Finally I got so bad I had to take to my bed for weeks at a time, but one day I read about so decided to try them.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

After taking one box I felt a slight improvement. I have now taken five boxes, and have gained 35 pounds in weight. I am now more than able to do all my own housework as well as considerable outside work. I cannot recommend Milburn's H. & N. Pills too highly for those suffering as I did."

LACE GOWNS

Black lace gowns, relieved by a brilliant color such as a rose on the shoulder or a floating panel of chiffon or satin are very smart for restaurant wear.

A PUBLIC MEETING HELD AT HASTINGS

Ways and Means of Improving Conditions on the Farm.

HASTINGS, Dec. 13.—A public meeting was held in the town hall on Monday evening, when Mr. Edwin Newsome, consulting sanitary and heating engineer, of Weston, addressed the meeting.

Mr. F. C. McRae, B.S.A., of Norwood, who is the local agricultural representative, opened the meeting by introducing Mr. Newsome to those present. Mr. McRae told of the lecturer's efficient work in the position he now holds, and of his 35 years' experience as a mechanic, which was a guarantee of his efficiency. Mr. Newsome has delivered this lecture in about 400 towns in Ontario.

On taking the platform the speaker related his reason for being present. He told of the many inconveniences that the women of the farm have to contend with in the present day, stating that a farmer's wife carries an average of one ton of water daily. He also told of the increasing death rate on the farm in comparison with that in the towns and cities on account of unsanitary conditions.

About 100 lantern slides were shown, describing all kinds of water systems for farm and rural homes. Mr. McRae had charge of these and occasionally placed one in upside down which greatly amused the young members of the meeting.

The first slide proved Mr. Newsomes statements regarding unsanitary conditions on the farm, and pictured a farmhouse, barn, other buildings and pump, all on the same level.

The remainder of the slides illustrated very clearly improved brick and stone wells, force pumps, motors and hydraulic rams, water systems in farm house and plans for sewage disposal. As each slide was presented Mr. Newsome explained each one and when all were shown demonstrated on one of the pumps which had been illustrated by slides. Many who were interested remained and a great deal of interest was taken by many local members of this community.

James Brickley.

Word has been received by friends of the death in Marysville of Mr. James Brickley, who was in his fifty-ninth year.

Deceased was the son of the late John Brickley, who formerly lived five miles south of Hastings at the hamlet of Brickley, the latter place being named after the people who first settled in that part of the country.

Deceased is the last of the older members of the Brickley family tree, and three sons and one daughter survive him.

About twenty years ago Mr. Brickley moved to Marysville, where he has since made his home. Interment takes place in Marysville.

Personals.

Mr. John Londerville, of Peterboro', has been the guest of his brother, Mr. William Londerville.

Mrs. W. H. Burkholder and daughter, Ruth, of Haliburton, are the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Smith.

Warden W. M. Fowlds and Councillor T. A. Coughlan attended on Thursday night last Warden Rawlin's', of Hastings County, annual warden's banquet, held in the Quinte Hotel, Belleville.

MR. J. M. GREENE TOLD STUDENTS TO READ PAPER

Daily Newspaper is Becoming of Increasing Importance Every Year.

AT COMMENCEMENT.

Mrs. Morris Assured Collegiate Gathering Addition Would Be Begun Soon.

The Peterboro Collegiate commencement exercises took place yesterday afternoon in the Assembly Hall, before a large audience consisting of the pupils and the friends of the school. The whole programme was bright, instrctive and entertaining throughout. M

Mr. J. M. Greene, chairman of the Board of Education, presided, and in his address to the pupils gave them some valuable advice. He told the pupils that they should practice independence and self thinking, and he recommended as an aid to these along with broadmindedness, the reading of the daily papers, which gave much valuable information. The daily newspapers and magazines are becoming of ever-increasing importance to the man in business and profession. He advised each student to decide early in life his vocation, and to turn his talents to that line, so that he may become "not just one of the many in the business."

Speaking of the proposed addition to the school, Mr. Greene said that the plans of a large addition in the shape of a Vocational School were in the hands of the architects, and must only next be submitted to the City Council and the ratepayers for final endorsement. This new building will give those attending the P. C.I. a better opportunity to study for their life work

Presented Diplomas.

Mayor J. J. Turner presented the Commercial Diplomas and Mrs. W. R. Morris the Nicholls scholarships. In a short address, Mrs. Morris said that the new school would be begun next year if the council could see the need as clearly as those on the Board do.

The Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, in a speech that vibrated with advice that would carry the pupils in their business life on "that higher plane," came right down to tacts. He said that there was "middle distance" in truth, loyalty or morality. His final advice was "to be clear cut on the question of religion." He lauded our heritage and the hardy ancestors who gave it and warned the pupils that they must "carry on."

Miss M. McIntosh, B. A., of the P.C.I. staff, presented the G.A.A. prizes to the girl winners of the annual school field day. Miss Isabell Couper and Miss Catherine Rowland are respectively senior and junior girl champions of the school.

Mr. C. McKinnon, B.A., also on the staff, presented the B.A.A. prizes for the winners in the boys' events. Gordon Pogue is senior champion and Harry Doughty junior. The Rugby team received the school crest, and the team gave Mr. C. S. Browne, the popular coach, a club-bag as a token of their esteem.

Mr. Robert Fowler gave a fine valedictory address in stirring words.

The speeches were punctuated by the Boys' Glee Club and the school chorus, led by Mr. Browne.

Miss Agnes Logan rendered a piano solo, displaying her fine musical talent to an appreciative audience.

In the shack where the constable found the boys he also captured a still and a small quantity of moonshine. Woodcock will be charged with having liquor illegaly, and the Inland Revenue Department will have charge of having a still.

The hearing is set for Monday at the County Court at 11 o'clock.

Drunk on Road.

Constable Maker last night rounded up Roland Bullock of Lakefield, who is now awaiting trial on a charge of driving his car on the Buckhorn highway while he was intoxicated.

Had a Bottle.

As a period to his day's work, the constable ran in John Eastwood, proprietor of a hotel at Buckhorn, and laid a charge against him of having a part bottle of liquor in his pocket while driving a car on the highway.

These cases will be heard at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, at the County Court.

CHILDREN'S GIFTS YOU CAN MAKE

"Tied Dyeing" Is An Art Which Comes From Orient.

Quite naturally the children will want to make gifts for each other. Undoubtedly there is more love and affection tucked into the made gift than any other. Among the gifts that a child can make are those done with "tied dyeing." This process comes from the Orient, where the bandana handkerchief first got its name.

A true bandana handkerchief was tied expertly by a Hindoo girl, who was called a Bandhani, and then dipped in red dye. When the string was untied a pattern in white on red was found to have been wrought.

Squares of muslin or linen are the first requirement. If a child does not like to hem, white handkerchiefs already hemmed may be used. Two or three colors of dyes should be made up, each a strong color. Pint jars will do to keep the dyes in. Dilute the dye in small bowls, a bowl for each color.

The process of tying the handkerchief may be done in one or two ways. Fold the square and pick up a portion in the fingers. Wind string tightly around this "point" of cloth, and tie and cut the string. Several points can be tied in one square. Each time all four thicknesses are caught, that the little pattern thus formed will be repeated four times. After experimenting you will find out how to pick up the cloth so as to produce a square, a circle, or an oblong shape.

The other method suggested is to wind he point and, without tying and cutting the string, proceed to the next point. This is the method used in the Orient, the unwinding, when one comes to that, being greatly facilitated.

This part, the winding, takes the most atience on the part of the children.

The dyeing is more thrilling. Dip the entire handkerchief in clean water and wring it out until amost dry. Then dip the tied points in different colors, in such combinations that you think will be pleasing. From experience the writer suggests a few color schemes. Red, orange and yellow, will be gay. Pinks and lavenders combine nicely. Blue and blue greens, and green will be effective. Remember that except where tied, one color will "run" into another sometimes resulting in a muddy or unpleasant color.

Now wring out all the liquid you can and untie the knots, taking great care not to let one point touch another. Your pattern made by the points is often amusing and surprising. Be sure to hold the square until dry, over heat if it is available, as for instance the radiator the oven or the register. If hung on a line while wet or laid on a radiator, streaks will result, spoiling nice work. When quite dry press out.

When working with dyes, other gifts suggest themselves. A half dozen handkerchiefs, each a different color in pastel tints, makes a dainty present. A large silk handkerchief can be tied and dyed for a scarf. Picot the edges of a yard and a half of crepe de chine and tie and dye it. A very stunning scarf will result.

Children can make cunning Christmas cards by pasting Christmas seals on correspondence cards, and lettering a simple greeting beside or under the seal. Of course if they want to draw or paint the necessary decoration, so much the better. The result, though not perhaps perfect in execution, will please the recipient none the less.

Scrap books on stiff muslin, pink or blue with "picked" edges are pretty gifts for children and can be made by children. Color pictures from magazines and ads, pictures of animals, or of children playing games, all these are interesting and can be prettily arranged on the pages.

For the kiddies who are fond of dolls, or animals, the mother who has imagination can make several unusual gifts, by making characters from story books. Using the illustration of that old favorite as a guide, Peter Rabbit himself can step out of the pages, stuffed with cotton and wearing his little jacket of blue. Also there's "B'rer Rabbit," Joe Chandler Harrie has so kindly created for us.

Among the characters for dolls for wee maids, are many, many well-known girlies. Little Red Riding Hood seems to come first. Then there is Alice in Wonderland, and Little Miss Muffet, and the Queen of Hearts, and Old Mother Goose, and ever so many others to be found in the Mother Goose rhymes.

And lest we forget, there's Puss in Boots and the Little Pig who went to market, and Old Mother Hubbard and her dog.

For several of these characters an ordinary doll can be used, and properly costumed. Some young folks will enjoy crepe paper dollies, especially if they can be dressed and undressed.

And don't let's forget a Rabbit slumber dolly for the littlest fellow. It is made of a wolly scarf. Fold the scarf double, fringes together. At the other end pull out two long pieces for ears and tie with string. Make a nose of thread, and shoe buttons for eyes. Stuff the head with cotton, tie again for the neck. Short pieces for paws are tied next. Then the long sides are sewed up, stuffed with cotton and sewed up under the fringe. A gingham apron is a good dress for this rabbit. What could be nicer to cuddle, hug and sleep on?

HAD BOILS ALL OVER HIM

There is only one way to get rid of boils and that is by going right to the seat of the trouble—the blood—as the bad blood must be made pure before the boils will disappear.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

cleanses the system and removes all the foul matter from the blood in a way that few medicines will do.

Mrs. Chas. Rankin, Bulyea, Sask., writes:—"A few years ago my husband had a terrible time with boils. On one arm he had 16 between his elbow and wrist; five on the back of his neck, and several more on different parts of his body. He tried everything he could think of, but got no relief until he took Burdock Blood Bitters, and to his surprise it completely relieved him of his boils in a very short time."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past 46 years; be sure you get it when you ask for it; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FESTIVAL OF CAROLS AT THE CONSERVATORY

There was a filled hall at the Conservatory of M[illegible] last night, for the "Festival of Carols," presented by students of the Conservatory, under direction of Mrs. W. McK. Bingham. The young people and children taking part acquitted themselves in a manner reflecting great credit upon themselves and their instructress The atmosphere of the rather lengthy entertainment was a Christmas one, and the merry Christmas idea was carried out in the majority of the musical selections, in the decorations and setting of the stage, and in the Christmas carols that interspersed the entertainment at intervals. The Conservatory orchestra, which opened the programme with a bright overture, and played several selections during the evening, also gave a very attraacatie rendition of "Around the Christmas Tree."

The overture was followed by a prologue, with Miss Geraldine Collins, a graceful figure in flowing white draperies and long angel sleeves, enacting the role of the Spirit of Christmas, and singing in clear, sweet voice; "Night of Nights." Miss Collins accompaniments were played by her teacher, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park. A procession and chorus by a number of children circling the hall with lighted candles and singing "The First Noel," followed. The procession was headed by Miss Helen Ross, and a band of tiny boys in white suits, singing in clear treble, the chorus which was joined in by the assembled white-robed angels on the stage, and followed by "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing."

Scenes in which the Yule-tide spirit was paramount were the "Scene in Merrye England" in which a group of waits sang their merry carols outside an old English home. In this brief scene, in which those taking part were robed in appropriate old English costumes, Rhoda Cheyne took the part of the father, Agnes Lackie that of the mother, while Muriel Porter, Donald Bert and Harry Marsh were the children. The waits singing lustily were Messrs. Shannon, MacPherson, Jarvis and Jack Ellison. Messrs. Peterson, Cormack and Roy Rome, played respectively the flute, cornet and violin.

"A Visit from St. Nicholas" was a jolly little pantomime which illustrated a visit from the good old patron saint of children on Christmas Eve, after the family had retired to rest on rather uncomfortable looking couches contrived on the stage. Santa came down the chimney in his suit of red with its eiderdown bands and his bushy white whiskers. He filled the stockings hung up in readiness under watchful eye of a wakeful paterfamilias, attired in chilly white gown and cap. Off stage the narrator, Miss Helen Ross, called to Santa's jolly steeds. Actors in this brief bit were Catherine Millard, the mother, Viola Martin, the father, and children, Viola Dobbin and Mildred Dobbin, Santa Claus was played by Geraldine McAuliffe. Miss Olga Fowler acted as accompanist.

"The Coming of the Christ-Child" was a very pretty scene, with Miss Mary Wood, in attractive rich voice, acting as Narrator, Miss Geraldine Collins singing as a lovely white-robed angel, a chorus of angelic voices of vocal pupils of the Conservatory, and several of Mrs. Bingham's pupils acting as Shepherds.

The final scene in the series which interspersed the varied entertainment was that of "The Manger of Bethlehem," in which the impressive happening of The Holy Night is briefly indicated. The role of Mary, in pretty blue draperies, was enacted by Ethel Cooper, that of Joseph by Agnes Lackie and of the three Kings, in appropriate costume, by Geraldine McAuliffe, Iva Gilbank, and Helen Ross.

Brief interludes in the programme were the clever readings by a number of youthful pupils of Mrs. Bingham, Iva Gilbank reciting "Ye Olde English Christmas", Ethel Cooper giving "Santa Claus," and Catherine Millard rendering "Madeline Vercheres". Miss Irene Breckenridge's reading of "The Oxen," the poem written by Thomas Hardy around the beautiful legend that ,"at twelve o'clock on Christmas night, the oxen kneel in their stalls", was preceded by the chiming of the twelve bells.

A very beautiful and outstanding rendition of the vocal solo, "Nazareth," was given by Mr. Douglas Carlisle, with a full orchestral accompaniment, which made a fine instrumental background to his splendid resonant tones.

A number of separate selections were given by pupils of the various departments of the Conservatory, which included a cunning Santa Claus chorus by tots in Miss Mary Harstone's kindergarten class, piano solos by Miss Kathleen Sutton, who played Raff's "La Fileuse," Miss Mildred Morphet, Miss Margaret Widdess, who played Wachs' "La Parisienne," and Master Ashton Fife, a clever young boy who played with a good deal of attractive verve "Moceau Wollen Kaupt." A little song and two brief piano solos were also given by three of Miss Mathilde Masson's pupils: Mary Brooks, Marjorie Bowler and Viola Dobbin; Eric Westbye played a cornet solo, Billy Widdess gave a clarinet solo, several of Miss Edwina Palmer's boy pupils: Max Warne, Ralph Clark, Stanley Dawson and Harold Johnston, gave violin selections, and two of Mr. Harry Wagner's pupils earned encores with their fine playing of Hawaiian guitar numbers. These were given by Lionel Chapman and Donald Payne.

The hit of the evening, perhaps, was little Moir Park, a tiny, white-clad boy, who piped in a shrill treble, "No, John, No," his very funny little manner and innocent demeanor earning him just as much applause as either of his musical parents have ever received for a solo.

The singing of carols which made a pretty portion of the programme included "While Shepherds Watched," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Silent Night! Holy Night!" and the final lovely "Adeste Fidelis."

The accompanist for the major section of the entertainment was Miss Marguerite Rome.

KAISERLINGS TOO DUMB FOR RULERS

Monarchy In Germany Will Never Be Restored.

By CARL D. GROAT.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—(United Press).—General Baron von Schoenaich, Kaiserin Hermine's kinsman, believes that the monarchy will never be restored in Germany, because the princelings of the 22 former ruling families are more or less a dumb lot.

General von Schoenaich, interviewed by the United Press, couched his opinion in somewhat milder language, but nevertheless made it quite emphatic that he did not esteem highly the brains of the royal offspring.

"I believe," he said, "that the restoration of the monarchy in Germany would be frustrated, if for no other reason, solely from the fact that the princely families do not possess a single head of more than middle greatness."

Schoenaich, leader of the new republican defense organization in Germany "Republic Banner Schwarz—Rot-Gold," revealed that the old officers of the Kaiser regime have put a formal social boycott on him, and that he has on more than one occasion received threatening letters because he is an out-and-out republican.

He believes thoroughly that the republic will stand.

But he made it plain that foreign nations have it in their power to make or mar the republic. If the present conciliatory spirit toward Germany will be maintained, then the republic will stand, in the opinion of General von Schoenaich.

"I regard," he said, "the English monarchical form good and I believe that, if our old monarchical constitution had developed organically up to the form of the English, our former monarchs would still be sitting on their thrones.

"Our monarchs, however, always prevented this development and thus they themselves buried the monarchy.

"Then these 22 monarchs abandoned their thrones without a fight in the hour of Germany's greatest need. In my opinion, the monarchical idea in Germany was thereby so discredited that only the democratic republic could come as the state form. I became a republican purely through sober reflection.

"The onl ything which permitted the idea of re-introduction of the monarchy in Germany to flourish is the fact that the republic hitherto was unable to obtain in international negotiations a modification of the severities of the Versailles Treaty.

"The republic itself, however, contributed to this situation by committing the mistake of allowing monarchistic employees without distinction to remain in offiee.

"The monarchistic idea in Germany is nourished by those strong economic groups who believe that a monarchy would treat them, in the matter of taxes, better than does the republic.

"It may be remarked in passing, however, that the republic hitherto has treated these circles with velvet gloves, while at the same time it permitted workmen to suffer.

"At the beginning of this year, the republic was in danger of being overthrown, through the so-called 'fatherlandish circles.'

"The 'Reichsbanner Schwartz-Rot-Gold,' which today constitutes a power compelling respect, dissipated this danger at the last moment. This danger, I must point out, could arise anew if Germany does not now succeed in putting its business into full swing, since the monarchistic agitators understand very skilfully how to exploit the necessities of the people. Every political and economic success of the democratic republic is a blow for the fascisti. The foreign countries therefore have it in their power to strengthen the German republic inwardly."

I asked him what his personal experiences have been with his former comrades as result of his open esponsal of the republic cause.

"My old comrades declared a ban against me when I began fighting publically for democracy and pacifism. Naturally, I did not let this influence me and I have only fought the harder since then. I have sometimes received threatening letters; the newspapers of the right side take sometimes occasion to be rowdyish, but this leaves me quite cold. I always think of the old proverb, 'Whoever curses is wrong.'"

A TRIP TO TOYLAND

By E. A. MATHIS.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—(United Press).—Southern Thuringia and the medieval walled city of Nuernberg is ready for Xmas.

It has poured this Yuletide a wealth of toys and baubles into all corners of the earth. Out of the mountains of Thuringia and the factories of the Bavarian city, this season there went a new quality of work—dolls and animals and railroads and whatnot—built better, thanks to a stabilized currency and better times in the Vaterland.

Toyland has been toyland these many years. War dimmed its splendour, but did not halt the clever hands of men and women and children, whose lives have been dedicated to spreading joy from toyland. The entire population of Thuringian villages has worked in the toy trade for generations. By tradition, the father became a carver of animals and all sorts of wooden figures, while mother sews the clothes for the dolls and little Fritz and fair-haired Gretchen are busily plastering and coloring, practically as soon as their little fingers are able to hold a brush. Nuernberg's experience is still older, for as far back as the 16th century it was the chief provider of toys in Europe.

The economic difficulties in Germany at the beginning of this year—the plans for Christmas are generally fixed in January—were responsible for the fact that only a few real novelties will be among the presents which Santa Claus, Father Christmas, or however he may be called, will distribute among his young friends on both hemispheres.

But, as the year went on, the ever firmer stabilization of the mark made purchase abroad of raw materials possible. Thus, for example, the little motor cars for babies are no longer cars which bear only a small resemblance to a motor car, but in shape and color and all the refinements of their making they look like models of the luxurious limousine or phaeton of a millionaire.

Still, there will be a few novelties from Toyland. For the girls there will be the "squeeze doll." So far a doll had only beautiful soft hair, but the porcelain face, however cleverly it was painted, was cold and rigid. The "squeeze dolls" jaws are made of rubber, one can pinch them, one can squeeze them, and the face will smile or grin or weep and look just like a real baby's face. The arms, too, are made of the same soft material and will bend to every pressure by the little mother.

Boys will now be enabled to build a Zeppelin or at least the skeleton of a dirigible, with the materials supplied by metal building cases.

These two novelties are much admired by German children who throng the toy exhibitions in the great warehouses. But they will hardly find them "under the Christmas tree." Most German fathers think that they are too expensive. The new dolls cost from 17 marks upward, and as to the metal building cases, the amount needed to model a Zep would be at least a couple of hundred marks. The other toys are much cheaper, though they cost 50 to a 100 per cent. more than in pre-war time.

The German revolution caused militaristic toys to become rare.

Some of the great firms which every year produced millions of tin soldiers have given up the fabrication and have turned to trinkets. In many Berlin toy shops, soldiers are not available. A boom for soldiers was only noticeable—strangely enough—in the workers' suburb, Neu Koellin, where apparently young communists keep up the old Potsdam traditions. Children's uniforms, once most coveted, have nearly completely disappeared, as the mothers are no longer anxious to have their children look like a miniature of the Kaiser.

The former court circles have greatly cut down their expenses, so that the toy shops in the Markgrafen Strasse patronized by the nobility went bankrupt and had to close. Nevertheless, the princelings still enjoy enough toys to fill a couple of rooms.

OMEMEE CHURCH ANNUAL BAZAAR

Sale of Work by Ladies of Methodist Church Was Well Patronized.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE.

OMEMEE, Dec. 12.—The Women's Missionary Society annual Bazaar of the Methodist Church, which was held on Wednesday afternoon was well patronized. The Sunday School room was prettily decorated for the event with Christ-Christmas bells, etc.

The bazaar was officially opened promptly at 4 o'clock, by the Rev. E. W. Rowland.

The fancy work booth which was in charge of Mrs. J. Shields, Mrs. E. MacPherson, Mrs. A. Rutherford and Mrs. Cecil Corneil, contained a wonderful display of useful articles for wear and adornment for the home and the ladies in charge were kept busy serving the many eager customers.

"Aunt Jane's Country Store" with its tempting array of home-made bread, tarts, pies, buns, muffins, chickens, head cheese, pickles, cream and a large assortment of vegetables, drew the quarters and dimes from the hand bag of many a housewife. This booth was in charge of the Misses Eva Race and Lila Parsons.

The Wide Awake Mission Band had charge of the candy booth under the management of Mrs. E. W. Rowland and Miss A. Doube and the display of home-made candy put up in dainty baskets was enough to tempt even Santa Claus.

The fish pond was as usual a big attraction for the kiddies and fishing was good for some time, many a wonderful catch being reported. Mrs. Robert Williamson was guardian of the fish pond.

Tea was served to the many visitors of the afternoon and evening. The menu being a variety of salads, bread and butter, pie, cake, tarts and tea. The tea room was in charge of Mrs. Charles Ivory, Mrs. G. Haygarth, Mrs. Bradburn, who were assisted by many W.M.S. ladies and several young ladies who waited on the table.

Mrs. J. Widdiss was "The Lady of a thousand pockets, her dress being covered with little bright colored chintz pockets each of which contained something amounting to 10c and which sold for that amount.

The lady was quickly relieved of her burden and in the early hours of the bazaar was without a pocket.

Mrs. Charles Rutherford was the efficient cashier for the event, the proceeds of which was considerably over $100.00.

Women's Institute.

The regular monthly meeting of the Omemee Branch of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jermyn Palmer. There was an average attendance of members present, also a number of visitors.

The most important feature of the programme was an interesting and splendid report of the recent Institute convention held in Toronto, given by the delegate, Miss Ettie Jewett. At the conclusion of her report, a copy of resolutions which came from various branches of this organization, and were presented in Toronto, were submitted to the gathering, and later received some comment

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Miss Jewett for her excellent report.

Recitations were given by Misses Loraine Irwin and Frances MacPherson, to the pleasure of those present.

A number of willing workers bound a quilt which was quilted at a recent meeting.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which the hostess served refreshments, and all enjoyed a social half-hour.

DOUKHOBORS LOOKING FOR PETER VEREGIN

Proposed Leader Has Not Yet Arrived in This Country.

NELSON, B. C., Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Has a six foot 4 1-4 inch Russian, of huge shoulder breadth and a booming voice, probably clean shaven, arrived lately at any of Canada's Atlantic Ports?

This fits the description of Peter Veregin, Jr., whom Doukohobors have by symbol declared will be their King and whose name will be presented to a business session set for Tuesday for the actual election.

The minority who might be described as intellectuals insists that the young administrator has not left Russia and that he will not do so now having replied to the cable informing him of his fathers' death.

On the other hand, it is contended that young leader is in Canada and it is said an invitation had been extended to him to visit this Dominion shorly before his father's death. Young Peter left Canada at outs with the then administration of community, including his fathers. At that time he asserted he would come back only if it was a general wish.

Object To Municipal Tax.

TORONTO, December 13. — At the first meeting of the Statutes Revision Commission, presided over by Mr. Justice Middleton, H. T. Ross, secretary of the Canadian Bankers' Association to-day presented an argument against the double taxation on banks, one tax going to the province and the other to the municipality. The banks, he said, objected to the muncipal tax.

Sir Thomas White speaking for the trust companies, made a similar representation.

There is no floor that can compare with a Bruce Oak Floor; it has character, beauty, and it will last for all time.

If you lack Oak Floors in your present home, there is a special thickness made to lay over the old worn floor.

We will be glad of an opportunity of telling you more about Oak Floors as related to your individual requirements.

PETES DEFEAT PRESTON SENIORS MEET PARKDALE IN SEMI-FINALS

Outplayed O.H.A. Senior Team at Toronto Arena Except in First Period—Tied Score and Won By 3-2 in the Last Ten Minutes.

CAME FROM BEHIND TWICE.

Game Was Close and Exciting — Petes Stiff at Outset From Effect of Niagara Falls Battle and the Lack of Practice.

The Peterboro hockey club demonstrated last night that its victory over Niagara Falls was no fluke by beating Preston seniors in the S.P.A. series at Toronto Arena by 3 goals to 2.

By virtue of the victory the Petertory squad go into the semi-finals of the series, their next opponents being the Parkdale Canoe Club, with whom they clash on Tuesday night.

Last evening's battle was a thriller with the Petes having to come from behind twice to tie the score, and finally taking the lead with seven minutes left to play.

Preston, with their experience in the Senior series, the advantage of more practice, victories over Port Colborne and Galt, and the presence of such stars as "Dad" Ashley, Gunner Arnott and Skelly on their lineup, were favored to win but the fighting spirit of the Petes ultimately triumphed.

Feeling the effects of Monday's game, and with McLeod, Bailey and Rose under the weather, the blue and white worked under a handicap, and early in the game had a difficulty in keeping going, but they hit their stride in the second period, and for the balance of the game, except for the first few minutes, had the edge on the westerners.

They outplayed Preston by a wide margin in the second period and with any luck around the nets would have cinched the game before the last chapter opened.

By periods it was 1-0 for Preston, 1-1 and 3-2, Peterboro getting the last two goals after the Ashley-Arnott crew had taken the lead at the beginning of the last period.

Preston Good.

Preston trotted out a big, fast, and experienced team, and were much tougher adversaries than Niagara Falls. Their defence was particularly strong, and which ever combination of Ashley, Skelly and Talbot was used there was a difficult proposition to negotiate. Ashley, the former Wiarton and Stratford star with the pro scouts on the side lines looking him over was used both on the defence and on the forward line playing on the wing for the last two periods. He turned in a good game in both positions but looked more at home on the defence. Talbot checked well and Skelly proved a fine puck carrier his goal in the last period being the best individual effort of the night. Gunner Arnott formerly of Belleville, and Clark were the pick of the forward line. Preston used two goalers, and both were clever. It was the intention to send Farrell, who started in the nets back for the third period, but Schmaltz performed so sensationally in the second session, that he was left in to finish the game.

The Peterboro Players.

Every Peterboro player did his bit for the cause and all of them are entitled to a share of the glory of a hard fought victory. Dwyer blocked cleverly as usual. He had plenty of work, especially in the first period, and his fine performance helped materially in steadying the Petes. McLeod, although suffering from a bad cold, and Parker checked and rushed well, both figuring in plays that ended in a score, and Halpin did yeoman work when sent out as relief defence man.

Up in front the player who got the biggest hand from the crowd was "Shorty" Burgess. The little Maritimer is always aggressive, and last night he showed more speed than at any other occasion since he first donned a Peterboro uniform. It was a fine performance and the fans applauded him heartily.

Bailey played under a handicap as he was ill before the game but gave a good account of himself, while Collins and Ranger turned in better games than they did on Monday—good as they were then. Ray Rose, who has been bothered with a lame back, was used a lot and he improved as the game progressed, playing bang-up hockey in the last period, when he figured in the tieing goal and scored the winner himself.

Foley also gave a fine account of himself at left wing when he subbed for Ranger.

The game was full of excitement especially in the last two periods and the crowd although not large was very enthusiastic. Incidentally the Petes got the bulk of the support and they have installed themselves as prime favorites in Toronto, the Queen City fans realizing that their lack of practice is a big handicap, which has been overcome only by determination and persistence and a fighting spirit that refuses to admit defeat.

The Line Up.

Preston—
Goal: Farrell Schmaltz.
Defence: Ashley, Talbot.
Centre: Arnott.
Right wing: Hodgins.
Left wing: Clark.
Subs.: Skelly, Kreason, Somers.

Peterboro:
Goal: Dwyer.
Defence: Parker, McLeod.
Centre: Collins.
Right wing: Bailey.
Subs.: Halpin, Burgess, Foley, Rose, Salmon.
Referee: Harold Farlow, Toronto.

The First Period.

There was not much to choose between the teams in the first period, which was the slowest of the three. Both goalers had considerable work to do, Dwyer more than Farrell, because while the Petes had a big share of the play, their shooting was ragged, while the red shirts pumped them in hard and accurately. Both teams were using the same system, the forwards falling back to help out the defence, with the result that the attack almost invariably had to deal with a five-man rear guard, and it was a tough job breaking through. Honours were even for seven minutes until big Dad Ashley ambled up the wing and let drive a high, fast shot from the red line that beat Dwyer for the first counter of the night. It was a beautiful effort by the ex-Stratford star. Peterborough 0, Preston 1.

Stung by this reverse, the Petes began to speed up their attack, and rushes by Parker and McLeod were dangerous more than once, while Bailey, Collins and Ranger and the rest of the crew worked their heads off to even the count. They gave Farrell some busy moments but could not beat him, while Dwyer was invincible at the other end of the rink, making some great stops..

No Luck in Second.

The second period was much faster. The Petes opened up fast and had a big edge throughout the twenty minutes but tough breaks around the net prevented them from doing better than tieing the score. Schmaltz was between the posts for Preston in this period and his work was sensational. Half a dozen times he prevented goals by throwing himself across the mouth of the net. Parker was through once, to miss by inches, and Halpin almost scored a moment after. Finally, after 6 1-2 minutes, Bailey worked through on a nice rush, and although Schmaltz dropped to his knees and blocked the shot, Collins batted in the rebound, sewing up the game. Peterboro 1, Preston 1.

The pall for the next few minutes was hectic. The blue shirts, breaking fast and in line, were keeping Preston busy and half a dozen times Schmaltz saved counters on close-in plays. Collins and Talbot got into a jam in one of these raids and were chased, and a little later Bailey drew a penalty for tripping Ashley and for a minute the Petes played four men to five, holding their own until the sides were even again. Then they launched another offensive that kept Schmaltz as busy as a bootlegger on Christmas eve. They could not beat him, although everybody had a peck at him before the period ended. Bailey was hurt and had to retire for repairs and Burgess caught the eye of the crowd with his speed and aggressiveness when he went on right wing. The Petes pressed to the end of the session and were lucky not to have been ahead when they skated off for the second breathing spell.

Preston showed a new lease of life to start the third period with Ashley up on the forward line and Skelly on the defence they uncorked a bunch of speed to open the final chapter and when Skelly worked through for a beautiful goal after one minute play, putting Preston in the lead, the western supporters sat back to enjoy themselves. Skelly's play was a rink length rush in which he stickhandled around a couple of forwards, tricked Parker by taking a pass and went in close to beat Dwyer, the puck glancing off the blade of the goalies stick into the net. Peterboro 1, Preston 2.

Down a goal and with nineteen minutes to go the Petes refused to crack and the excess speed with which the westerners opened the period soon disappeared as the blue shirts fought determinedly to climb up on even terms.

McLeod and Skelly drew five minnes for mixing it and When Foley went to the side for holding the Petes were a man shy for two minutes, but held their own until all the absentees were back. Burgess was going great guns at this stage and the crowed cheered him repeatedly.

Ten minutes of the period had gone when the determination of the Peterboro squad was rewarded by the tieing counter. It was a snappy play that put the teams on even footing. Parker starting a rush and passing to Rose at the blue line. Rose in turn passed to Ranger and the left wing's beautiful spot from the side beat Schmaltz completely. Peterboro, 2; Preston, 2.

The Petes continued to press and three minutes after Rose scored the winning counter. McLeod pulled off a nice rush and in the mix up near Preston's nets that followed slipped the rubber out to Rose who batted in the "million dollar" goal.

Then the Petes dropped back to a Kitty-bar-the-door defence and stayed off the desperate sallies of the Preston team until the final bell.

GIRL ATHLETE TO SWIM THE CHANNEL

Failed Last Summer But Will Make Another Attempt in 1925.

PARIS, December 13. — The "Villa of Cross-Channel Swimmers" is the sign that has been hung out above the door of a ten room wooden building on the extreme point of Cape Griz-Nez., France's most advanced point of land into the English Channel.

So numerous have been the attempts at cross-channel swimming in recent years, and so limited are the accommodations of the two small hotels overlooking the straits at Gris-Nez, where most of the swimmers take the water, that William T. Burges, who swam the channel in 1911, has purchased a villa at the Cape with the intention of placing it at the disposal of future candidates for channel honours.

Mrs. Harrison of Buenos Aires has rented four rooms in the villa where she and a daughter Lillian who made an unsuccessful attempt to swim the channel last summer will take up their residence next July and await a favorable oportunity to try it again.

Miss Harrison is at present in London attending a physical culture school and training in view of her 1925 campaign.

Burgess who has accompanied most of the successful and unsuccessful channel swimmers of late years is of the opinion that Miss Harrison can do it. She was going strong this year when she met with an unfortunate accident and with one more year's training he is confident that the Anglo-Argentine girl will be the first woman to negotiate the treacherous straits.

BELMONTS TAKE LAST GAME AND ANOTHER TITLE

Quakers Fought Desperately and Had Chance to Win in Last Inning.

SCORE WAS 17-16.

Wind-up of Softball League Attracted Crowd to the Arena.

Belmont Club's team was last night declared winners of the City Softball championship by defeating the Quaker Oats team before a large crowd of wild fans at the Arena by the score of 17 runs to 16.

The game was not a fast one by any means but on account of it being the final fixture it caused much excitement for fans whose hoarse "hurrah" and deep "moans" could be heard for blocks around the Arena.

The fixture was jammed full of both good and bad baseball on the part of both teams and first one team would have the lead and then the other. Belmonts lost the toss and went to bat first, scoring two runs in the first inning off Carruthers before he had settled down to business. Quakers called to register in the first but they made the count 2 to 1 in the second and took the lead in the third when they chased three runs across.

See-Saw Struggle

Quakers came back strong in their half of the fourth and added another one to their list and at the time it looked as if they were going to snatch the title from the Haskill crew, but the Belmonts were not to be kept down and in the next frame they evened up the score on a double two errors and a walk. Quakers took the lead once more in their half of the fifth when Ash tripled with two on and later scored on a wild peg. The score now stood 8 to 5 for the Quakers but the Belmonts went one in front in the next frame, and then made it 16 to 8 in the seventh when the Porridge makers blew to pieces Heckman pulled the trick in this inning when he placed one over the left field boards for a homer, two men crossing the plate before him. Quakers went scoreless in the sixth, but in the seventh they tallied once and in the eighth the Belmonts chalked up two more to their credit. It served as if the Belmonts had the game nicely tucked away, but when the Quakers got to Holyman for six hits including a homer by Graham and a double by Ralph and seven runs in the eighth it looked as if they were going to take the championship from the Belmonts. Haskill and his gang went out in order in the ninth but the Porridge crew made another desperate bid for the laurels in the final stanza when they had men on second and third and two out and Meyette at bat. It was a a thrilling moment and the Belmonts were all shaking in their boots and praying that Harrison who had relieved Holyman of the burden in the last inning might strike this man out. A little single would have done wonders here but the break didn't come and Meyette ended the game when he drove a hot one into Lowes' hands for the third out.

Pitching Advantage

Belmonts had a big advantage over the Quakers when they had two pitchers to the Quakers one. Carruthers pitched the whole game for the losers while Harrison and Holyman took turn about on the firing line for the winners.

Harrison started and was going fine until the third when he was touched up pretty hard. He got up luckily in the fourth inning when the Quakers only registered once but when the first three men up in the fifth had crossed the plate, Has kill and his warriors held a conference and it was finally decided that Holyman would go in and finish the affair. He shut out the opponents in the fifth an sixth, but in the seventh and eighth he blew little worse than Harrison had in the fifth, and eight runs were piled up against them. Neither team scored in the last frame.

Strain on Carruthers

Carruthers pitched his third game in three days and the hard strain showed on him last night as he had much trouble in finding the plate. Besides being a little wild he was hit fairly hard and his team mates gave him rather ragged backing at critical times in the game, pulling off several bone head plays that accounted for several of the Belmont's runs. On the evening's play the Belmonts had a slight edge over the Quakers.

ROSENEATH TEAM WAS BANQUETTED

League Champions and Winners of Sam Clarke Trophy.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 13.—The Alnwick Township Council honored the Roseneath baseball team, champions of the Northumberland C ounty League for the year 1924, and winners of the Sam Clarke trophy cup, by tendering them a banquet at the home of Mrs. Lily Turner.

The tables were sumptuously laid in Mrs. Turner's dining-room, with the large silver cup having a conspicuous place. One of the main features of the bill of fare was roast duck, which everyone enjoyed to the limit. After all had partaken of the many good things to their hearts' content, cigars were passed, a treat by the council.

Dr. A. G. Armstrong, president of the baseball club, acted as toastmaster in his usual efficient manner.

The first toast was one to the King, to which all responded by rising and singing the National Anthem. Reeve Thomas Honey proposed a toast to the baseball club after a few chosen remarks regarding the honor which the team had brought to this village and the surrounding country. He mentioned that the reason they had won the cup was because they were the superior team and had also a battery second to none in the league.

Mr. M. Davey, official scorer of the team, responded to this toast in a very fitting manner, saying that he thought a lot of the success of the team was due to the co-operative spirit of the players. He said that one would never hear a player criticized by another, but rather all would sympathize with the man who had the misfortune to make an error.

Mr. C. W. Varcoe, vice-president of the club, proposed a toast to the president, Dr. Armstrong, and the secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. C. Moore, manager of the local branch of the Union Bank, as a tribute to the untiring efforts of these two officials. He said a good share of the wins in the games was partly due to their work. This was responded to by the president.

A toast to the ladies who had served at the banquet so well was proposed by Dr. Armstrong, and responded to on behalf of the ladies by Messrs. Wm. Montgomery and Wilfrid Davey.

Mr. C. W. Varcoe, on behalf of the club, thanked the council for the honor they had conferred on them, and moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Council Board. This was seconded by Mr. Tom Bates, and on behalf of the council Mr. Gordon Parker made a suitable response.

Short addresses were given by Councillors Wm. Arnold, Herman Blodgett and Earl Shearer, also the clerk, Mr. John McMillan, in which they paid a tribute to the team's success, and said they hoped the team would duplicate the feat of winning the cup in 1925.

After the conclusion of the toasts the guests retired to the living-room where music was supplied by a five-piece orchestra of the ball team and all joined in singing familiar songs.

Those present of the council were: Reeve Thos. Honey, Councillors Wm. Arnold, Herman Blodgett, Earl Shearer and Gordon Parker, also Clerk John McMillan; of the baseball club: Dr. A. G. Armstrong, president; C. W. Varcoe, vice-president; J. C. Moore, secretary-treasurer; Barton Thackeray, captain; M. Davey, official scorer; Clifford Leach, Fred. Turner, Wm. Montgomery, Tom Bates, Wilfrid Davey, Frank Shearer and Grenville Dunnett.

$30,000,000 NOTE OFFERED BY C.P.R.

Arrangements Were Made to Give Private Investors First Chance.

MONTREAL, Que, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press.)— Wide distribution seems to be the keynote of the Canadian Pacific $30,000,000 note certificate offering. It has been pointed out by those in touch with the Syndicate that, at the outset, arrangements were made to give private investors the opportunity of participating in the issue and to this end arrangements were made with a view to placing certificates in the hands of dealers throughout every province in Canada. They may of course, also be purchased through any branch of any of the chartered banks.

Reports concerning the first two or three days of offering indicated that the issue is quickly finding a good reception. Several dealers have stated that the demand may soon prove to be greater than the supply and in the meantime investors are being urged to place orders with as little delay as possible.

The success of the present offering, of course, is due to the unique position occupied by the Canadian Pacific Railways. Nevertheless, it is gratifying to know that Canadian investors can finance undertakings of this character and size.

During the war years, Canada surprised the world by finding a market in Canada for such huge accounts of its war and victory bonds. It was felt, however, that after the war a time pressure was removed, Canadian securities would gradually drift to England and the United States. The success of the peace-time refunding loans dispelled this feeling in so far as government obligations were concerned. The present offering of the Canadian Railway note certificates strengthened the opinion that Canada is well able to take care of the bulk of its important financing at home.

EGGS SOLD FOR 65-70c. ON THE MARKET TO-DAY

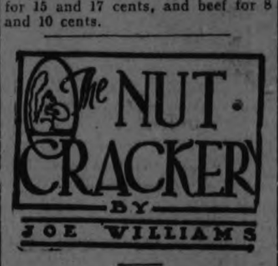
Turkeys Went For 30 and 35 Cents Per Pound and Some Ladies Asked 25c. For Chickens.

Buying on the farmers' market was brisk this morning, with chickens, turkeys and geese in abundance. The prices of poultry were about the same as last week, turkeys being sold from 30 to 35 cents per pound, chickens from 20 to 25, and geese ranged from 22 to 25 cents, and ducks sold from 25 to 28 cents.

Butter could be bought for 35c, while some ladies were asking as high as 40c. Eggs started in at 70c, but later dropped to 65c, and one lady was selling her stock at 62c per dozen.

Downstairs there were Christmas trees in abundance at 25, 50 and 75 cents apiece. Hardwood cut in stove lengths went for $8 to $9 per cord, while a few were asking as high as $10.

Potatoes were 80c and 85c a bag and turnips sold at 50c a bag. Cabbage sold at 10 and 15 cents a head and beets and carrots went for 20 cents a peck. There was plenty of pork in front and hind sections for 15 and 17 cents, and beef for 8 and 10 cents.



Despite the popular impression that movie queens have learned everything, we note Mr. Chaplin's lady must return to school.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

The Grand Opera House was well filled last evening for the presentation of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," with Mary Pickford in the title role. The music by the orchestra was a very pleasing part of the production, and the singing of "Dreams" by Mrs. McKee Bingham, gowned betutifully in Elizabethan costume for an effective prologue, was much enjoyed. Mrs. Bingham received a large bouquet of piuk roses at the conclusion of her solo.

Mary Pickford in this delightful picture is as charming as ever, probably more so. All the grace and dainty caprice which she brought to her little girl roles is apparent in the grown-up edition which she presents in "Dorothy Vernon," a characterization eminently suited to her peculiar style. At one moment a little spitfire, at the next melting to tenderness and sweetness, she leads her harrassed parent a merry life. She is lovely at all times and makes a wonderful foil to the gallant demeanor of her lover.

The big picture abounds in historical incident of the sort rarely screened. Historical romances may be somewhat a drug on the movie market, but "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is very different from the ordinary run. It takes its watchers back to the times of "Good Queen Bess," when the lady ruled her subjects with an iron hand, and some of the most interesting scenes have to do with the Virgin Queen herself, sweeping majestically to Haddon Hall in the forefront of a gorgeous retinue, commanding the daughter of the house to the gallows in a breath of tempestuous anger, and appearing finally in a wonderful knotted nightcap and furred night-robe, to set things straight.

Lovely backgrounds and gorgeous costuming are items of this big picture, which teems with detailed interest and beauty of screening. Around the little star, her romance swarm myriads of attendant servitors and the courtiers of Elizabeth, to attend the wedding day of the young Dorothy, starving in her room and then submitting through fear of her lover's life, to marry his rival.

Action and interest and swift movement are the keynotes of Mary Pickford's latest, which has its final showing at the Grand Opera House tonight.

AT THE ROYAL.

Belasco's "Welcome Stranger" Screen Version of a Sensational Broadway Success at Royal Monday.

From the great Broadway play by Aaron Hoffman.

With Florance Vidor, Dore Davidson, Virginia Browne Faire, Noah Beery, Lloyd Hughes, Robert Edeson, Wm. V. Mong and Otis Harlan.

Isidore Solomon breezed into Valley Falls one New Year's night and found the inhabitants colder than the atmosphere outside.

"We don't allow Jews in this village," the four leading citizens of the town told Him.

"Sure, that's why it's still a village," said Mr. Solomon.

That worthy gentleman resolved to make it a city. With good humor and humility, he fought the town's narrow-mindedness and racial prejudice. He and Clem Beemis bought a waterfall and planned to electrify the town. But the Mayor was on the other side and gave him a stiff fight. Solomon stood everything until they set fire to his worldly possessions. That was a blow that almost felled him.

But Izzy was a philosopher with a sense of humor—and a fighter.

"I cast my bread on the waters and it came back sandwiches," he said later.

Come and see how he did it. It's the funniest, most human picture you've seen in a long time.

As a play, "Welcome Stranger" had all Chicago and New York laughing for two years.

The picture is a whiz!

"Welcome Stranger" Well Received in American Cities.

"Entertained and held captive the audience. The story bubbles with humor."—Pittsburgh Press.

"The manner in which it is handled is highly skillful and reflects credit on the author."—Pittsburgh Leader.

"You are welcomed a hundred times, Stranger. You put a smile on our faces and a little more of the milk of human kindness in our hearts."—Walter D. Hickman in Indiana Daily Times.

"It is without hesitation that we say it is worthy of unstinted support. It is hilariously funny, but it is rather the humor of high comedy than the humor of broad farce."—St. Louis Globe.

"A tale full of twists and tricks, sure-fire amusement for the many."—Philadelphia Journal.

"A pretty comedy that has attracted much attention in Eastern cities."—Archie Bell in Cleveland News.

"Rampant with the quaint humor for which Aaron Hoffmen is famous and breathing the spirit of democracy."—New Haven Register.

HOOT GIBSON COMES AGAIN IN NEW PLAY.

Hoot Gibson, star in "Broadway or Bust," Universal-Gibson production to be shown in the Royal Theatre next Thursday, was a real hard-working cowboy before he became a motion picture actor. As such he faced many real dangers without a quiver. Also in his picture career he has been just as quiverless in the face of danger—and he has done some dangerous stunts before the camera.

But, while working in "Broadway or Bust" Hoot not only had a quiver of apprehension, but he made no attempt to keep his feelings secret. For a time his director, Edward Sedgwick, who also helped to write the story, considered changing the script that Hoot might regain his customary equanimity. But there really was no danger for finally after much urging, Hood consented to go aboard a yacht and out to sea.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The main screen feature at the Capitol Theatre to-day is the photoplay adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's well known novel, "When a Man's a Man," which is a First National attraction.

The plot concerns the adventures of an indolent young clubman who goes West after the girl of his heart throws him down. He lands in the cowboy town of Prescott, Arizona, and goes to work on the Cross Triangle Ranch as an ordinary ranch hand. Here he loses his identity—and becomes known as "Honorable Patches."

His daring and willingness to work and likeable personality win him many friends on the ranch, but there are several chronic cranks that are suspicious of every stranger and so Patches comes in for his share of suspicion. He does not improve his position any when he takes up with Yavapai Joe, a cattle rustler, whom he realizes at once is simply a poor boy in a bad environment.

How the tenderfoot is caught with the cattle rustler, pursued by a lynching party, accused of shooting the ranch foreman, and finally vindicated by the poor boy he had befriended, only to lose his right to happiness with the girl he loved when she comes west on her honeymoon trip married to his rival, make up one of the most fascinating photoplays to come to the screen in a long time.

PLASTIGRAMS AND BETTY COMPSON AT CAPITOL ON MONDAY, TUESDAY

A big double program featuring Betty Compson in her latest production, "The Enemy Sex" and an entirely new set of the screen's greatest novelty, Plastigrams, is at the Capitol theatre next Monday and Tuesday. Capitol patrons will recall the first series of Plastigrams, a picture which was viewed thru colored lenses and showed the third dimension on the screen, that of depth. This new series is even more remarkable than the first ones, as the pictures have been brought to a greater degree of efficiency in the interval between the first series and the series to be shown next Monday and Tuesday. They are alive with comedy, and thrilling action, which is even more striking because of the intense novelty of Plastigrams. Betty Compson in her latest production, "The Enemy Sex" is a James Cruze production and tells a thrilling love romance of Broadway. In the supporting cast, are Percy Marmont, Sheldon Lewis, Huntly Gordon and Kathlyn Williams. Harry Stone in Mack Sennett's comedy, "Should Landlords Live" is said to be one of Sennett's funniest productions.

"THE ENEMY SEX" A JAMES CRUZE PRODUCTION, COMING

There are several reasons why "The Enemy Sex" which is coming to the Capitol Theatre, next Monday and Tuesday, is awaited with more than ordinary interest. First of all, it was produced for Paramount by James Cruze who, you recall, directed "The Covered Wagon." This fact in itself is a guarantee of its worth from a directorial standpoint. Secondly, the cast, headed by irresistible Betty Compson, is nothing short of all-star, since it includes such well-known favorites as Percy Marmont, Huntly Gordon, Kathlyn Williams, Sheldon Lewis and De Witt Jennings.

Coming to the story we learn that the picture was adapted by Walter Woods and Harvey Thew from Owen Johnsons "The Salamander," the most startling of all the flapper, jazz novels. It's a romance dealing with the love adventures of a chorus girl who makes a laughing stock of five wealthy, sophisticated men, each of whom tries to add her to his collection of women. Imagine Betty Compson as the fascinating chorus girl, the wise little gold-digger who plays with the five biggest men in New York and beats them all at their own game!

Interest in this picture is further heightened by reason of the fact that James Cruze and Betty Compson are head over heels in love with each other, and are to be married shortly. It is safe to assume that both redoubled their efforts to make "The Enemy Sex" notable. Bearing all this in mind we are willing to wager that this latest James Cruze production will be one of the exceptional photoplays of the coming season.

AT THE REGENT.

FOUR FAVORITES OF STAGE ACT IN SAME FILM.

Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellegen Head Cast.

The cast in "Let Not Man Put Asunder," the J. Stuart Blackton special production, which will soon be seen at the Regent Theatre, is remarkable because each of the four leading players have been trained in both stage playing and screen acting.

Miss Pauline Frederick, who has the leading feminine role, has been for years one of the greatest emotional actresses of the stage and screen of this generation. She was trained to the stage long before she went into pictures and became the leading actress of emotional characterizations. No other woman has equalled her in sincerity of portrayed emotions.

Lou Tellegen, who plays the "great lover" on stage and screen, was trained in the French school and came to America as leading man to Madame Sarah Bernhardt. He visited all of the chief cities in this country as leading man and liked this country so well that he has become a citizen here. His training was on the stage and the screen work followed.

In Leslie Austen, those who enjoyed romantic plays and saw such organizations as the Ben Greet Players, Annie Russell and her company in "The Rivals," "The School for Scandal," "Peg Woffington" and others, will meet an old friend in the sympathetic hero of "Let Not Man Put Asunder." Mr. Austen was an English actor and a juvenile of repute when he came to America. Since then he has supported such stars as Ethel Barrymore and Alice Brady.

Helena D'Algy, the Spanish beauty, who plays the role of the opera singer, began her career in opera in Spain, played through the provinces of South American countries and then came to America to find an opportunity to go on the screen. Mr. Blackton selected her for the role when he saw her appear in the "Follies," the famous musical organization of New York City.

The jury retired at one o'clock.

BRITAIN AND PROHIBITION

Some Letter Writers Propose That Liberals Plump For Dryness.

LONDON, December 13. — How to revive Liberalism in Great Britain is the subject of almost a continuous stream of correspondence in the Liberal papers. A large number of the letter writers advocate that the Liberal party should plump for prohibition.

The Methodist Times, a noncomformist organ, takes the view that the people at the present time do not appear to favor prohibition and it suggests that the first step towards bringing about prohibition is local option.

LIGHTNING

All important so-called mysteries eventually yield to science. The latest to be solved is the age-old mystery of what's known as ball lightning. The explanation is complicated. But ball lightning recently was produced artificially in General Electric laboratories.

Scientists are detectives. Progress is simply the understanding and application of things and forces that already exist in nature. Man is like a boy exploring endless cupboards.

Your Chief Interest

is your health, for that is the fundamental of your existence. If you could find some way to conserve your health, keep you from being ill and postponing old age, you would certainly display enthusiastic interest. But—would you recognize that WAY TO HEALTH if you came across it?

There is a health science that has restored and preserved health for thousands of persons, enabling them to possess that degree of strength and energy so necessary for the attainment of success. Do you know of any good reason why this science cannot do the same for you? Is it possible that your body is of different construction than the bodies of other human beings?

CHIROPRACTIC IS A SCIENCE DEVOTING SPECIAL ATTENTION TO THE HUMAN SPINE. The spine in its natural formation protects the spinal cord and nerves, but if a segment of the spine becomes displaced through the stress and strain of everyday life some nerve fibres will be constricted. The result is impaired function and finally disease in the tissues supplied by the constricted nerves.

Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments do release pressure from nerves, and the fact that thousands of people are enjoying good health because of having taken Spinal Adjustments, is positive proof that Chiropractic is fulfilling its mission.

ELSIE SWEETIN'S LOVE FOR HIGHT DEAD IN COURT

Woman Yawns at Former Pastor's Look of Appeal for Support.

CHURCH GOSSIP

Parishioners Had Noticed Pastor's Attentions—Arsenic Given in Soup.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., December 15. — The love that Lawrence Hight and Elsie Sweetin only a few months ago believed to be theirs, died in the Circuit Court room.

Mrs. Sweetin killed it with a yawn.

Thus ended the infatuation which led the wife of one and the husband of the other to the grave and placed the unfrocked minister of Ina and his parishioner before a jury charged with murder.

The pastor who "l ed and told" will get no help from the woman in his defence. From now on it will be a battle between them as to which shall go free at the expense of the other.

Mrs. Sweetin, it was indicated, will assert that the confession she made was wrung from her by an appeal—or a threat—from Hight.

Boomerang for Him.

Thus Hight's efforts to place the blame for the slaying upon Elsie Sweetin by attributing to her "a power he could not resist," will turn back upon him.

When Mrs. Sweetin testifies, said R. W. Smith, her attorney, she will swear Hight told her a mob was forming, and she would be lynched if she did not make a statement coinciding with his.

She will assert that she lavished affection on her miner husband, and was a model wife and mother until her pastor played upon her "emotional starvation" with subtle wooing.

She will charge that it was the minister who bought and administered the poison that killed Wilford Sweetin. Smith said:

"Let everyone look to his own defence; I will spare no proper means to protect my client, and I assume Hight's lawyer will do the same for him."

The words seemed to stun the former minister with the force of a physical blow. He turned his face with a dumb and plaintive plea to Elsie Sweetin.

For a quarter of a minute she returned the gaze.

Slowly she raised her hand to her lips and yawned.

Late was begun the introduction of testimony that Mrs. Sweetin drew the attention of town gossips by her secret trysts with Hight in the plum orchard.

Before court adjourned the jury saw Elsie Sweetin depicted as standing over her husband—near death from previous doses of poison—urging him to drain a cup of soup containing the final fatal dose. It was said she told him:

"It will give you strength."

Wilford Sweetin took it. He died.

Thought her Good.

The two witnesses were W. S. Moreland and R. F. Taylor, old friends of Elsie Sweetin and her husband Wilford. The two men testified:

"I always thought she was a mighty good woman, very kind to

MAYO SEES LIFE LASTING LONGER

Noted Surgeon Tells Insurance Men Why Cancer Deaths Are Increasing.

HEALTH GAINING

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—"Old King Tut died a young man. He died early because the doctors in ancient Egypt didn't know enough about medicine to save him.

"One woman in every ten is dying of cancer to-day after she reaches the age of forty.

"More has been learned about medicine, and the diseases of human beings in the last twenty-four years than was learned in the previous twenty-four centuries."

So said Dr. Charles H. Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., addressing the final session of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents' Convention at the Hotel Astor.

Reasons For Jump.

The famous surgeon also said the reason more people are dying now of cancer than in previous years is that the life of the average man and woman has been extended to fifty-eight years.

At this period the body cells are worn to the point of less resistance to the cancer germ attack.

He said that twenty years was the average of span of life for man in the sixteenth century.

Life is being prolonged for the individual to-day, he said, because more babies are being saved than were ever saved before in the history of medicine.

Dr. Mayo added that pure milk, especially guarded by competent health inspection officers in the big cities, is the most important factor in the saving of babies.

Mass Diseases Ended.

The distinguished physician also said that mass diseases like the black death that wiped out 50,000,000 persons in the fourteenth century have been practically eliminated, and that the battle of the men of medication to-day is to save the individual.

He declared that Lotta Crabtree, the aged actress, who bequeathed $300,000 to oppose vivisection, had acted against public policy because experiments on animals has resulted in saving an untold number of human lives.

He advocated a physical examination twice yearly for each man, woman and child. He said army tests in the world war showed that the youth born in the city suffers less from disease than the young man from the rural districts.

OLDEST SENATOR DEAD.

John Yeo Pased Away Yesterday in P.E.I. in His 87th Year.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Senator John Yeo died yesterday at his home at Porthill, in his 87th year.

Senator John Yeo was born in Porthill, Prince County, in 1837, and was the oldest man in the Senate. He was a large land owner on Prince Edward Island, and a man of considerable wealth.

ARMY RALLYING ABOUT TROTZKY

Berlin Reports Disturbed Conditions Among Soviet Leaders.

SERIOUS SPILT

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—The Russian Red Army is rallying around War Minister Trotzky and refuses to recognize orders from the Soviet Executive Council in Moscow, removing Trotzky as head of the army.

This is the substance of dispatches coming out of Russia by way of Odessa and Bucharest.

Events of possibly far-reaching consequences are alleged to be impending in Russia as a result of the efforts of Zinoviev to oust Trotzky from the army and the Councils of the Bolshevik Government.

Peace Efforts Futile.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin is asserted to have taken his stand with Trotzky, while M. Rykoff, who was elected to Lenin's place, has tried in vain to patch up peace between Zinoviev and Trotzky.

The appointment of Joffe, who is known as the "propaganda ambassador," to be Russian Ambassador to Vienna is creating a big stir at the Austrian capital.

It is recalled that Joffe was forced to leave Germany because he made the Russian Embassy headquarters for the Communist propaganda, and fear is expressed that the sending of Joffe to Vienna means that that city is to be made Communist propaganda headquarters for the Balkan States.

FEWER CAR LOADINGS

Seasonal Decline in First Week of December.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.— (Canadian Press).—Railway car loadings in Canada during the week ended December 6, aggregated 60,915 cars, a decrease of 4,036 cars from the previous week, but a slight increase over the corresponding week in 1923. The decline is seasonal. Although navigation is still open, the grain movement is slackening up and is not being offset by an increase in the coal movement. Merchandise and miscellaneous freight also showed small declines, but other commodities showed little change. With a smaller harvest, grain loading was lighter than last year by 4,379 cars, but the loss was more than made up by gains in live stock, coal, lumber, pulpwood, ore and merchandise.

Outstanding Baptist Dead.

ANOTHER VIOLINIST

Paul Kochanzki, Recent Soloist With the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Paul Kochanzki recently was soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He played Karol Szymanowski's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra." It is said that Mr. Szymanowski is devoted to atonality and polytonality and that consequently he proceeds in a very dissonant idiom. And that the three movements of the piece were played as one. Thus it is evident that Kochanszki tackled a very big order of the modern music.

Behind him he has a record of treating 600 pneumonia cases in the past few years without a death resulting.

JAMES NEWELL FOUND GUILTY

Sentenced to Two Years Less One Day on Perjury Charge.

James Newell, of Asphodel, will spend the next two years of his life in the Ontario Reformatory at Mimico. Two years, less one day, was the sentence imposed upon him by Judge Huycke on Saturday afternoon when the jury after an absence of nearly four hours, brought in a verdict of "Guilty," in the charge against him of subornation to perjury of the witness, Albert Hynes. The verdict rendered by the foreman, [illegible] Telford, of Smith Township, carried a rider "with a strong recommendation for leniency"

The mills of the gods ground slowly in the case of James Newell. Coming scot free from two trials, while his companions, the two youths who swore away the character of his former sweetheart, Clarice McColl, were later put on trial, and given two years apiece, for perjury, it remained until Saturday last, December 13, for the central figure in the sordid drama, which involved four young people in its enactment, to commence his punishment With the two lads who were formerly close friends of his he will be confined in Mimico Reformatory. The maximum penalty for this offence is 14 years in the penitentiary, but the youth of the prisoner was probably a factor in the comparatively light punishment administered to him.

While the dark, sallow lad, with his sloping head and low, weak voice waited for sentence, after the verdict had been returned, biting his nails nervously but maintaining the same somewhat impassive demeanor that has characterized him from the beginning of the trial, the lights in the court room dimmed to an almost imperceptible pale yellow light, and the blinding snowstorm of late Saturday afternoon beat against the windows.

Clarice McColl, waiting in an outer room, betrayed no particular pleasure at hearing that her former lover had been sentenced. "They had no mercy on me," she said quietly, and for the first time during the progress of the trial, wept silently with bowed head.

The second indictment against Jas. Newell, on a charge of subornation to perjury of the witness William Millar, was traversed to the next Sessions of the Peace, with a probability, as voiced by Mr. Cunningham, of never coming to a trial.

CRASHED INTO TRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.— (Canadian Press.)—A statement issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway covering the fatality at Markdale station, when R. C. Rae, of Harkaday lost his life, and his son was injured, is to the effect that the automobile in which the two men were driving on Thursday, ran into the side of the engine and was not crashed into as stated in a previous despatch. At the time of the accident the engine bell was ringing and an electric crossing bell, installed at the request of the Board of Railway Commissioners in 1913, was also functioning.

NINE EGYPTIANS FREED, OTHERS ARE ARRAIGNED

Evidence Insufficient to Hold Them for Sirdar's Death.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 15.—Nine of the forty-two persons arrested in connection with the murder of Sirdar Stack have been liberated. The public prosecutor considered the evidence against them insufficient and Egyptian law does not provide for "preventive" detention.

Those released included three members of the chamber of deputies. It is understood the ministry of the interior intends to proceed against one of them, Makrem Bey Obeid, who has been termed by Zagloul Pasha ,the former premier, as "my spiritual son". The charge will be that Makrem made subversive speeches.

The remainer of these who were taken into custody, including three more deputies, were arraigned in court to-day.

CHOP HOLE IN ICE TO SAVE FISHERMEN

Storm Tossed Craft Covered With Ice and Crew Had No Fuel.

DUNKIRK, N.Y., Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Captain H. W. Hornke, of Cleveland, and his crew of six Dunkirk fishermen, are safe here after having been lost aboard the fishing tug Helene, with no fuel and few provisions for nearby three days in a Lake Erie storm.

The Helene was beached at Angola between here and Buffalo early yesterday after William Urban a members of the crew had leaped overboard to carry a line through shoal water. When Captain Hornke and his men reached the shore, their clothes were stiff with ice. The Helene was ice laden from stem to stern and it was necessary to chop a hole in the cabin for the men to get out.

The crew was brought to Dunkirk in nearly exhausted condition.

NEW ARREST MADE IN BOND ROBBERY

Y. Sinclair Will Be Charged With Implication in Port Perry Theft.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press.)—Alleged to have been implicated in the $30,000 bond robbery at Port Perry for which Charles Laing of Toronto was recently sent to penitentiary for three years, Y. Sinclair, a young man was arrested on Saturday evening. Sinclair was detained on charges of shopbreaking and theft. He was taken to Whitby last night and will be arraigned there today, on the more serious charge.

The local charges will not be dealt with until after the Port Perry case has been disposed of.

HERRIOTT'S ILLNESS MAY MEAN A CRISIS

If Long Continued It May Necessitate Calling on Briand or Painleve.

PARIS, Dec. 15 — (Canadian Press).—Shadow of a coming ministerial crisis has been thrown across the political pathway by Premier Herriott's illness. Although a carefully worded official bulletin regarding the Premier's condition says the physicians expect the Premier up in ten days. It refrains from suggesting that he probably will be able to resume work then.His absence from a period of convalescence it is generally admitted is impossible owing to the many difficult problems now before the Government.

The means of former Premiers Painleve and Briand are being mentioned as possible successor of M. Herriot in case the physicians of the Premier insist that he take a long rest.

TUG DRIFTS ASHORE

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 15.— The fish tug Helene went ashore at Angela, thirty miles from Buffalo, early Sunday, Capt. H. W. Hornke of Cleveland and his crew of six Dunkirk fishermen are safe. They had drifted in a gale on Lake Erie for three days.

GRANDMOTHERLY WOMAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY, EMMA GOLDMAN, EXILE

Deported as a Communist and Radical From the United States, She Was Bitterly Disillusioned by the Bolshevist Experiment, Which She Describes as a Betrayal of the Russian People.

EMMA G OLDMAN

LONDON, Dec. 15.—"I am not homesick for the United States, if by that you mean the government which rules the United States. But if you mean many of the warm-hearted people who live in the United States, then I am prepared to answer your question in the affirmative."

There was a ring of defiance, mingled with a touch of wistfulnes in the reply made to me by a woman getting on past middel age. And you will, perhaps, be surprised to learn that it was Emma Goldman, who was intrdouced at a highbrow banquet here the other night as "the most famous woman revolutionist in the world —a woman who has suffered and given her all for the ideals she held dearer than life or liberty."

Try to conceal it as she may, Emma Goldman is deeply home sick for America. She feels herself a woman without a country. She uprooted herself from Russia, the land of her birth, when she migrated to America. She was uprooted in 1919 again when the United States government deported her back to Russia.

Soviet Russia disappointed, embittered and disillusioned her. She got away as soon as she could. She tried Sweden, Germany, France, but none satisfied her. Now she is living temporarily in England. Her preoccupation with the United States crops out confantly in her talk. She refers to herself as an "American". She speaks of New York as "home". She says proudly that her people gave America doctors, lawyers, thinkers.

"Red Emma" Wears No Red

"And in the battle line in France," she says defiantly, "There died in American uniform the greatest violinist America ever produced—David Hochstein. He was my nephew."

Come see "Red Emma," the firebrand revolutionary, as she appears in London. She is surrounded by books .On the table is a spray of white lilacs sent her from southern France. Before her is a samovar with hot tea. She is dressed in simple black and wears a blue shawl Her brown hair is graying, but her blue eyes still flash fire. If you did not know who she was, you would take her for a grandmotherly body.

"What do I want to do in England? In the first place I want to read quietly in the British Museum and prepare data for a book I have in mind concerning women and their part in creative revolution. In the back of my mind, too, I have a plan for a little volume about the most modern Russian writers. One of them, Alexander Blok, was not only the greatest poet of this era; she was starved to death by the Soviet.

"And the big thing I want to do is lecture on Russia as it is to-day. If I take the platform I am going to attack the Bolsheviki ruthlessly.

QUARRYMAN KILLED

Crushed by Huge Stone at Ingersoll Lime Quarry.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Dec. 15.—Charles Nott, 30, an employe of the Beachville White Lime Company, was killed at the company's quarry on Saturday when a large rock, weighing about 400 pounds, broke away from the top of the pile at which he was working. It struck him in the chest, knocking him down and passing over him. He had lived in Beachville most of his life, coming here about two and a half years ago. The widow and one small son survive. An inquest has been opened

THE WEATHER

We had our first experience of a real Canadian winter, for the present season, on Saturday night. The temperature dropped to the neighborhood of zero, the wind blew and a small blizzard raged. The lowest the temperature went was 4 below zero. All day on Sunday it remained around zero. This Monday morning showed that it had again been down to 4 below zero during the night, but was at 5 above at daybreak. The winter has set in early this year compared with last, when we had beautiful weather until a few days before Christmas. The first zero was reached on Jan. 2nd.—W.P.

COBALT BANDIT ESCAPED AFTER BEING DISARMED

Hold-up of Shack Netted Ten Dollars and Raid in Town a Disaster.

SHOT ONE MAN

Carries Teeth Marks on Hand As Souvenir of Barehanded Battle.

COBALT, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Police are scouring the district for a lone bandit who created considerable excitement in Cobalt Friday night. Entering the shack of Sandy McMasters on the outskirts of the town he held up McMasters and Roy Alguire who happened to be visiting there. Alguire had a considerable roll of money which he managed to work out of his pocket and drop unseen, but the bandit got about ten dollars in small change from the two men.

At the point of his gun, he then compelled Alguire, whose car was outside, to drive him down town. Near the mining corporation plant, he dropped off and went down to the T. and N.O. tracks, where he held up a woman. The latter screamed and Joe Cariffe, who heard her cry went to her assistance. The bandit shoved the woman aside and went to meet Cariffe, who advanced despite the gun, and attacked.

In the melee, the gun went off and Cariffe suffered a flesh wound in one leg but gamely held on. Getting a grip on the bandit's hand in his teeth, he compelled him to drop the gun and got it, hitting the bandit heavily in the face with it twice. The bandit broke away as more help was coming up and was chased over the hills back of the McKinley and then circled back to the railway tracks where his footprints were lost in the marks of traffic. He is described as 23 or 24 years of age, of slight build, and is now marked with tooth marks on one hand and cuts from the gun on his face.

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press) — "Wild Bill" Wade, professional automobile race driver, was seriously injured at the Houston Speedway Sunday in a race when his machine jumped the embankment and crashed into several parked automobiles, turned over and burst into flames. At the hospital it was said his condition is critical.

LAKE STEAMER LOST.

Wreckage Swept Ashore Near Eagle Harbour.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press). — Developments strengthened the belief that a lake steamer has been wrecked near Eagle Harbor, off the north-west coast of Keweenaw Peninsula.

Additional wreckage has come ashore, but none of it has a distinguishing mark, and the identity of the vessel from which it came remains a mystery.

GODHOOD OF CHRIST IS PROVED BY CONCRETE LAW SAYS PAPINI

Cry of the Age is for Scientific Basis of Its Faith and Belief.

SCIENTIFIC PROOF.

Author of "Life of Christ" Believes He Can Prove Divinity.

FLORENCE, Italy, Dec. 15th—By Thomas B. Morgan, United Press Staff Correspondent. (Copyright 1924 by United Press. Copyright in Canada).—"I believe I have succeeded in finding proof of the divinity of Christ which is to be formulated in a law based upon facts which all mankind knows" Giovanni Papini, author of the "Life of Christ," and one of the fortmost authorities on biblical law declared in an exclusive interview with United Press.

"The differences which divide Christian faiths in America—The fight between fundamentalists and modernists over the virgin birth, the miracles and the vicarious sacrifice of Christ—all will be composed once the divinity of the Saviour is proved," Papini said.

The author stated he would announce the new law in a book he was preparing—a book which would contain material supporting the scientific validity of his claim.

Law in Score Words.

"It would take only a score of words to formulate a law which would be the key to the settlement of the doubts maintained by large numbers of the Earth's population concerning Christ's divinity," he said.

"There are thousands accosting him as a good man and a wise teacher . . . A benefactor of mankind, but more is required. One must also believe. He was a God, to whom we look for guidance—not to try to reduce to the level of ourselves.

'The thousands regarding him as a man cannot have the same feeling toward him. They do not think they are obliged to serve and obey him implicity since they regard him as a man.

But when he becomes a God, then reverence, worship, and obedience, to his teaching follow. Doubters seeking concrete proof want to see facts proving that Christ was also a God. I have studied these doubters," they really want scientificic mathematical proof.

I have also come to a realization what it would mean to Hunanity to accept Christ as a God. That is the big reason which has impelled me to search something to satisfy the modern demand for concrete, tangible proof.

I believe I have it.

"I have not approached the task as a theologian for I am not a Theologian but as a plain layman I am putting in the new law facts of every day life—things we all know, definitely and conclusively establish the divine reality of the Savious and his Godhood.

"All ages," Papini continues, are noted for some special contribution to the Christian story, just as the middle ages were noted for the contribution of the beauty of the Christrian ritual and ceremonial, as well as for art and scripture, so the present age is noted for its demand for a scientific basis to its faith.

"To meet present needs one must find some premise whereon all agree, accept it as fundamental and from there we can proceed.

"The most important thing to establish is the divinity of Christ. If that is proved that is our premise. There we can begin.

"That is what I have discovered—scientific proof of the Godhood of Christ, one that is established, all questions relating thereto are solved. The miracles and mysteries are all proved by Christ divinity since Christ is God, his teaching true, his word finalist.

Establishment of Chirst's divinity brings all Christians near to each other. It would be a great contribution if all faiths could be united. Certainly the last hundred years have seen much done to unite Christianity.

There are numerous signs of a trend to and unity as shown by the conference recently at Malines and the Pope's bulletin proclaiming a jubilee year in the Catholic Church, in which he invites all men to join in the faith.

"We certainly," admitted the author, 'my preference would see all man united in the Catholic faith. But it will take a long time, beginning with a simple declaration of faith a creed. Protestants have so many branches to unite that it seems to me preferable " Protestantism were to unite i nsome simple declaration of faith. Then and there from another merger could be effected, this time with Catholicism.

'It would be very productive of good to mankind, it would mean much for true Christianity, which at present really forms a very small part of the Globe's population. There may be stupendous figures showing what populations are designated as christian. "But among these there is a mutitude yet to be won to the real spirit of Christianity and a real acceptance of faith."

The United Press correspondent asked Papini what present day civilization offered for practical Christianity.

"This present day mechanical civilization is an age which seeks to produce so that it can consume," the author answered.

"One force is constantly goading the other, resulting in the defeat of its own ends.

"It seems to me that this mechanical age is a punishment visited upon mankind for wrongs committed.

"The capitalist wishes greater output in order to swallow in greater riches. The workman wishes greater revenue so that he can consume more. The result is that the system defeats its own ends.

"Take the example of the automobile. At first it was thought that this invention would make communication and travel more rapid. Now cities are so congested with automobiles that it is quicker to go on foot.

"You know that in New York, where the streets are narrow and choked with traffic from high buildings, congestion is tremendous and proceeding by automobile is slower than walking.

The same principal applies to the present mechanical age which will end by consuming itself. Great machines which are built up will result in their own destruction.

"Man will return to the simple more primitive life, closer to that is nature which is God."

Queen Mary Home and School Association Varied Its Usual Program.

In place of the regular December meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association, the executive of the society entertained the teachers of the school at the afternoon tea on Thursday, December 11th, in the prettily decorated kindergarten room. The president, Mrs. M. T. Breckenridge, welcomed the guests. Mrs. D. Cameron poured tea at a flower-decked table, and Mrs. S. Wolstencroft cut the ices. Asistants were Mrs. Robert French, Mrs. H. E. Connolly and Mrs. H. S. Huffman. Mrs. Cameron also presided at the piano. The teachers enjoyed the social hour and showed their appreciation by singing in unison "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

THE GUMPS—PRETTY GROUNDHOGS

LONDON NEWSPAPER HAS FUN WITH WEATHER

BY MILTON BRONNER

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.—One of the London newspapers has a weather stunt which it pulls twice a year just as regularly as clockwork.

In the winter, when for England it gets quite cold, this paper is sure to have a headline announcing that on yesterday England was colder than Iceland. And the very next day it is just as sure to have an interview with an Icelander visiting in London.

Among other things the man from the land of ice and snow will say: "I am taking the first boat back to Iceland. I can't stand it in England. It's too cold for me."

In the following summer, when for two days it stops raining and the sun shines, this same paper is sure to have a headline proclaiming that in London yesterday it was hotter than equatorial Africa. And just as surely the next day it will have an interview with a black man from one of Englands' mid-African possessions who will say:

"Oh, boy, I can't stand your heat. I am going back to the African jungles to get cool."

At one time under the last czar the Russian possessions, including Siberia, were supposed to contain 180,000,000 people.

It would be an interesting game for some statistician to figure out how many millions of these were princes and princesses.

Even today, after the Bolsheviks have murdered hundreds of them, all Europe swarms with Russian princes and princesses.

They are as common as June-bugs in summer time. And no wonder. Is a man a Russian prince? Then all his kids are princes and princesses. And when they marry and have offspring more princes and princesses.

Which is why in London, Paris and Berlin a great many milliners dress-makers and tea-shop owners have this distinguished sounding title. And also why it's easy for some snobbish American girl with lots of money to capture a "prince."

But wise British and French mamas steer their girls away. They know that these Russian titles are a drug on the market.

The late Cardinal Logue, head of the Church in Ireland, was as plain as the traditional old shoe. There was no pomp and no fuss about him.

Bent by the weight of his eighty-odd years, he was often seen puttering about in a rusty old suit.

They tell the delightful tale of how an American tourist once came near giving his eminence a 10-cent tip.

The traveler went into the little cathedral church of the cardinal in the Ulster country. A little bent old man came up and obligingly took him around, discoursing very intelligently about the points of the church.

When the visit was over the Yank stuck his hand in his pocket for a coin. As he did so he thanked the old man for his courtesy and asked his name.

"Some call me old Michael," said the prince of the church.

Out came the hand with the coin.

"But," said the old man with a twinkle in his eye, "others call me the cardinal."

Hand and coin went back into the pocket.

SPEAKING OF MEN'S FASHIONS— GAZE UP ON THIS FREAK GET-UP

Look what the photographer came back with when the editor said, "Go thou through the highways and by ways of Times Square and find the most unusual men's fashion picture to be found. These actor guys always have a lot of freak stuff."

This presents Ernest Truez, the pint-size comedian, but he's really very serious when he says that pajama suits such as he sports will some days be worn on American streets.

True found this thingamajig in Lido, Italy, where all the beach lollers wear them .It is of a very rich brown velvet and the silk pumps match.

The silk topper? No, that really shouldn't be worn with pajamas. Truex put it on to make the picture a good one.

JANETVILLE IS NOW EXPECTING STATUS OF CITY

Bridge Across Scugog Will Bring Increased Business to the Village.

BRIGHT BAZAAR.

Sunday School Convention Attracted Notice — Many Prominent Speakers.

JANETVILLE, Dec. 15. — The people of West Manvers, South Ops, and South Mariposa are delighted at the prospect of a bridge to span Lake Scugog. This bridge will link up the township of Ops and Mariposa with the shipping facilities of Janetville station and put the people of these sections in direct touch with the coal supply, grain elevators, and bring to ther doors in a few minutes what would take at least half a day to bring from Lindsay. Cattle, grain, hogs, milk and fowl are shipped from Janetville station almost daily, and it can be seen at a glance what an advantage it would be to the people across the lake, to have a bridge which would link them up with such a base of supply and demand only a mile or two from their farms. If the proposed bridge crosses at Middleton's Island, the distance across the lake will be a mile; if, however, it be built from Irving's Landing, sixty rods will cover the expanse of water.

Petitions are in circulation at the present time and are being eagerly signed. If this goes through, it may mean a new Janetville on the banks of Scugog lake, twelve miles from the town of Lindsay.

Popular Wedding.

A very pretty and unique marriage was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage, Janetville, on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 10, when Miss Georgina Howe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Howe, became the bride of Mr. R. J. Burn, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Burn, both of the village of Janetville.

The bride looked very attractive in her handsome travelling suit of navy French Tricotine, with sand silk crepe de chine overblouse and hat to match, and wearing a smart brown fox scarf, the gift of the groom. Promptly at 3 o'clock the bridal party took their places beneath an artistic arch of white tulle flowers and bells, the sides of which were banked with begonias and foliage, while the background consisted of delicate lace ferns.

The groom was ably supported by Mr. Charles Staples of Franklin, while the bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Elsie Switzer of Orillia.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. E. Ross, pastor of the circuit. The happy couple are very popular in the community and are held in high esteem for their energy and activity in all branches of church enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. Burn, showered with confetti and good wishes, left on the west-bound train for Toronto, Windsor and other points, and on their return they will reside in Janetville, where Mr. Burn is engaged in business.

A Successful Bazaar.

A very successful bazaar was held in the Foresters Hall on Saturday afternoon and evening last, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church. During the afternoon, and while purchases were being made, tea and other refreshments were served in Cafateria Style.

A concert was held in the evening, at which both local and Lindsay talent took part. One of the happiest features of the evening was the sale of an autograph quilt, which was purchased by three of our school teachers, viz., Miss Bone of Wingham, Miss Gray of Millbrook, and Miss Richardson of Tweed. What the three ladies will do with one quilt baffles us, but they certainly bought it.

Sunday School Convention.

On Tuesday afternoon and evening last the Sunday School Association held its annual convention in the Methodist Church. Very helpful addresses were delivered in the afternoon by Rev. Manson Doyle of Toronto. Rev. Mr. Dafoe of Bethany and Rev. Mr. Wilkinson of Pontipool; while Rev. Mr. Richards of Cavan gave an excellent address in the evening, and Rev. Manson Doyle held a round table conference. Archie Stinson sang in the afternoon with great acceptance, while he and Harry Thornton gave a very fine duett in the evening. Rev. Mr. Patterson and Rev. Mr. Ross conducted Devotional Exercises.

MEN!

(By Cynthia Grey)

Men are such hypocrites!
There was Lord Byron. He said:
"Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,
'Tis woman's whole existence."

But Byron had more love affairs than Napoleon, Nat Goodwin, and Charlie Chaplin put together.

Men are so vain.
They pretend not to care how they look. But find me the man who doesn't own four dozen neckties and a bottle of hair-restorer!

Put men are so necessary.
For, after all, they are the tablets on which we women write the love story of our lives.

BIBLE WRITTEN IN VERNACULAR

Rev. James Moffat Translates "Garden of Eden" to "Eden Park."

The 1924 model of the Bible has appeared. It carries no ancient accessories. It is completely and entirely modern. The archaic language of King James becomes the up-to-the-minute English of this day. Here is an Old Testament that even he who runs his car at 60 miles an hour may read.

Thus the Garden of Eden becomes more easily recognized as "Eden Park" and Noah's Ark is found to be a "Barge." The great horde of "begats" that appear in the Bibles of yesterday disappeared and there appears instead the simple announcement "was the father of."

It is recognized that the modern reader is not familiar with "bullrushes" but has a general acquaintance with reed-grown marshes and thus the scene in which Moses is discovered is changed to agree with present-day pictures.

And in the scene with Noah "God's convenant" becomes a "compact," which every business man readily will comprehend.

This translation, which is bound to create a discussion rivaling the Fundamentalist-Modernist debate, has

Some idea of how the 1924 Bible reads may be gathered from this fragment out of the Tower of Babel episode:

"Down came the Eternal to see the city and tower which human beings had built. 'They are one people,' said the Eternal. 'And they have one language; if this is what they do, to start with, nothing that they ever undertake will be too hard for them.'"

And, in the ten commandments "You" will be found replacing "Thou."

Here is an illustrative paragraph:

"You shall not carve any idols for yourselves .... You shall not use the name of God profanely ....."

For more than 300 years Protestant denominations have relied almost entirely upon the King James version, published in 1611. In times past heated disputes were engaged in by theologians over this version; and one section of Protestantism clings to a translation that has omitted the word "hell."

Dr. Moffatt, who is responsible for the modernized Bible, is a prominent theologian and Hebrew scholar. He has worked for eight years on the translation, seeking closely to follow the King James version and yet use the present-day speech.

He has held the chair of Church History in the United Free Church College at Glasgow.

Not since Kipling's "Kim" has there come along a book of the romance of secret India that equals "Om," by Talbot Mundy (Bobbs-Merrill). It lacks the art of "Kim" and is more theatrical, but it has penetrated strange secrets, trailed llamas and proved the author to have first-hand knowledge of many hidden ways of India. In it an Englishman seeks to penetrate the mysteries of a hidden Himalaya valley, only to find a philosophy of living.

DECORATING HOUSE AND USEFUL GIFTS

Suggestions on How to Brighten Up the Home.

One grows tired of the same ess of Christmas decorations. Holly wreaths tied with red sashes grow to be a sacred tradition from which we dare not depart. Of course there's a special Christmas flavor to holly wreaths, just as there is to the fragrance of pine branches. For older folks, vague memories of childhood joys are awakened by the associations of scents and the Christmas festival is hallowed by old happinesses.

Wouldn't it be a pleasant change to decorate an entire room in one color scheme and the next room in a different scheme, keeping in mind the old favorites red and green and white and adding tinsel as a fourth, to the possible combination.

A red and white living-room will be friendly and gay. An old white mantle will make a wonderful centerpiece, as the hearth is ever the center f he home. White cotton snow covering the mantle shelf with a pair of great tall thin red candles flanking both a des of a miniature tree in the middle, is suggested as an attractive setting. The green of the tree woul be subord nate, making red the principal part of th story. Red and white decorations hanging from chandeliers, or wall brackets, and placed over picture frames will add to the effect. Beaded fringes, made of cranberries and popcorn will add wonderfully to one of the big white globes usually in the center of the room.

Green and white will be cool and quiet for the library, or for the dining room. In the latter one might want a special note of emphasis in four tall red candles on the table. In the library the soft green of bay berry candles will seem fitting.

Tinsel can be combined effectively with either red or green. The use of long lines of tinsel or of tinsel ornaments will give an ususual touch to your decorations. You know it doesn't have to be used exclusively for the Christmas tree.

Tinsel can be used for tying Christmas gifts, combined with red or green ribbon, or tied into the bow knot on the packages. Brilliant colors for tying make attractive all sorts of gifts and the combination can be chosen from colors that clash slightly. Bright blue and green tied together will attract attention as will two shades of red,—like cherry and crimson for instance. Little flats paper flowers of gay colors can be cut out by the children and with a little paste can be used as seals. These will be effective on a background of white tissue paper.

Table decorations give one abundant opportunity for the use of the imagination. A large snow ball containing tiny wrapped gifts each with a ribbon attached is not an entirely new idea but it can be decorated in a new way by having each string lead to a place card, on which resides a gum drop man with clove eyes.

Gum drops can be used in so many ways for decorations. Christmas trees, eight inches high, can be constructed of them. Four of these set on the table with fat gum drop men on sleds here and there will make a qusint and unusual table treatment.

In all our decorations either for the home, our gifts or our table, joyous gaiety is the key-note for Christmas. With the proper spirit and care the familiar rooms and objects of our everyday living can be suddenly transformed from the humdrum to the romantic, from dullness to sparkling adding zest and buoyancy not only to our friends and relativer but to ourselves making the close of the old year and the entrance of the new a happiness to be long cherished.

SOVIET REPRESENTATIVE PRESENTED CREDENTIALS TO FRENCH PRESIDENT.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The usual pomp and ceremony attending the first official calls of foreign ambassadors to present their credentials were missing when M. Krassin appeared at the Elysee Pallace, Friday. No soldiers with fixed bayonets presenting arms were visible in the spacious courtyard and no flashily uniformed Republican guards escorted the automobile bearing the Soviet envoy. Instead, a gorgeous state carriage, drawn by four splendid steeds, effected this service.

The absence of all solemnity and ceremony was due to Ambassador Krassin's special request .The new Soviet representative, in presenting his credentials said.—

"I desire earnestly to assure you, Mr. President, that the purpose of my mission will be to strengthen the relations of sincere friendship so happily resumed between our nations, and to develop and consolidate between them an intense economic collaboration corresponding to their common interests. I shall neglect nothing to achieve this aim and I have implicit confidence in meeting the efficient co-operation of yourself and the government of the French republic in the success of my mission."

President Doumergue replied:— "The French republic has shown its intentinon of hastening the resumption of friendly relations and normal exchanges between our two nations. I am happy to hear you confirm that such is also the desire of your government. The French nation if firmly attached to the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of other countries. Such will be the rule governing our relations. France remains faithful to its traditions in respecting the rights of other nations freely to choose the form of their government."

In concuding, President Doumergue declared that "mutual friendship will only bear its fruits and economic relations will only be renewed and developed in an atmosphere of confidence."

M. Krassin was garbed in a top hat and evening clothes. The conference only lasted a few minutes.

DICTIONARIES ON TRAINS

B. and O. Railroad Comes to the Aid of Cross-word Puzzle Fans.

BALTIMORE, December 15. — Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has come to the aid of travelling cross-word puzzle enthusiasts and has installed dictionaries on all observation and club cars on all through trains on the main lines.

If the fad continues to increase as it has in the past, the company probably will place dictionaries in the cars on its branch lines, it was said at the general offices in Baltimore.

The enthusiasm for cross-word puzzles is not confined to those who travel on the observation and club cars but it is evident in the day coaches as well. Because of the number of dictionaries that would be needed, however, and the possibility that many enthusiasts would absentmindedly carry the dictionaries off with them when they left the trains, no steps have been taken to equip the day coaches.

DEADLY.

A radio signal from Wales crossed the Atlantic and exploded a flashlight powder in New York.

The process was roundabout and required a receiving apparatus at this end. But it opens startling possibilities. Picture a future war with artificial lightning sent by radio against an enemy army. The decadents of science would be tickled to death to discover such a weapon.

Three Motor Cars Stolen.

Two Men Charged With Theft — One Taken From Peterboro.

TORONTO, Dec. 13,—Alleged to have stolen three automobiles, two in the city and the third in Peterborough, Jack Collier, Westminster avenue, and a boy 14 years of age, were arrested by Detectives Whitelaw and Ewing. The young men are accused of stealing a car owned by Miss Jennie Cummings, of 14 Fern ave., which was abandoned on Silver Birch ave. A second car was taken from Fern avenue and abandoned at Rice Lake, near Peterborough, where the youthful prisoners are alleged to have stolen another machine which they were driving to Toronto when they crashed into a ditch on the Kingston road, both narrowly escaping serious injury.

LABOR

Organized labor plans to expand in the life insurance field as vigorously as it has branched out into banking.

It is a logical move. The two are closely related, insurance being a method of scientific saving.

Organized labor is just beginning to realize the powers it has by reason of its organization. Labor, with its savings, eventually could buy out its employers.

THE ODESSA SHOOTING.

An Odessa merchant, charged with shooting a boy who had been one of a party of Hallowe'en merry-makers who visited the accused premises, was acquitted by a jury the other day—the twelve good men and true taking a very lenient view of the case in spite of a very direct charge by the presiding judge.

The case is mentioned because it once more illustrates the danger that lies in keeping a loaded revolver around the place.

The prisoner swore that he fired into the air, and although the judge was careful to point out that that means of dealing with boys creating a nuisance was not regarded as legal, the verdict was in favour of the accused.

It is just another case of the availability of a weapon being responsible for its use in an illegal way.

Fortunately, the victim in this instance recovered from his injuries—he might just as easily been killed by the revolver bullet that struck him.

There is no need of anybody in the Province carrying or keeping a revolver, and their presence either on the person or around a house is provocative either of accident or crime.

The sooner the regulations in regard to such firearms are tightened the safer will be human life.

ROASTING THE MOVIES.

Robert Mantell, the well-known actor, who visited Peterborough a few weeks ago, is out with the statement that, "for a world that is drunk with the movies, the only sobering draught can be Shakespeare." And, criticizing the movies, he invites the bitter and crushing rejoinder of that intellectual queen of the screen who identified another and quite as able critic, some time ago, as "a big piece of cheese."

Mr. Mantell is an excellent actor, but he is wrong. The silver sheet is not a poison, nor yet a disease, and as a consequence does not need an antidote or physic. It is raw material, yes, and it needs the refining agencies of smelters, or filtration plants, or something like that. We may admire, relish and patronize Shakespeare, but that will not improve the movies, which have come to stay.

It may be true, as the great actor avers, that the radio and the movies are making children ignorant, but the blame rests on the misapplication or prostitution of them rather than on the things—the inventions—themselves.

The movies were certainly bad enough to start with, but they have improved somewhat. One of their worst relationships now is the publicity men who feel called on to indicate to the public that a really decent production is not decent at all, their error being that that is the way to attract the crowd.

The movies have not taught us much, it is admitted, and they have not appealed in a very large degree to intelligence or right thinking, but they have given us what we have been willing to accept.

If we insist on something better—something that is educative as well as attractive—they will be compelled to respond.

We cannot reform them by attacking them or leaving them alone, except in a very small degree. We cannot offset them by the very small and indifferent amount of Shakespeare we have at our disposal. We can only give them tone by showing our appreciation of that very commendable attribute. It is up to us.

THE LURE OF EASY MONEY.

From well-known financial men both in this country and the United States are coming warnings to people with small incomes—or large ones for that matter—to beware of being tempted by stock market boom to indulge in wild speculation.

For instance, Henry L. Doherty, the investment banker, says that fraudulent stock promoters will take a billion dollars from the people of the United States this year, and he adds that Americans are the most gullible investors of money in the world.

However that may be, the Examiner finds that legitimate brokers and other financial men are persistent in their advice along this line, declaring that another mushroom growth of bucket-shops and fake stocks may be expected, and that new "sucker lists" are being prepared and old ones dusted off.

The lure of the stock game is easy to understand.

People read about men making big clean-ups in the stock market and of others who became rich through fortunate small investments.

Such things happen—occasionally.

But for every one who really makes a big winning thousands upon thousands lose out.

We don't recall who started the saying, "Nothing venture, nothing have." But it might very well have been a promoter of fake stocks in one of his glowing circulars.

"Nothing venture, nothing have" is false more often than it is true; usually the final result is "Something venture, nothing have."

A minority do "clean up" by seemingly taking chances. But they generally take their chances on reasonably sure things. Certainly they don't place their bets on a wild-cat stocks that offer fabulous profits.

When fabulous profits are in sight with any degree of possibility the general investment public doesn't get a look-in.

The stock swindlers are setting their traps.

Wise men will invest warily, if at all, remembering the enormous number of victims of the stock-swindling epidemics.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

Canada's greatest need today is adequate leadership in analyzing her present position, problems and opportunities, and initiating and carrying through a fully based, broad-visioned and courageous "Canada Forward" policy.

No other country has better reason for looking forward with hope and confidence to its future. No country is in a better position to take immediate advantage of the early realization of its possibilities. What Canada is lacking the dynamic of a definite national program and, in its absence, more attention is being paid to the discouraging factors in our national situation than to those that give sur ground for confidence and progress.

* * * *

The tendency towards sectionalism and disunity that is the most threatening of these discouraging factors is by no means a new thing in Canadian public affairs. In every previous depression there has been a new accentuation of territorial interests and territorial rights; a new emphasis on the differences in interest of different parts of Canada rather than on the broad community of interest over all.

In the first depression after Confederation a reaction towards sectionalism and the depression itself were met by a new national policy. Opinion may and does differ as to the principles on which that policy was based. But the important point for today is that in a time of depression and tendency toward sectionalism, public men had the vision and the courage to plan and to carry out a new national policy based upon their conception of the conditions and needs of the day.

Twenty years later another period of depression was met by another national stock-taking, out of which there evolved an energetic policy of immigration and land settlement. Two million people were brought to Canada within twelve years and, during that period, Canada enjoyed an unprecedented measure of prosperity, industrially and agriculturally.

* * * *

Today Canada is facing another series of new and difficult conditions. These are due in part to changes in the world situation; in part to financial and other war burdens; in part to over-expansion in government and transportation services.

Every part of Canada is feeling the burden of these conditions. Each part feels most keenly the burden on itself and believes its own burden is larger than its share. This is an inevitable accompaniment of business depression in a country where natural barriers divide the people into widely separated groups.

Such a situation constitutes a clear call for leadership in analyzing Canada's present position and opportunities and in inaugurating the "Canada Forward" policy, which such analysis would show to be abundantly justified. Such leadership and such a policy would give new ground for hope and confidence, quicken anew our national spirit, unite our people in a common endeavor, stimulate new enterprise and sound development and bring about another and more sound and permanent period of prosperity.

With the object of stimulating serious thinking along these lines the Journal proposes to sum up in a series of articles its own conception of Canada's most pressing economic problems and possible aids in their solution.—Edmonton Journal.

THE CHANCELLOR SPEAKS PLAINLY.

Winston Churchill has scored a double triumph.

In his first speech in the House of Commons as Chancellor of the Exchequer he has won a popular victory as the champion of British rights. He has done something more than this. He has shown an appreciation for the strategy of politics by adopting as the policy of the Tory party the plan of Lloyd George and Sir John Simon. The only objection which Lloyd George can raise to Churchill's proposal is that the new Chancellor has stolen his thunder.

The reason for this success is obvious. In the first place the Churchill plan of dealing with international indebtedness has the earmarks of elementary justice. It is the application to international affairs of one of the basic principles of commercial business. The direct simplicity of the plan, another strong point in its favor, makes it readily comprehensible. Winston Churchill states clearly and emphatically that if any nation which owes money to Britain makes any payment to the United States that Britain will expect a proportionate payment to be made to herself. Nothing could be more equitable. There are to be no preferred creditors and no favoritism shown in the liquidation of international debts.

During the war Britain borrowed roughly about $5,000,000,000 and lent all of this and as much again to her Allies to help in prosecuting the war. England is paying her own indebtedness and is not receiving a penny-piece from her creditors. She does not claim that money should be paid to her solely on the grounds that she herself is paying a huge debt to America. The payment of that debt is a moral obligation which Britain has never for a single moment thought of evading. She may regard the terms of payment as hard, but that does not affect the ethics of the issue. If Britain never received a cent of the millions owing to her she would still regard her own indebtedness as a sacred obligation. The reputation for the strictest honesty in all her financial dealings which England has built up through centuries of trading is not to be jeopardized by the faintest breath of suspicion of default.

Last February France, which is Britain's largest creditor, made large loans to Central European states for her own political advantage. Britain did not object to the policy of this cultivation of friendship with Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and the Little Entente, but there was an expressed objection that it was not in accordance with commercial ethics for France to make no effort to repay Britain and yet at the same time to spend vast sums on international luxuries. This feeling of irritation was renewed a few days ago when France entered into negotiations with the United States to devote part of her share of reparations under the Dawes plan to the liquidation of French indebtedness to America.

England, through her Chancellor of the Exchequer, has made it abundantly clear that there is a limit to British generosity and that the debtor nations cannot continue to regard their debt to Britain as of no account. Britain also makes it clear to the United States that she claims a moral right in the settlement of debts as well as a legal right.

Discriminations between debtors who have no legal preference cannot be sustained in equity. France and Italy are warned that their debts to us cannot be brushed aside. If Britain can collect from her Allies and from Germany a sufficient sum to liquidate her own indebtedness to the United States she will wipe off the balance of the sums due to her by these Allies, but Britain has no hesitation in telling her creditors that if they come to any arrangement with the United States Britain considers herself entitled to her share of the proceeds.—Montreal Star.

The masquerade in Cavan Community Hall on Thursday evening was a great success. The crowd was large, coming from Cavan, Bethany, Millbrook, Mount Pleasant, Keene and other parts. The costumes were many and varied—some very pretty, some very comical. The music was supplied by the Fisher, Moncrief and Cardwell orchestra. A good supper was served. There were many spectators, who seemed to enjoy the evening almost as much as those who participated in the dancing. The proceeds of the evening was in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14. — New Heights for this season were reached today by prices of all deliveries of wheat, corn and oats, but selling chiefly to realize profits and to bring about week-end adjustment of accounts resulted in complete wiping out of the advance. Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ cent lower, May 1.67¾ to 1.67⅞ and July 1.47¾ to 1.47⅞, corn unchanged to 1⅛ cent down, oats ⅛ to ¼ cent off and provisions varying from two cents decline to 22 cents gain.

The turkey crop in western Canada is reported to be abnormally low but some 20,000 turkeys have already been handled and shipped by the Saskatchewan turkey pool. It is expected that shippers of dressed turkeys in Saskatchewan will net somewhere in the region of 26 cents per pound for No. 1 stock whereas shippers of live turkeys will receive about 19 cents per pound for No. 1. Several cars of these turkeys are new rolling Montreal. Storage stocks of poultry in the United States December last amounted to 87,975,000 pounds as compared with 66,350,000 pounds on the same day last year and 55,430,000 pounds on November 1st this year.

STATES DIVIDED OVER WATERWAY

St. Lawrence Project Involved With Chicago Drainage Canal Case.

IN U. S. COURT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.— The St. Lawrence Waterway, which is opposed in New York as threatening the supremacy of New York harbor in export trade, has got itself tied up in the question whether Chicago can continue to draw as much water from Lake Michigan as it is now taking through its drainage canal.

This issue was recently heard in the Supreme Court with all the States along the Great Lakes-to-Gulf route represented on the side that Chicago can take all the water it wants and with the Great Lakes States, which want the St. Lawrence Waterway, all appearing in favor of checking Chicago's diversion of Lake Michigan waters.

The suit of the United States against Chicago or rather against the Chicago Sanitary Corporation, illustrates how long it takes an issue like this to be settled at law.

As soon as it is finally settled by the Supreme Court it will go into politics, being another counter in the game that the Great Lakes States and the Mississippi Valley States are playing for the great trade route, which some day will connect the West directly by water with Europe.

Suit Started in 1908.

The Federal Government brought the present suit in 1908 to compel the Sanitary Commission to live up to its agreement by which it was permitted to draw 4,167 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan, a contract made in the eighties.

The army engineers estimate that now Chicago is taking 12,000 feet per second, and that this has lowered the level of Lake Michigan by several inches. Chicago takes more water from the lake, it is said, than is poured into it by its three largest tributary rivers.

After sixteen years of dilatory tactics, the suit has just now reached the highest court, after going against Chicago in the lower court. For six years, from 1908 to 1914, Judge K. M. Landis, now the baseball boss, held the case under advisement.

Being defeated in the lower court in 1923, Chicago appealed to the Mississippi Valley States by propaganda alleging that the real object of those who were trying to limit the draft upon Michigan's waters was to keep the level of the lake's high in favour of the St. Lawrence Waterway project.

Back Chicago's Claim.

The result is that the following States or organizations have taken sides with Chicago in favor of permitting the diversion of water from the lake to continue: Missouri, Louisiana, Tennessee, the Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis, the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, the New Orleans Board of Trade, the New Orleans Association of Commerce, the Mississippi Valley Association and the Chicago Association of Commerce, all are represented by counsel.

On the other side, associated with the Federal Government, are counsel representing Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Pennsylvania.

It is a grand fight. Last year the Sanitary Commission is reported to have spent $737,000 on lawyers' fees, consulting engineers and propaganda.

If the Sanitary Commission is defeated in the Supreme Court, and it seems to be a simple case of interpreting a contract, the fight will go into Congress, where there are always hostile blocs, the St. Lawrence Waterway blocs, in which the Great Lakes States are most active and the Lake-to-Gulf bloc, composed of the Mississippi Valley members, ably supported by States like New York and Pennsylvania with important harbors on the coast.

A BAD COLD DEVELOPED INTO BRONCHITIS

Mrs. Levi Ogden, Amherst Shore, N.S., writes:—"My baby girl had a very bad cold which turned to bronchitis, and she could not sleep at night for the coughing. I gave her everything I could think of to relieve her, but nothing seemed to do her any good, and she was not getting any better. I was advised, by a friend, to try

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

I did so, and after giving her a few doses I saw good effects so I kept on with it. I gave her two bottles, and her cough soon left her, and now she is as well as can be. I cannot praise 'Dr. Wood's' enough; it is certainly a wonderful medicine."

This preparation has been on the market for the past 35 years; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRITISH COLLECTOR FINDS RARE BOOKS

Unearthed Chestful of Old-World Reading Matter.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Dec. 15.—A number of rare old-world books, found quite by chance, are now on view in the Armstrong College Art School here. They were discovered by Lionel Robinson, an expert who, visiting Newburgh Priory, near Coxwold, for the purchase of interesting volumes, obtained information which led to his visiting another ancient domicile in the neighborhood.

Here, near the reputed tomb of Oliver Cromwell, Mr. Robinson found an old chest full of rare treasures, such as editions of Dante and Petrach, examples of fifteenth century printing by the first craftsmen in Rome, and specimens of the work of the great Venetian printers. There was a manuscript volume in small quarto, "Book of Hours," once in the possession of Mary, Queen of Scots, written on vellum partly in Latin and partly in French, with a needle work binding and embroidered with silver thread, supposedly the work of Queen Mary herself. Manuscript works included a 13th century "Vulgate" written in minute characters on vellum with illuminated initials and other decorations dated 1254; a "Saints Lives"; a 14th century "officium Beatae Mariae," and a French "Romaunt de Rose."

Other rare volumes included three folio copies of the "Iliad," printed by Bodini at Parma; a folio of the opera "Lactantius," printed in Rome in 146 with magnificent illustrations; an unusually rare illuminated manuscrip "The Office of the Blessed Virgin", the first edition of "Apollinaris Sidonius," printed in Milan in 1498, and the opera "Politianus," a production of the Aldine Press printed in Venice.

Most of these volumes were collected by the First Earl of Fauconberg, Ambassador at Venice, who married Mary, daughter of Oliver Cromwell, in 1657.

It's your smallest annual expense!

Do you realize that the smallest item in the family budget is the telephone bill? It averages only 1 per cent.

A careful study of families with incomes from $1500 to $6000 a year shows that food costs 43%, rent and taxes about 17%, clothes 13%, telephone 1% and miscellaneous 20%.

Apart from the time the telephone saves everyone, the mind requires the stimulus of contact with the world, as the body requires vitamines. Isolation cannot mean growth.

There are friends or customers in nearby towns you can easily reach by Long Distance.

DEBATE HELD AT HASTINGS FRIDAY

Subject Was, "Resolve That Men Spend More Money Than Women.

HASTINGS, Dec. 15.—A very interesting debate was held on Friday afternoon at short course classes. The subject taken was, "Resolved, that men spend more money on pleasure than women." The affirmative side was taken by Misses Mary Jones, Kathleen Barry and Evelyn Stewart, while the negative side was supported by Messrs. James Crowley and Kenny Cruikshank. One more was supposed to have taken part on the negative side, but was prevented from being present. The judges chosen were: By the affirmatives Miss Grace Orr; by the negative, Mr. Gordon Walsh, and the third chosen as critic, one of the instructors, Mr. C. A. Galbraith, B.S.A.

This was the first time that any of the debaters had ever taken up public speaking in any way and one and all deserve much praise in the capable way in which all took their parts.

Mr. C. Frey, of Norwood, acted as chairman.

Community singing formed a part of the afternoon's programme.

Another interesting programme is being prepared for next week, which will be the last one before the Christmas holidays.

Election Rumors.

As yet very little has been heard around the village as to what will be done about the municipal election. Some rumours have been reported that one or two candidates may come before the people for reeve, but no comments have been made as to who will run for councillors.

Election talk for municipal matters in the village appears to be much quieter than has been known in some time. However, once the municipal pot begins to boil the excitement may yet run high.

SPIRIT OF CANADA WAS HUGE SUCCESS

Pageant Put on by Bailieboro Women's Institute Well Attended.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 15.—A comparatively small audience was present on Thursday evening for the Pageant, "The Spirt of Canada," prepared by the Women's Institute of Bailieboro, and given under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas church.

The entertainment was worthy of forty or more characters taking part oughly enjoyable in every detail. The forty of more characters taking part marched from the lower hall through the centre asile of the auditorium upstairs to appropriate music, separating at the front of the hall so an equal number were accommodated in the wings on either side of the stage.

The stage itself was attractively arranged with background of dark red curtains, the framework of the centre entrance being twined with red, white, blue, and flag-trimmed. The two large thrones on right and left of the platform, occupied later by Canada and England, were also draped with flags of generous dimensions.

Two little page girls, Iva Campbell and Jean Falls, in dainty white dresses, rose-trimmed, and carrying silver baskets filled with roses, announced each character in turn, and gracefully drew the centre curtains for their entry upon the stage.

As an appropriate opening number, Mrs. F. Waterman sang, "Land of Hope and Glory." Miss Jean Aeglesson accompanying her and presiding at the piano throughout.

The Pageant centred about "The Spirit of Canada," (Miss Irene Jackson), who wore a flowing white robe, draped with the Canadian flag, her crown and long wand being trimmed with maple leaves outlined in silver. Her eulogy of the natural resources and splendid opportunities of the land she represented called forth warm applause from the audience, and concluded with an invitation to representatives of the various nationalities who have found homes, freedom, and prosperity within her borders, to appear and explain why they chose Canada as an abiding-place.

The drill given by the eight little "Maple Leaves," in vari-colored dresses, with yokes like flower petals, and carrying wands tipped with the maple leaf, and with the national emblem in the bandeaux worn on their heads, was a particularly pretty sight. "Canada" stood in the centre background during the drill and at its conclusion sang with the girls, "The Land of the Maple," after which the two pages led her to the throne on the right of stage. Those taking part in the drill were: Jessie Anderson, Marguerite Evans, Margaret Falls, Bessie Barnard, Helen Fry, Gertrude Golding, Dorothy Dawson, Jean Anderson. To appropriate music, and telling their story sometimes in song, and sometimes by the spoken word, the following characters come in turn, made obeisance to "Canada," and as the tale unfolded of liberty gained and homes established, national pride deepened, and the vision grew of the immense task this Dominion has on hand in assimilating these alien races:

Indians—Mrs. Jeffrey Jewison; Miss Maye Earle, Miss Margaret Greer; French girl, Miss Louie Jackson; Scotch girl, Mrs. Fred Wood; English girl, Mrs. Thompson; Irish girl, Miss Edna Byers; Scandinavian Group, Norwegian Miss Lottie Perrin; Finn, Miss Anna Fair, Swede, Miss Florence Barnard. Ukrainian, Miss Lottie Earl; Doukhobor girl, Miss Evelyn Johnston; Chinese Girl, Miss Phoebe Martin; Russian Girl, Miss Mildred White; Polish Girl, Miss Iva Breckenridge; Dutch Girl, Miss Edna Johnston; Hungarian Gypsies, Mrs. F. Waterman and Mr. John Willan; Japanese Lady, Miss Effie Perrin; Armeniah Girl, Miss Iva Sutton; Syrian Girl, Miss Ethel Perrin; Japanese Girls (drill): Marie Barnard, Vina Dawson, Kathleen Bateman, Esther Lang, Dorothy Falls, Isabel Davidson; American Lady, (Samantha Allen), Mrs. Douglas Fisher; Canadian Girls, Miss Jean Dawson, Miss Edith Deyell, and Miss Marian Dawson.

The costumes, which had evidently much careful thought, time, and trouble, added greatly to the effectiveness of the scene, and the final massing with "Canada" and the "Maple Leaves" in the foreground, was a dramatic climax that fittingly concluded the story of "blending that's true."

Rev. Canon Allen and A. J. Fallis, M.P.P. made brief addresses before the national anthem was sung, expressing their personal appreciation, and the appreciation of those who had enjoyed the programme with them, of the entertainment provided the young people and Women's Institute workers from a neighboring community.

The A.Y.P.A. served lunch to the visitors before they left for home.

Dreams

Business and love are often represented in dreams of boats and water voyages.

Favorable winds and seas, especially if loved ones are present, forecast happiness and love and marriage. But be cautious if the boat is disabled or there is a storm or signs of weather dangers.

To be riding on a ferry boat will call for a short journey with decisive action to win success.

If in a canoe and another person paddles, you will benefit through others.

If you are standing on or approaching a pier, it denotes a long journey. The weather reveals the outcome.

If in a sea wreck be prepared for disastrous experiences.

EFFECTIVE TRIMMING.

Very fine machine stitching done with a gold or silver thread is one effective form of trimming.

SANTA CLAUS BIG TOY SHOP

A Character Sketch for the Christmas Festivities.

Characters: Six tin soldiers in bright red coats, two circus clowns, donkey and elephant, black mammy with doll, gingham dog and calico cat, two teddy bears, six baby dolls with lighted candles. All parts to be taken by children except doll carried by mammy. Donkey and elephant can be omitted and live dogs substituted if available.

Scene: Toy shop, shelves large enough for children to sit on them. Tin soldiers very erect and stiff stand either side of door center stage. Santa enters and the tin soldiers salute stiffly.

Santa: Are you already to be packed tonight? Each one must be in place by Christmas morning. (Teddy Bear ambles over to him.)

Teddy Bear: Can't we have our play time? You said we could

Santa: Why certainly. Only wait for a little while. Two children, very good children, have begged to see you perform before I pack you away, I shall be very busy with my lists of good children; so they will watch here alone. Of course, they will go to bed early and then you may all play till the clock strikes twelve. Remember! (goes to door and calls) Oh Sally, Oh Pat! (Two children run and hug him and stare around the room.)

Sally: Why Santa! Oh aren't they lovely! Look at the mammy doll, Pat!

Pat: Gee Whiz! Look at those soldiers and the chorus and everything, Whee! (Santa exits.)

Mammy Doll: If you all will sit down, we'll do our part to afford you a munificent entertainment. (Sally and Pat express surprise at hearing the doll speak and sit down at the left of stage.)

Mammy: Step out, now you tin soldiers! (Music starts and Mammy beats time with her feet. Tin soldiers march and countermarch to any good march music, finish in former place.)

Mammy: Now comes de grand wrastling match 'twixt T. R. Bear and Theodore, the well known scrappers. Come forward youns! (Teddy Bears tumble each other about until one sneaks off, licked.)

Mammy: Next comes the sleepy time dance by all the baby dolls. (Baby dolls parade with lighted candles, soft music, and fianlly yawning come back to former places.)

Mammy: Now comes the biggest and best and funniest clowns in captivity. (Clowns come forward turning hand springs. Animals if any perform. Clowns end by dragging forward Gingham Dog and Calico Cat. Cat spits and Dog growls.)

Sally: O Pat, don't you remember? They're from Eugene Field's poem. Can you say it? How did it start? (Pat starts poem and stops as if remembering, then finishes Dog and cat follows in pantomine until they fight, when clowns rush forward and separate them.)

Mammy: Shush now. I'm gonna sing dis yere lamb chile to sleep. Sings lullaby "Sweet and Low" (or any other available). At end children are asleep, Santa comes in, sees them, chuckles.

Santa: Well, you've done your part; now play till twelve, then I'll come for you, (exit). Children stay in places asleep.

A Tin Soldier: Say, Baby Doll, let me have a candle, will you? (All take candles and solemnly do Baby Dolls march to same music.)

Mammy: Well I've always wanted to march, now I'm a going to, so there! An' all you lill fellows follow me. (Puts down doll for Gingham Dog to guard, assumes command of Baby Dolls and they all go through Tin Soldiers march. This should be made very funny.)

First Clown: Oh if this is the time to do just as we please me and Jim here, we're going to sing a lullaby and rock those Teddy Bears to sleep!

Teddy Bears: What do ya wanta pick on us for anyway? (Clowns pursue Teddy Bears around stage, catch them, holding them awkwardly, sing the same lullaby as Mammy sang, going off key worse and worse. Toward end Gingham Dog howls and Cat meows, making an awful noise. Santa rushes in.)

Santa: Great Scott! Is this the way you enjoy yourselves? It's a wonder you didn't wake those two kiddies.—All this noise and howling! Come, hurry, you're way past the time. The sleigh is waiting. (All go off stage, sleigh bells ring, off stage. Curtain.)

Scene 2.

Children awake before fireplace where stockings are hanging filled with presents. Pat rubbing eyes and yawning.

Pat: Sally, did you hear sleigh bells?

Sally (sleepily): Seems as if I did, had such a funny dream. All the toys were cutting up and Santa packed them off.

Pat: So did I dream that! Isn't it funny? Oh look, he's been here. Look at our stockings! Oh Merrie Christmas, Merry Christmas. (Grabs stocking and hugging it to him dashes around the stage, Sally follows with her stocking. (Curtain.)

(Note: Santa can now come before the curtain with his sack o' gifts for the school children or for those in the audience.)

CHRISTMAS CANDY

FONDANT

Two cups granulated sugar, ⅓ teaspoon cream of tartar, ½ cup water.

Put sugar and cream of tartar into a perfectly smooth sauce pan. Stir well and add water. Stir until well mixed and let stand a few minutes until the sugar melts. Put over a low fire and bring slowly to the boiling point. Watch carefully that sugar does not burn on the bottom of the pan.

Have a pan of cold water close to the pan of sirup. As crystals form on the sides of the pan wipe them off with a piece of cloth dipped in the pan of cold water. Dip frequently into the pan of cold water and swab few crystals at a time. Continue this until the sides are clear.

Cover and let boil rapidly for two minutes. Remove cover and swab off crystals. Boil uncovered, until a few drops tried in a saucer of cold water form a soft ball when picked up with fingers. Remove instantly from the fire and put the pan into a larger pan of cold water. Let stand until cool and beat with a wooden spoon until creamy. When too stiff to stir turn onto a large platter and knead until soft. Put into an oiled bowl, cover tightly and let stand twenty-four hours. Then flavor and use as wanted.

Chokers of gold or silver ball beads combined with pearls are worn by very discriminating women.

RUSSIA GETS THE "JOINERS" FEVER

Party and Trade Union Discipline Requires the Worker to Join Different Associations.

By FREDERICK KUH.

MOSCOW, Dec. 15.—Soviet Russia has become the country of "joiners." Stroll along any Moscow street, and you will be struck by the numbers of passers-by, wearing emblems and badges in their buttonholes.

Not that Kiwanis, Rotary, Amer can lodges and college fraternities have in stalled Moscow chapters. Closer scrutiny discloses that the insignia displayed in Moscow indicate membership in the host of revolutionary organizations which have sprung up under the Soviet regime.

The "joining" epidemic has brought forth questions peculiar to the new Soviet society. Membership dues which the ordinary citizen, especially the organized workmen, is obliged to pay in order to keep abreast of these gregarious times, run up to a tidy figure when the "joiner" draws up his family budget. Moreover, the continual social, political and vocational meetings, which the "joiner" is constrained to attend, leave him scant time for family or recreation. Even in Soviet Russia, where time was always measured in hours, days and years, but never in minutes, the demands of membership in innumerable societies has become a serious drain upon the life of the party member.

A coal miner in the Don Basin has written a letter on this subject to the central communist organ, "Pravda," which confronts the rulers of the country's destiny with a new puzzle. The letter evokes the question of how can the Soviet citizen live on a paltry twenty-four hours' time for one day.

The coal miner rightly points out that hundreds of thousands of his party comrades, has not become a "joiner" because his desire to become a member of this or that club or society is irresistible, but because "party or trade union discipline" requires that he join. Thus it happens that at a general meeting of the trade union, the union's president proposes that all the workers join the Volunteer Red Air Fleet Society. It would not be "the right thing" to refuse such a suggestion, and so the trade unionists "unanimously" vote in favor of joining the society. Similarly, every communist party member or trade unionist (and there are six and a half million of the latter) becomes, willy nilly, a member of a veritable flock of organizations.

The coal miner, writing in "Pravda," mentions that, in this manner, he has become a member of the Volunteer Red Air Fleet Society, the Volunteer Society for Chemical Warfare, the International Society for Relief of Political Prisoners, the Homeless Children's Aid Society, the Society for Combatting Illiteracy, the "Hands-off China" Society, the political school, the local club, the trade union and the Mutual Aid Society.

Each of his associations requires dues. Nor does this take into account special contributions, elicited for the Leningrad flood, for improving the district library or adding a coronet or fiddle to the village orchestra.

In addition, it is computed, the party "joiner" is obliged to attend an average of one special society meeting a day, each often lasting for hours.

"A member of the party," declares "Pravda's" correspondent, "scarcely finds a moment to spend with his family; he has no rest; he has little or no opportunity to read; and pleasures and amusements remain in the realm of might-have-been.

Many candidates for membership in the communist party are said to hav withdrawn their candidacy because of fatigue. Even full-fledged members are reported as "retreating" from the party, since they are unable to keep up the rapid pace of the "joiner" and do not wish to be outdistanced in the "joining scramble" by comrades with greater stamina.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Henry Franklin's Son had a real start

When Henry Franklin's boy Charlie entered the University, friends of the family wondered "how they did it."

Four years later, when Charlie Franklin hung out his "shingle" and was given a generous start by his dad, those same friends were amazed.

In truth, the Franklins could never have done these things for the boy if it had not been for the $5,000 North American Life Child's Endowment Policy which Henry Franklin took out when Charlie was a wee kiddie.

To-day, Henry Franklin congratulates himself.

The moderate premium payments were always easy to meet; and he was always secure in the knowledge that, even if he died, the North American Life Assurance Company would itself assume the payments and guarantee his boy the full $5,000 at the maturity of the policy.

These and other advantages of the North American Life "Child Endowment" Policy will appeal to you too.

The attached coupon will bring you our booklet "Child's Endowment" which will give you full information.

Three Canadian Churches Joined In New United Church Of Canada

Rev. C. Mackinnon, Who Visited Peterborough Yesterday, is Leader.

REASONS OUTLINED.

Act Comes Into Force on June 10 Next—Polity is Presbyterian in Origin.

OTTAWA, December 15. — The first step toward the creation of the "United Church of Canada" has been taken.

Under act of Parliament all Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches in the dominion are at liberty to say whether they will join the union or remain outside. Those who do not vote at all will be regarded as favoring it.

Six months hence—June 10—the act of Parliament with regard to property rights and incorporation will come into force.

The movement dates back to 1889, when the general assembly of the Presbyterian church appointed a committee to confer with other evangelical churches looking towards consolidation. Nineteen years later a definite plan was drawn up, submitted and approved. But the war delayed proceedings and it was not until this year that an enabling act could be passed.

Why They're Doing It.

The reasons for the union are broadly given as follows:

To eliminate wasteful duplication in mission fields at home and abroad.

To eliminate the strife and dissensions between sects of the Christian church which converts found it difficult to understand.

To effect economies in administration, especially in sparsely settled districts.

To put the administration of these churches on a sound footing.

The polity of the new church is Presbyterian in origin. There will be a series of graded courts composed of an equal number of lay and ministerial members. First there will be the session in the congregation, then the Presbyery with jurisdiction over districts, and next the conference. Above this there will be special courts meeting annually, such as the general council, the highest court and the supreme governing body.

Any church choosing to dissent may retain its congregational property. If a group of dissenters organizes a new church a share of the property of the united church will be allotted to them. As a general rule all property will go with its parent church into the union.

Their Total Strength.

A commission, consisting of three members from the united church and three from conference of non-concurring congregations and six more chosen by them both, will sit within nine months from June 10th to determine what share of the property shall be retained by non-concurring congregations.

The relative strength of the three uniting churches, according to the Dominion census of 1921, follows:

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP: Congregational, 30,574; Methodist, 1,158,744; Presbyterian, 1,408,812.

CHURCH Membership: Congregational, 12,762; Methodist, 407,264; Presbyterian, 369,939.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP: Congregational, 11,132; Methodist, 470,904; Presbyterian, 392,942.

DONATIONS (1923): Congregational, $329,821; Methodist, $9,209,275, Presbyterian, $9,187,512.

PROPERTY VALUE: Congregational, $2,189,000; Methodist, $57,773,010; Presbyterian, $4,268,074.

FIRE DAMAGES OTTAWA HOTEL

Some of the Guests Forced to Leave Building in Night Attire.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press).—Starting in the vicinity of the elevator shaft, fire early this morning caused damage of $250,000 to the Hotel Cecil here. Some of the guests were forced to make a hurried exit in night attire, while others were rescued in spectacular manner by firemen, who brought many through windows and down ladders. The temperature was two below zero when the first alarm was given at 2.29 a.m., and within a few minutes part of the roof fell in. At five o'clock the flames were brought under control.

The fire burned with tremendous intensity and proved most stubborn to combat.

The firemen and those who got out first devoted their attention to rescuing guests. This apparently was accomplished, as a check up of the hotel register revealed that all the guests whose names were entered had been accounted for. About twenty-five guests were registered.

W. F. Moore, Pembroke, who was overcome by smoke and taken to the hospital, was the last guest to be rescued. His condition is satisfactory. Mr. Moore was the only serious casualty, although one or two others suffered bruises or cuts from broken glass. In a number of cases the guests fled for safety, leaving all belongings behind, including clothing and jewellery.

SHE WAS MORE THAN 21; WITNESS ADMITTED 39

Reluctantly Divulges Age Upon Order of Court.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Supreme Court Justice Davis established a precedent recently by ruling that it was necessary for Mrs. Martgare Huntington Hall to tell her age. Mrs. Hall was being cross-examined by James Darcy, counsel for Spencer Waters, who is suing her for the proceeds derived from the sale of property on Washington Square West.

"How old are you?" said Mr. Darcy.

"I—I'm over twenty-one," she replied.

"I'm sorry, but I insist upon a more definite answer to that question. I must have your correct age," insisted Mr. Darcy.

"Must I answer that question?" appealed Mrs. Hall to Justice Davis.

"Is there any objection?" asked the Justice.

"No objection, but it's a personal matter isn't it?" asked Mrs. Hall.

"Is this matter material to you?" Justice Davis asked the lawyer.

"It is material to my examination," said Mr. Darcy.

"And you insist upon getting the answer?"

"I do, your honor."

Justice Davis then told Mrs. Hall that she would have to answer the question.

"I'll be thirty-nine next May," she admitted.

VICTIM'S FIANCEE REVEALED VAMPIRE

Girl Breaks Down in Telling of Identifying Suit Her Wooer Had Worn.

HANOVER, Germany, Dec. 15. — "Murder No. 9. Call in the witness."

A dead silence fell over the court room as the stern voice of the prosecuting attorney, Dr. Wagenschieffer, called the case linking America with the murder trial of Fritz Harrmann, confessed slayer of fourteen youths and charged with killing twice that many.

The case called was that of the killing of Richard Graef, nineteen, son by her first marriage of Mrs. William Drandorff, of Staten Island.

One of the witnesses was Otto Graef, Richard's brother, but it was a girl, whose feminine intuition led to the discovery of the crime and the subsequent confession.

She is Otto's fiancee, Anna Weidehaus, who has been a "little mother" to the three Graef sons since their mother went to America.

In their little tenement home, Anna and Otto told the fully story, only fragments of which were recited in court. Anna told of incidents up to the time Richard went to meet a man to get work. She went on:

"Nearly a year passed when I read of the Harrmann case. We had no clew, except that the paper said Harrmann always hovered near the station and lured youths home with him. I urged Otto to go to the police, but he was skeptical.

"But finally he went there and confronted Harrmann, who admitted he had sold such a suit as Richard had on to the barber.

"Otto went then to the barber, who was wearing Richard's suit. Then we knew Richard was the victim."

Here the girl broke down and wept.

ORIGINALS MISSING.

Photographic Copies of Letters in Home Bank Trial.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—The Crown and defence in the trial of R. P. Gough, Home Bank director, have been unable to locate the original copies of letters written by accused and the late H. J. Daly to M. J. Haney, Home Bank president, in 1918, protesting against Haney making loans without the sanction of the directors. The Crown this morning stated that it had only photographic copies of the letters, while W. N. Tilley, the defence counsel, said his were copies. Major Nash, accountant, remembered seeing the originals and thought they must now be in the hands of the accountants sent into the bank by the Department of Finance after the bank's failure.

The defence this morning went into dealings of J. Cooper Mason and General Mason with Pellatt interests. Major Nash said that General Mason owed Pellatt firms $128,000 when he died, and Cooper Mason owed them $104,000 when he died. Both were shareholders in Pellatt companies, and their stock reverted to Pellatt because of debts. Witness said that Mr. Gough had no connection with Pellatt interests.

Letter from Z. A. Lash to Sir Thomas White in 1918, stated that interest was being paid on the Pellatt loans by the bank and that the principal was being reduced. "That was not true," Major Nash said when questioned "A large amount of the interest was not paid."

Witness did not know from whom Mr Lash got information contained in his letter to the Finance Minister

Cross examination of Major Nash will continue this afternoon.

HOME-MADE CHRISTMAS GIFTS

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 15 (United Press).—The day when we could give mother a box of writing paper and sister an embroidered towel for Christmas has passed.

Every one wants something to WEAR. No gift is appreciated as much as some feminine furbelow which will add to one's wardrobe. Many of these little personal gifts can be made at home, and the woman who has time to devote to making Christmas gifts will know that her gifts are fully appreciated. They will not be passed on to someone else next Christmas or given as a tip to the maid.

First, there is the handkerchief. Handkerchiefs are not real gifts, you say? Well, a handkerchief which comes beyond the means of the average woman if purchased ready-made in the shops is always a lovely gift. The newest handkerchiefs this year are those which look like petaled flowers. They are made of fine colored linen, the centre being worked in French knots to form the stamen of the flower. The kerchief is round in shape, with the petals beginning in the middle and ending in petal shape at the border. The petals are outlined in small buttonhole stitch in self shade. When opened, the handkerchief looks like a lovely poppy or rose.

Another lovely gift is the little boudoire cap of net or lace which protects the sleek bobbed or marcelled hair at night. It is made like the bonnet of a baby, fitting tightly about the head with ribbon strings at the sides which tie under the chin. These are very becoming to the young flapper and do wonders toward keeping the back hair sleek and unruffled. One can made them as ornate as one wishes.

Litl bundles of sachet are always appreciated. ix little satin bags with fringed ends, each filled with sachet of a different odor and each made of a different shade of satin and tied together with ribbon, make a gift which requires little time and cost. When giving a handkerchief as a gift, it is nice to enclose a little bag of sachet.

Another useful gift is the co thanger made of ribbon and filled with sachet. These are so nice to hang the evening frock on. One simply wraps cotton about an ordinary wire hanger forming a pad and covers this with plain or flowered ribbon after enclosing some powdered sachet. The hook part of the hanger can be wrapped with narrow silk ribbon just as lamp shades are wrapped. One finishes the joining of the wider ribbon to he hanger with bows of ribbon.

Of course, hand-made lingerie is always appreciated. And if one does not care to make this lingerie, one can buy the ready-made garments and embroider a monogram on one corner which takes the ready-made look away from the gift. Somehow, one always likes gifts which have a personal touch and the monogram always gives this.

Then there are many types of little vanity bags, powder puff cases, etc., which can be made very easily. One only has to visit the shops to find them. Just now one can buy pastel shades of velvet studded with brilliants or embroidered in gold or silver which would make lovely little bags for the powder-puff and lip-stick. An eighth of a yard of material will make two such bags and they can be lined in metal cloth.

Shoe buckles are very popular for evening wear just now and they would make an exceedingly nice gift for the girl who likes fancy evening slippers. The prettiest of these are of tiny rhinestones or amber stones. While buckles are being worn, they are small rather than large.

Just now the head-bandeaux of silver or gold leaves are popular with the young miss or matron. The most costly of these have their leaves made of gold or silver cloth and each leaf is studded with tiny pearl beads.

Recently I met a young woman who purchased six of the plain silver leaf bandeaux. She informed me that she would bead them herself, covering each little leaf with the tiniest of seed pearls Surely her friends will appreciate these gifts. While the plain bandeaux costs but a dollar, the beaded one in the shops cost a great deal more.

BISHOP SWEENY ROTARY'S GUEST TALKS SUCCESS

His Lordship Outlines Some of the Essentials to Successful Career.

A SENSE OF HUMOUR.

Men Not Expected to Go Round With Long Faces He Tells Members.

"Some Secrets of Success" was the topic chosen by His Lordship Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, for a most eloquent and inspirational address to the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day. In addition to a splendid turnout of the members, a large number of the ministers of the city were guests and the meeting was one of the most enjoyable for some time.

Rotarian Rev. W. Harold Young was chairman of the occasion and the Bishop of Toronto was introduced neatly by His Worship Mayor J. J. Turner.

Bishop Sweeny, in beginning, pointed out that he had been interested in reading the list of things considered as essential to success by some of the great men of the world, quoting among others Gladstone and General Gordon. Particularly he had been struck by the place the letter "S" occupied in our language and he had chosen his secrets of success from among words beginning with that letter.

In the first place it was essential to start straight and to keep straight. The second secret he considered was stick-to-it-iveness, to keep on striving until the goal was attained. Then came self suppression, which he considered to be the very essence of such organizations as the Rotary club, whose motto was "Service before self," and the members of which he was sure carried that idea into their everyday lives. The suppression of self, the putting on oneside of one's own interests that others must be saved, was strongly emphasized by the speaker.

Next His Lordship advanced as a secret of success the savouring of speech with the salt of wit and humour. God never intended people to go round with long faces; if they had not been expected to enjoy humour they would never have been given the ability to enjoy it. And in this connection Bishop Sweeny gave some very amusing examples of wit and humour.

Finally he urged as the most important secret of all and one that should be retained if all the others were forgotten, secret supplication for strength. He advised his hearers to take their troubles and worries to Him who after all was the the only one who could really help.

Rotarian S. R. Armstrong voiced the thanks of the Rotary Club to the speaker of the day the audience indicated how much Bishop Sweeney's address had been appreciated.

Bro. W. Baptie, who had been fished for many times during the evening, was finally landed by Bro. W. Miller, "an amateur fisherman."

A CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The Canadian Girls in Training classes of George Street Sunday School, held a jolly Christmas party Friday night. Seventy of the girls dressed as little children, enjoyed themselves as Children do before fore Christmas. First there were games in the big Sunday School room and then a grand march at the end of which the doors and the children romped in with shrieks of ecstasy and delight to find Christmas decorations in abundance and pretty Christmas tree. Mrs. Lewis and Miss E. Bennet told Christmas stories, and Alta. Bartlett and Edith Marshall contributed musical numbers to the programme. Soon came an announcement that Santa Claus was coming and in he came, but his sack was empty. Santa told the girls it was too soon for him to be giving presents, but he had come to tell them about how short of gifts he was going to be this year, and to see if they could help. Then parcels came from the Christmas tree and every hidden corner of the room and soon Santa's pack was full. After thanking the girls Santa presented each with a sugar stick and was off on his way, enabled by last night's party to take presents to many whom he would otherwise have had to miss.

Christmas carols and refreshments in charge of Miss S. Coon's class brought the happy evening to a close.

ART ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Women's Art Association was held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, when a Christmas programme, prepared by members of the Little Theatre Dramatic Study Club, was given. The rooms were appropriately decorated, under direction of Miss Maude Rush, with evergreens, miniature Christmas trees and lighted candles .

The reading of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" was a very enjoyable feature of the programme, members of the Dramatic Study Club reading a stave in turn. Those reading portions were Mrs. G. E. Porter, Mrs. L. J. Pettit, Mrs. Dickenson, Mrs. N. D. Seaton and Miss Borbridge. Mrs. N. D. Seaton gave a short introduction to the reading of the play by telling how famous this little masterpiece of the great writer had become he having postponed the writing of his large book, "Martin Chuzzlewit" to write the little Christmas story that has become one of the most popular books in the world. One of the original printed copies with four woodcuts and engravings belongs to Mr. Newton, president of the Dickens' Club of New York ,and the original manuscript in Dickens' own writing is in J. Pierpont Morgan's library.

At the conclusion of the reading of the story, Mrs. W. McKee Bingham sang: "Ring out, Wild Bells," by Gounod, with accompaniment by Mrs. Porter.

Tea was served, with dainty table decorations in a large central silver vase of red carnations and small corner pieces of the same flowers, and red candles. Mrs. C. Webber and Mrs. Bingham poured tea, assisted by members of the Dramatic Study Club.

FIRE AT STIRLING.

Garage and Driving Shed Endangered Village.

STIRLING, Dec. 15. — A strong east wind was of material assistance in preventing a blaze in the garage and driving shed of B. Bellshaw, which broke out late Friday night, from endangering the whole of this village. Fanned by the gale, and fed with three tons of hay in the loft, the building blazed merrily for a time, but the prompt response of the fire brigade resulted in an automobile and tractor being salvaged, although the premises were destroyed. The loss, which is stated to be $1,000, was covered by insurance. No explanation as to the cause of the fire could be given.

Friday night's conflagration was the third and most serious to occur here within two weeks. The first, caused by overheated pipes, was in the Liberal Committee Rooms, when the damage amounted to $50. Then a new house in process of erection by Recve C. D. Maguire caught fire from some unknown cause, and the prompt action of a baker on his way to work early in the morning in calling the fire brigade saved most of the property. The loss in this case was $125.

Alex Donald Is Recovering From Effects of Accident —Social Events.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 15.—Mr. Alex. Donald, Sebastapol Street, who had a serious accident, falling from a roof in Stirling, six weeks ago, is able to be around some, and was down street for the first time on Tuesday night. While not altogether better, he is able to walk with assistance.

New Chairs Arrive.

The new chairs, three hundred in number, for the assembly hall of the new High School, which were ordered some few weeks ago, came on Thursday and will be placed ready to have a plan made out for the play next week, which will be held in this hall. A beautiful new velour curtain is being put up on the stage, and will be placed at the same time as the chairs.

This will make an up-to-date assembly hall for all the school concerts and others which may be held there.

Mrs. Chas. Henry, of Percy, just at the line between Seymour and Percy, has been ill for about three weeks, and is very low. Mrs. Hendry is the mother of Mr. S. J. Fisher, of Belleville, late of Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. James Jones, who moved into Campbellford from their farm, some months ago, and lived on Canrobert Street, moved on Thursday from there to Sebastapol Street, into the house owned by Mr. J. A. Frederick. Mr. Frederick has just made several improvements in this house, since the sewer and waterworks have been put up that street.

Social Evening.

A very pleasant social evening was spent at the Lodge rooms of the Duchess of Clarence True Blue Lodge on Thursday night. On invitation from the ladies of the lodge the men from the Duke of Clarence Lodge were present. During the evening a splendid programme was given, and two contests, one a "tree," and the other a "flower" contest. Those present were divided into four groups, according to their birthdays, and the group getting the most correct answers received two boxes of chocolates for each contest. Group two received the boxes for the first and group three for the second. Mr. Thos. Dilworth, of Meyersburg, was chairman for the evening.

In his jovial manner he announced the programme, which was as follows:

Selection from fife and drum band (composed of Messrs. Geo. Frederick, G. Webber, A. Phillips, H. Ayrhart and C. Battman).

Selection on guitars—H. Ayrhart and W. Blue, and encore to which they responded.

A recitation. "The Bachelor's Lament," Miss B. Ayrhart.

Reading—"Mrs. Smart Learning How to Skate," Mrs. W. Rutherford.

Violin solo—Mr. Gerald Labrash and an encore.

Another guitar selection and an encore.

Reading—"A Talk to John," Mrs. Thos. Ayrhart.

Recitations by Master Wallace Rutherford and Master Arnold Phillips.

Last, but not least, a vocal solo by the chairman.

Refreshments were served by the ladies, to which every one did ample justice.

After these were served, the chairman called on some of the gentlemen present for short addresses. Messrs. H. E. Cassan, Mack, W. Rutherford.

The company then called on their Worshipful Mistress, Mrs. Alfred Tripp, for a few words, to which she replied.

On motion of Mr. H. E. Cassan and Mr. George McDonald, a vote of thanks was tendered the ladies for the splendid social evening, programme and lunch. This was tendered by a hearty clapping of hands.

The evening all through was pleasant and full of good fellowship and all hoped there would be more of these evenings. There were between sixty and seventy present.

Just before closing with a selection from the fife and drum band and the National Anthem. Mr. George Webber requested all members of both lodges to meet in the lodge room next Sunday morning at a quarter past ten, as they are to march to Christ Church and join in worship there at eleven.

Mr. Wilkins has been busy this last week surveying the north part of Kent street, from Church street and also some of the property on the hill, some of which is being purchased by Mr. Henry Redden. Mr. Redden has started a new house on some of this property on Kent street. Mr. James Redden's house on Church street has been improved by having it bricked.

The sewer on Kent and Napier streets, is being dug this week and already those living on Kent street say that the water which has always been in the cellars is already disappearing. This will be a great improvement alone as some were put to great inconvenience on account of the water, besides being a menace to the health of the residents in this part of the town.

her family and hard working all the time."

Mrs. Frances Fisher, aunt of the defendant, testified the village long had suspected its pastor because of his fastidiousness, manifested "in a daily shave and the use of talcum powder."

The parishioners had noted how frequently their pastor and Elsie met in the aisles of the church, and conversed after the services. Mrs. Fisher continued:

"So I went to Elsie and told her what they were saying about her and the minister. I told her to get straightened out."

The prosecutor asked:

"What did she say?"

"She told me I didn't understand her family troubles. I told her no matter what the trouble was, it was up to her to behave so that people would stop talking. Then Elsie began to cry, and asked me if I believed what they said."

"That was not the question, I told her. The proposition was to stop the talk."

Before that testimony was given two more of Hight's confessions had been admitted into evidence.

The Rev. E. C. C. Hall, the district superintendent for the Methodist church, said he called upon Hight in jail after he had made his first confession, asserting that Hight had administered poison to Sweetin and Mrs. Hight "to end their suffering from ptomaine poisoning."

The witness quoted himself as saying to Hight:

"That's nonsense. No one would believe that. For the good of your soul tell the whole truth."

It was then according to the minister that Hight broke down and confessed.

DIVISIONS ARE SORE REPROACH

"Ralph Connor" Deals With the Subject of Church Union.

TORONTO, Oct. 15—At a Unionist meeting Sunday afternoon, which packed Victoria Presbyterian Church to the doors, Rev. W. Gordon, D.D. (Ralph Connor(declared that the entire Prebyterian world had given its cordial approval and blessing to the United Church of Canada. He cited in proof of these resolutions passed by the easterners Western sections of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance; a resolution by the general assembly of the United Free Church of Scotland, a statement submitted to the general assembly of the established Church of Scoland, and a resolution passed by the Presbyterian Church of England, the mover of which was no less a personage than Dr. Carnegie Simpson.

Dr. Gordon read a remarkable letter, recently received from Dr. Cathels, moderator of the general assembly of the established Church of Scotland, which in part is as follows:

"No one can think the present state of things a happy one. Our divisions are a sore reproach to us. They are a source of weakness and wastefulness, and they are utterly unnecessary on any grounds of reasonableness. Instead of presenting a united front in the conflict for truth and righteousness which we are called upon to wage, we are presenting a sadly divided front, and wasting our resources, and frittering away our time. That is indisputable; and it is a strange mentality that would defend it. And just as strange is the mentality that would seek to perpetuate the present state of things, and would not gladly see the end of it, because it is unwilling to sacrifice some old and now essential things in the interest of the things that are essential and of eternal moment.

"Surely, in the providence of good, we can conserve all that is best in our now divided churches for the church that is to be, without lamenting the loss which, in the past, has emphasized and intensified our disunity from our fellow Christians.

"Here in Scotland we are watching your movement with intense interest. Your setting an example to the whole Christian world. You are seeking to demonstrate to that world how brethren can dwell in the unity of a common faith, and in undivided loyalty of service to one living and eternal Lord. That is a great, and brave enterprise, and in the blessing of God—the God and father of us all—cannot fail you."

CORRIGAN

II—THE YELLOW BAND

Corrigan slung his pony's reins over a post and stepped on to the veranda of Jacobson's bungalow. His keen, grey eyes took in the lavishness of the interior decorations which lay behind the bright red sun blinds; sumptuous carpets, long chairs piled with cushions in bright leather covers; smooth walls, painted white and hung with trophies of the chase; a carved Moorish table with a silver box, open to show a lining of sandalwood; a Turkish hubble-bubble; a great standard lamp with a shade of Japanese silk. The odour of a soft, sickly perfume assailed Corrigan's nostrils. He snorted contemptuously and turned to where a native girl squatted in a far corner, rolling cigarettes with a rapidity that took the Englishman's breath away. So absorbed was she in her occupation, that she did not notice the broad figure in white duck until his shadow, cast by a truant ray of tropical sunlight, fell across her knees.

She started and looked up. She gathered cigarettes, tobacco and papers into a piece of sacking and thrust it behind her. One slender white tube escaped the folds and dropped to the floor at Corrigan's feet. He picked it up and examined it curiously.

It was as firm almost as if it had been turned out by a machine. As he let it revolve between his great fingers, he saw that the paper was of excellent quality, white except for a faint yellow ring at one end. He tapped it thoughtfully on his thumb-nail and the girl rose suddenly to her feet—and snatched it from him.

She stood for a moment her lithe form trembling with the fury of an enraged panther, then slipped suddenly through an open doorway, and was gone from his sight.

A Chinese boy, in white coat with pigtail tucked into a side pocket, appeared at a doorway.

"Where's the Tuan-Besar?" demanded Corrigan curtly, in Malay.

The boy spread out his hands.

"The Tuan-Besar eats the air," he explained, apologetically.

"I see?" reflected Corrigan. He turned abruptly on his heel and went slowly down the short flight of steps to where his pony waited restlessly, lashing at tormenting flies with its unclipped tail. At the foot of the flight he paused.

"Tell him the Tuan Corrigan called," he said. "That's all."

He swung into the saddle and rode slowly toward the wire fence which divided his estate from Jacobson's.

As he reached the barrier, he turned his pony's head westward, noting the points where the stout posts had been bodily removed and cunningly replanted, so that his neighbour's newly planted rubber encroached more and more upon his own land. A dangerous look came into Corrigan's eyes. By a forlorn strip of virgin jungle which still fringed the railway line, where monkeys chattered and fought in the branches, he caught a group of Jacobson's coolies red-handed, and bore down on them, boiling with righteous wrath. He sent them scattering in all directions, uttering guttural cries of mingled fear and protest. A mandor who dozed under a red paper umbrella with an oily yellow lining, woke to find the planter towering over him.

"Get up, you swine!" shouted Corrigan.

The Chinaman scrambled to his feet.

"Put back that fence where you found it, or, by heaven, I'll kick you from one end of the Kabun to the other!"

The man looked nervously over his shoulder, hesitating. Suddenly he caught the light in Corrigan's grey eyes. There was something in that light that told him further delay would be unwise. He rescued his umbrella from the pony's hoofs and began shouting orders to the score of half-nude creatures that stood in a semi-circle gaping at the newcomer.

The posts had been driven firmly into the soil in their original positions, and Corrigan, one hand at his hip, was placidly superintending the replacing of the wire, when a voice came suddenly from the trees ten yards higher up the slope.

Corrigan wheeled round to face a tall man in khaki drill, with a face like yellow parchment, a broad fleshy nose, and thick lips surmounted by a wispy black mustache. Jacobson, his shoulders stooping over the head of his mount, regarded the intruder with a sardonic smile, like a bird of ill omen.

"Mr. Corrigan, I believe," he said again, in a smooth voice.

"Afternoon," replied Corrigan frigidly and turned his broad back to issue further instructions to Jacobson's men.

"Look here, Mr. Corrigan," shouted the other. "Are you aware these are my men?"

Corrigan, satisfied that the wire was taut, looked back at the infuriated proprietor.

"Just as much as you are aware that this is my land you're encroaching on, my friend," he replied calmly. "Anything to say?"

Jacobson urged his pony a couple of paces toward his neighbor.

"Clear off my estate," he commanded. "Before I kick you off!"

Corrigan smiled broadly.

"You've pinched so much of my land, Mr. Jacobson," he told him, "that you can hardly complain if I stay on a bit of yours a few moments longer." His eyes blazed. "As for forcing me to quit, old son, I assure you you'd be a damn sight bigger fool than I think you are—to try it on." He continued calmly, staring until the other was forced to avert his gaze. "I looked in at your boudoir this afternoon to tell you two things. The first's a purely private matter. I caught five of your scoundrels tampering with my water supply early this morning. I thought you'd like to know the case is now in the hands of the district officer at Putatan. The second I was asked to transmit to you by the D.O. himself. There are rumors of a native rising which might prove serious. A gentleman, styling himself Zarriman the Terrible and posing as a Mahometan prophet, or something of the sort, has succeeded in effecting a landing on this island and working up the tribes into a fanatical frenzy against the white settlers. As far as can be gathered, he had an extremely effective intelligence department and is kept supplied from some mysterious source with pretty accurate information as to our respective movements. Any information as to his movements or the identity of his agents will be welcomed by the commissioner."

Jacobson straightened himself in his saddle, his lower jaw working ceaselessly, as if he were chewing something.

"You had the damned effrontery to lay hands on my men!" he jerked out suddenly, emphasizing each word.

"I've more respect for my hands, old son. My watchman, acting under my instructions, took your damned rascals to justice."

Jacobson boiled.

"You dirty hound!" he spluttered and, spurring his mount, bore down on Corrigan, his heavy riding stock aloft.

The light of battle came into Corrigan's eyes. With a deft movement, he brought his pony round, ducked to avoid the descending stock, and sent Jacobson headlong from the saddle, his riderless beast, with stirrups dangling, plunging madly toward the sea-shore.

Jacobson rolled over on to his back, sprawling ridiculously.

"You'll pay—for—this, Corrigan!" he moaned.

"You'll have to get up pretty early in the morning if you hope to catch me napping," he assured him. He touched his pony's flanks. "And take my tip, Mr. Jacobson. Don't monkey with my wire! Here's my hand, if you want it. If you're a man—you'll take it while it offers; if you're a fool—you won't; but I fancy you'll live to be sorry for it."

Jacobson scrambled to his feet, knocking the dust from his breeches.

"I'll kill you, Corrigan!" he spat out venomously, his hand feeling for his hip pocket.

A single strand of wire showed between two stakes where the work of reconstruction was still in progress. Corrigan took it at a bound. He waved one hand aloft derisively, as Jacobson shot—and shot wide.

As he cantered through his own trees, well weeded and set at regular intervals, he smiled strangely to himself.

Jacobson, white to the lips, paused at the door of his room to throw a silver box with a sandalwood lining at a black girl who sat in a far corner of the veranda, rolling white cigarettes with a faint yellow band at one end.

* * * * *

If occurred to Corrigan as he ladled hot water over himself from an enormous earthenware jar, that the quarrel between himself and his neighbor had been, to say the least of it, ill-timed. Any time of the day or night Zariman and his posse of head-hunters might swoop down uopn the bungalows of these lonely whites, and he scarcely considered Jacobson big-hearted enough to bury the hatchet in an emergency. For every other reason but this, he felt profoundly thankful that he had brought the affair to a head.

This Jacobson deliberately had invaded his territory; he was on the fringe of a zone where agents of a hostile power heaped coals upon the ever-smouldering volcano of religious fanaticism; two long, weary miles of rubber-planted slopes stretched between him and the bungalow of his first assistant. He could not stomach the idea of an endless planting and replanting of the disputed barrier. It was for these reasons that he discarded the habitual sarong and singlet he usually affected for his solitary evening meal, and put on riding breeches of cord and stout leather leggings. He resolved to put his case before Browning, the D.O. at Putatan, and get the matter straightened out once and for all.

He set out on foot, a tall Pathan walking in front with a swinging lamp, and took the path which led through waving coco palms to the flooded padi fields beyond. A cool breeze blew steadily across the open lands and the starlit heavens were flecked with long, luminous clouds. For the first half hour not a soul passed them. It was when they swung on to a jungle track and the rays of the hurricane lamp shone more brightly in the dense blackness where the interwoven branches obscured the moon, that the atmosphere seemed charged with electricity. The watchman sensed it, for he slackened his pace until Corrigan had almost come up to him. Strange noises came from the undergrowth, and once a tall shadowy form appeared on the path before them, vanishing like a ghost at their approach. From the far distance floated the deep, ceaseless reverberation of native gongs.

There was something afloat that Corrigan did not understand. As they left the trees and felt the soft, springy turf beneath their feet, in the clearing where Browning's tall building lay outlined a score of yards in front, Corrigan came suddenly to a halt and slipped his fingers over the magazine of his automatic.

A group of five or six dark figures broke from a clump of bushes and scattered like rabbits for the cover of the virgin forest. One of these forms, taken completely by surprise, plunged in panic between Corrigan and the Pathan with the lamp. Corrigan, his extended hand missing the man by inches, saw that he was tall and of unusual girth; his skin shone in the lamp light as if it had been greased, and he wore only a loin-cloth. At his belt swung something round and bulky and a long flapping object, which the planter knew was a sword, in a bamboo sheath.

As Corrigan stood staring after him, gripped by a queer sense of dawning fear, he felt a drop of moisture on his cheek. He touched it with his finger. It was sticky and warm. He called out for the lamp. As the watchman held the light toward him, he recoiled in horror. His tunic and breeches were spattered with drops of blood!

The Pathan remained like a bronze statue, staring at the phenomenon with bulging eyes. Corrigan broke the spell.

"Push on," he commanded, as if it were a matter of everyday occurrence.

He left the man at the foot of the steep flight of wooden steps, and went up them leisurely, lighting the tobacco in the bottom of his pipe. The veranda was deserted, but an oil lamp swung from a beam overhead. He tapped with his stick on the door of Browning's living room, and entered without waiting for an answer.

The room was stale with the smell of tobacco smoke and of a strange, persistent odor, sickly and sweet. Directly in front of him, a cane-bottomed chair lay overturned. Sprawling across the table, his outstretched arms resting in a crimson pool which overflowed on to the square of worn rush matting, lay the headless body of a white man.

REAL PRINCESS WITH SIAMESE DANCERS

By Alice Rohe

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 15—(United Press)—Lovers of the dance and conversationalists on the significance of Terpsichore will miss something if they do not not see the Royal Siamese dancers on tour in this country.

Almost simultaneously with the return of the great Russian dancer Mordkin with a decidedly changed interpretation of dancing than that he gave fourteen years ago, and with Pavlowa clinging to the old school just a few blocks away, these Siamese at the Hippodrome have an added significance.

There is a real Princess at the head of the troupe which comes direct from the palace of the King's brother. All of which ought to add interest in democratic America.

For those who know of Indo-Chinas dances only through the European and Americanized fantastic interpretations these primitive dances will be somewhat of a surprise. One of them dates back 5,000 years. The costumes, rich and ornate, expressive of those early forms seen in ancient idols from India and Burma possess even greater antiquity.

One can trace an unbroken line through the centuries from the stage of the Hippodrome back to those primitive examples of art and ornamentation.

From modern dancing standards these Siamese seem not so much dancers as posturers. The expressive use of fingers and hands is the main characteristic.

One dance which represents the lesser gods and godesses appearing before Indra, the King of Paradise, reveals an ancient legend. Girls take the parts of boys as well as of their own sex in these dances. One of the finest is by the Princess Luang Sud Chitra, who shows the emotions of a young Burmese warrior proud and triumphant over the possession of his weapon and uniform.

The men in the troupe, aside from furnishing the primitive music—largely tom toms—give exhibitions of the Siamese national game, Takraw is to the Siamese what football is to Americans. A ball the size of a grapefruit and made of perforated rattan, is used in this game in which the hand never touches the ball. The head, shoulder, foot, leg, arm—but never the hand—give these Siamese boys rare opportunity for agility and grace.

The Siamese dancers in their first trip to America deserve more serious artistic consideration than a brief appearance in vaudeville accords them.

SANTA CLAUS USES THE RADIO

Until this year little boys and girls could only write to Santa Claus; post their letters and trust to the postman to deliver them. But this year the Radio Department of the Canadian National Railways made an arrangement with Santa Claus and letters from boys and girls, all over Canada, are being broadcast from the C. N. R. Radio Stations to Santa in his workshop in the Far North. Santa acknowledges, each evening by radio, that he is hearing what his little friends have to tell him.

Although he is a very busy man, Santa Claus visited every broadcasting station of the Canadian National Railways, in Moncton, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton, telling his little friends to write him, care of the C. N. R. Radio, and thousands of letters from boys and girls have been received and broadcast to Santa.

The picture you see here was taken in one of those stations as Santa was speaking to his boys and girls through the microphone, which is the instrument used to send the sound of the voice dancing out over the world on the radio waves.

Down below you see one of the big engines that the Canadian National Railways are going to lend Santa Claus to carry his bags of toys, if there is not enough snow for his reindeer. These are the biggest and most powerful freight engines in the whole of the British Empire. They can easily pull a train of 150 loaded freight cars; so you see, Santa Claus will have no trouble bringing all his toys, no matter if there isn't any snow on Christmas Eve.

IN DECEMBER HEAVENS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—(United Press).—December is the banner month in which to study the heavens. Mira, the first variable star ever discovered way back in 1596, comes into view in December for a short time, says the American Nature Association.

Pollux, one of the twenty brightest stars, can be seen this month. Jupiter comes into conjunction with the sun on Dec. 22 and will then pass to the eastern morning sky. Venus and Saturn are visible in the east before sunrise.

Mira is found in Cetus, is known as Omicron Ceti, and is a long period variable star. It suddenly comes into view in December and is a star of the second or third magnitude when at its brightest.

Lying directly across the meridian in the South is the huge constellation Cetus—the Whale—the monster sent to ravage the shores of Ethiopia to satisfy the grudge of the enraged sea nymphs who had been offended by Queen Cassiopeia. In the far North is the Queen herself and Cepheus, King of Ethiopia. Andromeda, their daughter, who was chained to the rocks as a sacrifice and to save the kingdom, lies to the south and southwest of these groups and high in the heavens.

Nearby is Pegasus, the winged horse that brought Perseus to the rescue, stirring up the dust that forms the Kily Way in his haste. Perseus is found next to Andromeda on the east. There are five stars of the first magnitude, Capella, Aldebaran, Pollux, Betelgeuse and Rigel now in view in the Eastern part of the heavens and a still greater number of stars of the second magnitude.

One of the constellations visible is Taurus, The Bull, which is easily located by means of its two well-known clusters, the Pleiades, which contains seven stars that can be seen without the aid of a telescope if one has good eyesight, and the Hyades, which outline the forehead of the bull in the form of a V

Aldebaran, the deep-reddish star in this group is the bull's fiery eye and his long horns are tipped by two bright stars, one of the second magnitude, the other of the third, South of Auriga and North of Orion. On the Southern branch of the V is the interesting star, Theta, which can be seen to be a double star without the aid of a telescope.

Gemini is easily located by means of its twin stars, Castor and Pollux, which are but a short distance apart and now well over in the northeast. Pollux, the brighter of the two, is rated as one of the twenty brightest stars in the heavens. Orion is known by its Belt, which is made up of three stars of the second magnitude in a straight line, equally spaced, and by the quadrilateral of stars that outline the body, with the red Betelgeuse at the Northeastern corner and the brilliant diamond-like Rigel diagonally opposite in the Southwestern corner.

The constellation of Eridanus or, as it is called, Fluvious Eridanus, which means River Eridanus, fills the greater part of the Southeastern heavens. It extends far below the horizon into the southern hemisphere where its brilliant first magnitude star Achernar, meaning End-of-the-River, marks the end of its course. In our latitude it can be traced by a line of stars of third and fourth magnitude, running from a point near the brilliant Rigel in Orion toward the Southwest and South until it disappears below the horizon.

The Great Square in Pegasus is still high in the heavens and over in the Southwest is the planet Mars.

Sidelights on Men and Women in the Public Eye

THOUGH THEY HATE HIM STILL THEY ADMIRE HIM

Debs Will Step Into the Limelight Again in a Few Months—A Glimpse of Him To-day

TO a grey frame house in a little frequented street in Terre Haute turn the eyes of the broken-hearted and the discouraged. There lives a quiet, mild-mannered man whose name is known the world over. He is Eugene Debs, Socialist, who spent three years in prison and who is back home again after four months in a sanitarium.

Born in aristocratic circles, one of the oldest and most respected families of Indiana, he has spent his life among the working classes, fighting and going to prison for his beliefs.

To most of the world the name Debs brings to mind a picture of a hard-boiled, bomb-throwing, riot-starting ruffian. Nothing could be farther from his character. Mr. Debs is a large man, broad-shouldered, gaunt. But he's not fierce-looking. His blue eyes are friendly and mild. His smile is kind. His manner pleasing and soothing. After talking to him a few minutes one knows why the broken-hearted, the hopeless and the discouraged go to him. For to him nothing is hopeless. He is full of courage, determination and faith.

Debs at present is busy on a book of prison stories which will be published in the spring. The material for these stories was gained through his own prison experience. Of these experiences he says:

"I was not in prison, not my soul. At my will those prison walls could vanish, the bars melt into thin air. I could roam the universe. But I suffered with those about me, those who could not escape that prison, those who were the victims of circumstances and who didn't understand.

"Those prisoners were not criminals because they were just naturally mean and different from the rest of humanity. With the right treatment practically everyone of them could be reclaimed for society. Love, kindness, understanding is what they need. I know. I tried it on them and it worked.

"When I first went to prison there was a man there whom everyone was afraid to approach. He was in for murder, and was a rough, wild fellow. But I went up to him, called him by name and said:

"'We are brothers. With your training and in your environment I would have been what you are. With my training and my environment you would have been what I am. We aren't really different.'

"We became great friends. I would give anything I possess, five years of my life, if they would let me try it."

Eugene V. Debs

Debs has just returned from a sanitarium in Elmhurst, Mass. Four months ago the doctors said he would die.

"But in my heart was the determination to live," he said.

The old-fashioned grey frame house, where Debs makes his home in Terre Haute, is always open to visitors. Anyone, from the richest to the poorest, is welcome. Whether he believes with Mr. Debs politically makes no difference. Many a celebrity, coming to Terre Haute to address a meeting, give a recital or art exhibit, turns down invitations and slips off to this grey house for a chat with this determined and yet mild mannered man.

ENTER THE EXPERT

A GOOD story was told recently by Sir John Lavery, the famous painter, several of whose paintings are now in Canada, concerning an old Scottish gardener in the employ of a friend of his, who went one day to an exhibition of pictures in London.

Amongst them was one labelled "The Fall."

The gardener surveyed this so intently that his employer was moved to ask him his opinion of it.

"I think no great things of it,' was he reply "Why, sir, Eve is tempting Adam wi' an apple of a variety that wasna known until aboot twenty years ago."

BY THEIR FRUITS—

THIS story comes from the Hon. Horace Wood-house, brother-in-law of Lady Terrington, M.P. During the war he was at the ministry of food, in charge of the department controlling bacon and dried fruits. Two of his assistants were woman of very uncertain age. One day a dealer came in and asked them: "Are you bacon and lard?" "No," replied the elder; "we're dried fruits."

Explanatory

HE: What do you do when you're kissed?

She: I yell.

"Well, will you yell if I kiss you?"

"W-well, I'm still hoarse from last night!"

Georgie: No'm, but I just love coming home.

Canada's Beautiful 'Chicken Salad Girl' Now on Her Way to Conquer Gay Paree

Dorothy Rainer, One of the World's Most Successful Models—Her Greatest Ambition is to Manage a Typical Canadian Household

THE Chicken Salad Girl has gone to Gay Paree! The comely young woman with the flashing dental display who discovered the secret of buoyant health in a well-known yeast cake and who demonstrated to the magazine-reading millions how to reduce and acquire those slender, girlish lines, has sailed for the capital of France. Miss Dorothy Rainer, prize Canadian beauty, will leave the advertising pages of America's leading periodicals for a time, at least, to gladden the eyes of opulent Parisians in the wondrous sartorial creations of Jean Patou. It is a case of "what is America's loss is France's gain."

Miss Rainer is one of the six young ladies whose pulchritude attracted the discriminating gaze of the great French dress designer, commonly known as "the Beau Brummel of Europe," during his recent pilgrimage to New York city in search of mannequins. Out of some four hundred lovely contestants, Monsieu Patou selected Miss Rainer as best depicting the slender type of young womanhood so popular to-day, and with her five companions, representing other variations of the modern Venus, she is now in Paris under contract to pose for one year in Patou gowns and frocks. In return for her services as model extraordinary, Miss Rainer is receiving very handsome remuneration, quite sufficient to induce her to leave lucrative employment in New York city.

Miss Rainer is a product of St Thomas, Ontario, a pretty flower from the Flower City. She was born and educated there, and probably would be living there yet had it not been for an observant motion picture director in Miami, Florida, about five years ago. Just out of high school, Miss Rainer was wintering in the southern city with her sister. One day, while strolling along a street, she passed the director. He was attracted by her beauty and deferentially stopped her and asked her if she would not care to try out as a motion picture actress. Miss Rainer did what nine out of every ten girls would do if offered such a golden opportunity—she accepted it promptly, and the photographic tests that followed showed that she possessed a face that screened extremely well. She took parts in three or four productions, and then the film company went broke. With the other members, Miss Rainer was called into the business office and informed of the hopeless condition of affairs. There would be no more pictures made, but the company was prepared to provide every actor and actress with a railroad ticket to whatever destination he or she chose. Miss Rainer chose New York city, determined to try her fortune in the great metropolis.

Lady Luck was Waiting

AGAIN the goddess of good luck smiled on the young Canadian. Even the blase New Yorkers were impressed by her good looks. She didn't have to walk the streets vainly hunting work. No! Miss Rainer's advent in New York was quite unlike that of the beautiful heroine in any one of Flippant Stories' tales. Her services were in demand at the commercial art studios almost from the outset, and it was not long until she was adorning the pages of numerous magazines. She is the young lady with the teacup poised in one hand and a menu in the other who sits at a restaurant table and puzzles over what to order in place of chicken salad, in an advertisement for a book on etiquet. It was this advertisement that won for Miss Rainer the appellative, "The Chicken Salad Girl."

Perhaps on another page of the same magazine you may have seen her leaving a business office, a dejected expression on her face. In that she is portrayed as a stenographer who has just discovered that she is a victim of that awful-sounding affliction, "halitosis." In that role she helped to advertise a disinfectant. Or maybe she appeared in an illustration in the reading section of that magazine, as one of the characters in a work of fiction, for, in addition to posing in commercial art studios, Miss Rainer has been retained as a model by many famous artists, including the celebrated Dean Cornwall, who also is a Canadian by birth. At other times she has done fashion-plate work, wearing a multitude of garments from the costliest lingerie to the most expensive furs and smiling forth invitingly from the pages of mail order catalogs and the style sections of the Sunday newspapers.

Miss Rainer's beauty is of a rather unusual type. She might be described as a "subdued blonde." There is nothing fluffy or frothy about her, nothing that would make one associate the vision of her with peroxide. She could never successfully pose as a saucy flapper. She hasn't even bobbed her hair. She is just a nice, well-behaved girl, genteel in her speech and manners at all times and quite unaffected by her success. Meeting Miss Rainer one gets an entirely revised opinion of models, the antithesis of the conception entertained by so many well-meaning but often badly misinformed persons. Her ambition in life is not to become a great actress or the leading mannequin in Paris. Some day she hopes to marry a good man and be a good wife to him, maintaining a good home, a home modeled after a good Canadian home in St. Thomas in which she was reared. First, last and always, Miss Rainer is a Canadian and proud of it.

THE MARQUIS CURZON recalled recently the most disconcerting retort to which he—or probably any other—political candidate has ever been exposed.

It was in the days when he was contesting Southport as a Unionist in Britain.

In the course of his speech he commented on the ease with which it was possible to be misunderstood, and stated that on one occasion, as a small boy, he could recollect having been caned for telling the absolute truth.

"Well, my goodness, it cured you!" came the emphatic comment from an opponent at the back of the hall.

PINT-SIZE PRAIRIE LASS HOLDS WORLD'S RECORD

THE youngest telegraph operator on the American continent, and perhaps in the world, is Dorothy Sherris, eight years old, who lives in the town of Little Prairie, about 300 miles from Edmonton.

Her father, who used to be a telegrapher, taught her to use the key and to read the dots and dashes as they came over the wire. One day when her father was away she earned the right to be classed as a professional operator. Neighbors dashed into the station, highly excited, and wanted to send a message to Peace River, the nearest town of any size, for the police. A murder had been committed.

Dorothy, then not quite eight years old, sent the message. To-day, over 400 miles of shining copper wire from Edmonton to Grand Prairie, telegraphers know the signature of Dot Sherris.

THE only daughter of the late Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Ensign Miller, is fond of relating the story of a certain deaf old lady who one day came to the church near her father's place in Sutherlandshire.

Owing to her infirmity, she attended the service armed with an ear-trumpet. The elders had never seen one before and viewed the strange instrument with considerable suspicion and not a little uneasiness.

After a lengthy consultation one of them went up to the old lady and, wagging his finger at her, whispered warningly:

"One toot and ye're oot!"

BUCHAN A PLAGIARIST? YES, AND OF COURSE NOT

POETS may not be rare, but good ones certainly are. The same is true of poetesses.

That is one reason why it is a great pleasure to introduce Miss Anne Elizabeth Wilson, whose verse has been appearing in leading Canadian and American publications for several years and who has published a slender and artistic volume, "Eager Footsteps."
